Secret Society Staged Coup

By JOE ALEX MORRIS

ATHENS (LAT) — "Apply Prometheus." This was the signal which launched Greece's military coup nine days ago.

The whole story has yet to be told. But this much can be said:

An incredibly small number of middle-rank officers belonging to a secret society staged the coup. They were able to do so because:

● Virtually every high-ranking offficer in the Greek military was in Athens for a conference.

● King Constantine, his senior generals and leading right-wing politicians were so afraid of a leftist triumph — either in the streets or at the polls in the upcoming election — that they drew up a contingency plan for a military take-over.

This was Prometheus. Information is now available that the plan was drawn up in detail several months ago. Orders were sent out in sealed envelopes to every operational unit in the country, to be opened only when the words "Apply Prometheus" were flashed to them.

Artillery Col. Nicolas Bakarezos, one of the five or six officers who formed the nucleus of the military take-over, Saturday confirmed the existence of Prometheus. Contrary to established evidence, Bakarezos insisted that the then chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Grigorios Spantidakis, was in on the plot.

Spantidakis learned of the plot only minutes before it was put into operation.

The conspiracy was believed the work of a secret officers society known as EENA, which in Greek stands for Union of Young Greek Officers. The organization was

People Hail King

New Greek State Will Be Created

ATHENS (AP) — King Constantine went to midnight Mass with thousands of his subjects this Orthodox Easter Sunday and was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

It was his first public appearance since the Greek army seized power April 21.

The interior minister of the ruling army junta, Brigadier Stylianos Patacos, announced Saturday his regime plans to create "a new Greek state under a revised constitution." But he did not say how the constitution would be changed or whether it would restore freedoms lost in the April 21 coup.

HEARTY OVATION

Members of the armed forces and crowds lined the route from the royal palace to the Athens Cathedral as the 26-year-old king, wearing an air marshal's uniform, drove to Mass. The crowd applauded warmly as the king went by.

Alighting near the cathedral, he received an enthusiastic ovation from thousands in the square. He walked briskly to a wooden platform in front of the cathedral and nodded to Premier Constantine Kollias and other members of the army-installed government. When the clock struck midnight, bells pealed across the city and the service began.

SOON TO GO

In a statement to newsmen Saturday, Patacos had discussed aims of the military regime and promised that martial law restrictions now in force will "not last long."

Another minister promised the regime would not establish concentration camps for the 5,000 or more persons now in detention.

NO BLOOD

Paul Totomis, minister of public order, said "it is our wish that all Greek citizens should be released and returned to their families as soon as possible."

Patacos was one of the three officers who planned and led the swift and bloodless coup. The others are Col. Nicholas Makarezos, minister of economic co-ordination, and Col. George Papadopoulos, minister to the premier. They still are considered the power behind the government of Premier Constantine Kollias.

EASTER EVE

The Patacos' statement came as Greece's 8,500,000 people celebrated the Orthodox Easter Eve holiday. Crowds filled the streets of Athens and other cities buying Easter eggs and lamb, traditional Easter fare. Thousands of others took holiday boat trips to Greece's many islands.

There was virtually no visible evidence of the army takeover that took place only eight days ago.

In his statement Patacos said

Argentine Crowned

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) —A dark-haired model from Buenos Aires was chosen Miss International Beauty Saturday night. Miss Argentina, Mirta Teresita Massa, 19, was selected for the $10,000 first-place prize. First runner-up was Miss Israel, Yaffa Shar-rir, 21; second runner-up was the American entry, Pamela Elfast, 19.

Hanoi Base Hit

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs from Thailand bases attacked a Communist MiG fighter base west of Hanoi on Saturday, the U.S. Command announced today.

The Air Force jets hit the Hoa Lac airfield, a major base for the North Vietnamese MiGs about 20 miles west of Hanoi.

U.S. Air Force and Navy jets made the first raids of the war on MiG bases in North Vietnam on Monday with attacks on Hoa Lac and the Kep airbase, 37 miles northeast of Hanoi.

DOGFIGHTS

In another raid Saturday, other F105 Thunderchiefs fought off 10 MiG17s in several engagements during an attack on the Hanoi railroad highway bridge four miles northeast of the North Vietnamese capital.

In the attack on Hoa Lac airfield, pilots reported their bombs were on target, but there was no immediate damage assessment.

BRIDGE HIT

The railroad highway bridge, which serves as the only railway line extending north from Hanoi into China, was hit for the first time Wednesday.

The U.S. Command said that in Saturday's attack, the five-span steel and concrete structure was damaged by 3,000-and 750-pound bombs.

AIR WAR HOT

Both the U.S. Command and the North Vietnamese have intensified the air war over the North in the past two weeks.

The initial decision to attack the MiG bases April 24 was made in Washington.

Secretary of Defence Robert S. McNamara said stepped - up air action by the MiGs led to the decision.

He noted that MiGs have been much more active in the last three weeks.

SUNDAY RAID

Over the South, B52 bombers made a morning raid Sunday on a suspected Communist support and storage area 25 miles southwest of coastal Tam Ky, about 350 miles northeast of Saigon.

Radio Hanoi said that U.S. fighter - bombers returned Saturday to the area of North Vietnam's capital. The station reported, without confirmation in Saigon, that three American planes were shot down.

Ground action was reported light.

Six Americans were killed and 20 wounded in six scattered ground actions over South Vietnam.

Five Vessels Safe in Port Russians Lost

HALIFAX (CP) — A spokesman for the Air-Sea Rescue Centre here said Saturday that five vessels reported in trouble along the Atlantic coast were out of danger and safe in port.

The vessels radioed for assistance after a storm churned up high seas off Nova Scotia's rocky coast.

Five people who were missing in the storm were found Saturday and reported in good condition.

TAKEN ASHORE

The 35-foot fishing vessel Lena G., missing in the Bay of Fundy with four persons aboard, was taken ashore safely at Victoria Beach.

Albert Hook, 26, was found on a tiny island in nearby St. Margaret's Bay. He had been missing since he left Macdonald's Point Friday in a small canoe for a nearby post office, but was discovered by RCMP searching the bay.

A spokesman for Foundation Maritime said the company was unable to resume operations to save the 4,100-ton freighter Costa Rican Trader because of heavy seas.

High winds and heavy seas drove the freighter aground stern-first on rocks near the approaches to Halifax harbor Friday.

The freighter's 26-man crew walked to safety along a gangplank several hours after she went aground.

Fighting Racks China

LONDON (AP)—Fierce fighting for control of China is raging through the nation, according to a report Saturday night from Moscow radio.

In a dispatch from Peking, monitored in London, the radio said the Chinese capital was in chaos with more and more Red Guards flooding into the city.

Supporters of party Chairman Mao Tse-tung are in control in four provinces — Shantung, Shansi, Kweichow and Heilungking — and two cities — Peking and Shanghai, the report said.

ARMY RULES

Army units ruled in most other regions, but were meeting resistance, said Moscow radio.

Radio Moscow added, "the Red Guard press reports an acute deterioration in the situation in Shantung Province, in the cities of Chungking and Chengtu and in Chengchow, and in Inner Mongolia where troops are suppressing the Red Guards and rebels.

Fast Time A Puzzle? Solve It!

Barbershop clock with reverse face seems to have newsstand proprietor Ted Matthews puzzled about adjustment for Daylight Saving Time. All clocks, including this one designed so chair-bound customers can see correct time in barber's mirror, were to have been moved ahead one hour to 3 a.m., at 2 a.m. today, and remain that way until Oct. 29. If you didn't do it last night, do it now!—(Jim Ryan)

Late Blizzard Paralyzes South Alberta

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — One person has died, traffic was paralyzed and livestock was in difficulty today as a result of a snowstorm that dumped more than three feet of snow in southern Alberta during the past two days.

All air traffic was cancelled and many people were stranded on the highways. Railway lines managed to continue operation with only minor delays.

The 18th Field Regiment of the Canadian Artillery Militia has been ordered to help the snowbound city of Lethbridge dig out from under the more than 36 inches of snow.

A helicopter has been sent from the Number One Helicopter Platoon at Namao, near Edmonton, to Claresholm, Alta., to fly grain and feed to cattle stranded by the blizzard across southern Alberta.

Sixty-five-year-old John Obbagy of Lethbridge was found dead Saturday in a snowbank in front of his home. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack while shovelling snow.

MANY STRANDED

About 30 persons were stranded at the Pincher Creek Airport Friday night and another 45 men, working at a new plant near Pincher Creek, were also snowbound. They were staying at motels in the area. A number of persons had been stranded in cars but were rescued by RCMP who used a commandeered CPR railway snowplow.

About 25 persons were stranded in cars about 18 miles south of Lethbridge Friday night but were rescued by highways department crews and the RCMP.

LINES BROKEN

One report said 90 per cent of farms and ranches from Lethbridge to Fort MacLeod were isolated.

Some farm officials said it would be two weeks before farmers would be able to get heavy equipment back onto their saturated fields.

Heavy ice on powerlines broke some main lines between Brooks and Suffield in southern Alberta. Similar conditions resulted in temporary power outages in Medicine Hat.

Rare Malope Seed Offer

A lovely and easy-to-grow flower seldom seen in Victoria gardens—and listed by only one North American seed catalogue—is the third free seed offer this year from Colonist garden columnist M. V. Chesnut.

It's called the malope and known in Europe as the Mallow Marvel. It's dark red, like a hibiscus—and the details are on Page 19.

Zambia Hints At Plot

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda hinted Saturday that a major plot had been mounted against Zambia — black Africa's buffer state with white-ruled southern Africa.

Addressing a meeting of his ruling party's National Council, he said he would disclose details today when he addresses a mass rally.

'DESTROY ZAMBIA'

Referring to the detention without trial of five white men two weeks ago, Kaunda declared: "It is a bigger thing than I originally thought. There are people who are trying to destroy Zambia."

The five, including three Britons, have since been accused by the Zambian government of activities amounting to spying for a foreign power — believed to be neighboring Rhodesia.

The detention orders, issued by Kaunda under his emergency powers, are scheduled to be reviewed by a tribunal within the next two weeks, thought its recommendations can be ignored.

Berserk Farmer Shot Down

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — RCMP fatally shot an apparently berserk farmer early Saturday at Willow Valley, some 57 miles northwest of here.

Five RCMP constables were called to a home at 1 a.m. following a report a man was firing a rifle.

The police said the man refused to come out of the house and fired several shots. The constables tossed tear gas inside, and the man was shot when he bolted out of the door firing the rifle.

The man, identified as Joseph Wrangler, 49, of Willow Valley, was dead on arrival at Dawson Creek hospital.

Expo Hordes to Slash Deficit?

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Staff Writer

MONTREAL — If there's anything of the City of Victoria in the City of Expo, a thorough front-to-back expedition Saturday failed to turn it up.

The girls in the conical, shingled Western Canada Pavilion on the busy, landward side of Canada's brilliantly futuristic complex assured me their staff not only numbers no Victorians but also has no Vancouver Islanders. The only Victorian I found employed elsewhere is a well-known former resident and now a Western Pavilion official, Ron Gadsby.

In fact, there's nothing in the Western Canada centre that would make anyone want to come for anything but the establishment of industry. The emphasis is strictly on resources and each part of the follow-the-arrows path stresses the west rather than an individual province.

B.C. was the only province without a cabinet minister at the Thursday opening, Recreation Minister Kiernan is arriving Friday night for a few days.

But, while Western Canada is a disappointment, the national pavilion and its several surrounding buildings are awesome. Canada is enjoyable, but it's not outright fun — for that, the British have won the prize hands down, with La Ronde (the gayway section) a close second.

Canada shows everything — the arts, business, all people — not so much as they were or are but as they will be. It's all topped by an atimavic atop the main exhibit building, atimavic being Eskimo for meeting place and also being shaped like a square bowl with a rim which provides one of the most spectacular views of this spectacular show.

Britain purely and simply laughs at itself. In a setting surrounded by the best of Expo's islands of modern sculpture, Britain pokes fun at Carnaby Street, Harold Wilson, its literature, Lord Nelson, soccer, British industry, Edward Heath and much more — never offensively, always hilariously:

● A sign as you enter asks: "Are they dignified, stuffed shirts, chivalrous or just shy?"

● A cluster of traffic signs almost obscures a whizzing Grand Prix film.

● A smartly-designed British housing subdivision is labelled, without further comment: "Boxes in boxes in boxes."

● In a film superimposed over an abstract, Prime Minister Wilson is called a chiffchaff bird and Opposition Leader Edward Heath a whistling warbler.

● And Carnaby is labelled "Brave New World (where) there are more boys than girls and they look more alike every day."

But the Canadian viewers just weren't laughing and, when I asked the mini-skirted English guide what now, she smiled sort of sadly and said, "Well, we can't put a sign outside saying laugh."

Expo itself is such a fantastic success there's already talk that the estimated final deficit of $130,000,000 may be sliced by a happily large amount. First-day attendance, first estimated at 125,000, now is officially reckoned at more than 300,000 due primarily

No Catholic Discrimination, Pope to See Sophia, Claudia

By ALAN McELWAIN
London Sunday Times

VATICAN CITY—Under a "no discrimination on any account whatever" order by Pope Paul, prominent theatrical personalities on whose private lives the Roman Catholic Church has often publicly frowned have been invited to an unprecedented audience with him next Saturday.

Those invited include actress Sophia Loren and her husband, producer Carlo Ponti, whose 1957 Mexican proxy marriage — declared invalid only this week—has kept a bigamy charge hanging over their heads for 10 years in divorceless Italy. Also invited is film star Claudia Cardinale, an unmarried mother who, outside Italy, recently married a man not the father of her child and still married to his previous wife according to Italian law.

Miss Cardinale said Saturday "I am both excited and proud to have been invited and will certainly be there," adding that she was going to wear a short black dress and black veil.

'Whistle Blown' On Car Insurance

BILL THOMAS' NOTEBOOK

Sunday

PAY NOW — CRY LATER: If you have ever had a car accident and believe that your insurance company, its agent, and the adjuster were working in your best interests then you have been had for a bucker.

A Vancouver insurance adjuster, David A. Randall, has published a book that is as damaging an expose of B.C. car insurance practices as Ralph Nader's book Unsafe at any Speed, was to the car manufacturers.

The book Dollars on the Highway really blows the whistle on the sneaky tricks your insurance company is ready to pull on you.

SAYS WHO?: Before the insurance men swallow their pipes its worth mentioning that lawyer H. A. D. Oliver says in his introduction to the book: "The author captures within this volume a realistic view of the difficulties that beset the person who suffers injury and financial loss as a result of a highway accident, and offers them some sound advice."

Most motorists who have suffered even a fender-bender know that you usually get three estimates and then the insurance company sends you to the cheapest one. You don't have to take the cheapest job! Mr. Randall says, "start getting used to the idea ... that it is your car."

He also says you don't have to wait while the company fiddles about making up its mind.

The owner can get his car fixed when and where he chooses. Mr. Randall says "It has been held by the Courts that an insured is not required to deprive himself of transportation following an accident until such time as his insurance company has inspected the car and given its consent to the repairs."

To this you may reply that the adjuster told you what you could or could not do. Well, Mr. Randall says quite the reverse.

"Be quite clear in your mind that no insurance adjuster, appraiser, or representative of an insurance company has the right to dictate to you the place at which you have your automobile repaired or the cost."

All you have to show is that the price of the repairs was reasonable.

If you tell the insurance company on the application form that you do not use the car for business and then have an accident while on business do they still have to pay?

You bet your life they do and all they can get after the car owner for is the difference between the pleasure premium and the business use premium.

GLASS HOUSES: If you try to collect for a falling rock accident after the boulder goes through your windshield then look out.

Despite Mr. Gaglardi's warning signs some adjusters try to tell the claimants that the pebbles bounced off the ground and suggest that a wary motorist could have avoided this "collision."

What happens if a motorist gets into an accident and is found to be impaired by a Criminal Court? The insurance company still has to pay.

No matter what you may be told to the contrary, impairment in a Criminal Court and impairment in a Civil Court are two quite different things.

Mr. Randall puts it quite precisely. "Sober people also have accidents, and conversely, people who have been drinking can often drive very capably indeed."

Did you know that some companies will even share all the information you have given them on an accident report form to the opposition? They do, despite the fact that they tell their policy holder the information is confidential.

QUICK DOCTOR: If you are injured see your own doctor, get a lawyer and say nothing to the opposition's adjuster.

David Randall warns "People who are injured and who give an adjuster authority to obtain a medical report from their doctor, do so at their peril."

After his own years of experience as an adjuster David Randall is pretty suspicious of them as a bunch.

He is even more suspicious of investigators who, he says, use all manner of sneaky tricks to get into homes and observe claimants. "They sometimes offer to perform menial tasks in the home; washing walls, vacuuming rugs, detergent demonstrations, etc., for a rate of pay less than one would normally expect to be charged."

The wailing of the car insurance companies about their poor business profits and their anguished screams about customer service must seem sickening to anyone who has read Dollars on the Highway.

It's a great book that should be read by all drivers and then read again twice a year. It could save drivers a great deal of money and a lot of worry. Get a copy as soon as the store opens. Better still get two and see that your insurance agent reads a copy.

Your Good Health

Dryness Can Irritate Sinuses

By JOSEPH MOLNER, MD

Dear Dr. Molner: Your column has been very helpful to me. Now may I share a suggestion?

I noticed that my sinus problems were greatest when I was spending a great deal of time driving. I finally noted the heater and fan were operating with the windows all tightly closed.

The excess air had no place to go so it became compressed and irritated the sinuses. Does this make sense? Since then I have always made sure that a vent is open and I have had no more sinus problems.—MRS. C.C.

Thank you for your helpful suggestion but I strongly suspect that the reason for this success is a bit different. I cannot agree that air in the car could become compressed to a degree that would make any difference.

However, hot, dry air, forced by the fan, can create a dryness of the nasal membranes that can be decidedly irritating. Thus keeping a vent open can make a world of difference, as it did in your case, I am sure others will benefit.

There are other reasons, sometimes more urgent, for seeing that a cowl or other vent is open, or the windows rolled down a bit. It is a safeguard against the leaky exhaust which can fill a car with a dangerous amount of carbon monoxide before you know it.

It also prevents icing of windows and windshield, or fogging which can occur in humid weather.

And while I'm on the subject of safety — how about your seat belt? Do you use it every time you drive?

Dear Dr. Molner: I am 76, broke my hip six years ago, and always carry a cane. Which side should I carry it on? I now carry it on the left, although it was the right hip that was broken. — MISS A.G.

I gather that someone is trying to tell you that there's right side and wrong side. Well there isn't. Carry the cane on the side that gives you the most support and sense of security and balance formed about 10 years ago, according to this information, and it was strongly influenced by Gamal Abdel Nasser's colonels' revolt in Egypt.

Few Young Officers in Secret Society Acted

EENA was described as right-wing in politics and devotedly nationalist in outlook. It is vigorously anti-Communist, but decidedly less devoted to the royal establishment than other right-wing secret society called IDEA, which was founded in 1943.

This would account for reports that the king's fate was in the balance in the early days of this revolution. It would also appear to be confirmed by the fact that no officers belonging to IDEA had been appointed to high places in the new regime with the possible exception of Gen. Spantidakis.

Col. Makarezios, who now occupies the most important cabinet job in the country, minister of co-ordination, said for the record that he never heard of EENA. He also said for the record that "the whole army" was behind the coup and no small group of officers could be singled out as the leaders. He said the king was not informed of the plot because the officers did not want to involve him in a violation of the constitution.

Nevertheless, it is known that only five or six men were privy to the plot in all its ramifications, including Makarezios, Col. George Papadopoulos, who is now minister to the prime minister, and Brig. Gen. Stylianos Patakos.

The military take-over itself went with astonishing smoothness. Military sources here said only two infantry battalions and some 40 tanks from the nearby armored training centre were needed to invest the capital. Around the country, even fewer troops were deployed and aside from a few school-boy demonstrations there was no resistance anywhere to the military junta.

All are said to be fanatically dedicated men who look with contempt on Greece's politicians and the "economic oligarchy" and are determined to rout out corruption and bring the nation back to what they suppose to be its eternal values.

For the present, they are strongly committed to NATO and the western alliance. They are reportedly shocked at the critical reception their "purifying" take-over has met with in the press and the governments of their NATO allies.

Five Vessels Safe in Port arrived in port Saturday with the 75-foot freighter Flojold II, which requested aid Friday night near Betty's Island in St. Margaret's Bay.

The scallop dragger Catherine M. reported she had sprung a leak 40 miles south of Cape Sable, but said all pumps were working and she was not taking water. The fisheries department vessel E. E. Prince was standing by her.

The Coast Guard vessel 101 was reported guiding the 60-foot Joe Book to shore at Clark's Harbor, N.S. The vessel had earlier reported all her navigational aids out of commission.

Two unidentified vessels were standing by the 61-ton fishing vessel Donna Rae. The vessel radioed she had taken a bad pounding near Brown's Banks, about 200 miles off the southern tip of Nova Scotia.

The U.S. Coast Guard reported Saturday a distress call from the Soviet vessel Kaspijsk about 130 miles east of Cape Cod.

The vessel reported two men were washed overboard late Friday and asked for a Coast Guard plane to conduct an air search for them.

The six-man crew of the 94-foot lobster boat Deep Water, out of New Bedford, was missing after the vessel vanished about 100 miles south of Marthas Vineyard Island Friday.

The fishing vessel Elizabeth N., out of New Bedford with a crew of six, was reported missing Saturday. A spokesman for the New Bedford Seafood Producers Association said it was last seen Thursday noon off Nantucket Island.

New Greek State

the primary aim of the army regime would be "creation of a new Greek state based on a rewritten constitution covering all modern demands."

He did not elaborate, but listed these other aims:

- Careful examination and quick development of the country's productive resources;
- An attack on illiteracy;
- Education of our youth through "real, free education;"
- Development of tourism;
- Restoration and maintenance of close relations with all Greeks abroad;
- Support for the merchant marine, third largest in the world;
- Encouragement of increased foreign capital investment in the country;
- A just distribution of income.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — U.N. Secretary-General U Thant appealed to Greece's new army-controlled government Saturday to follow "the usual judicial processes" of democratic countries in dealing with detained political leaders.

He acted in response to a joint request of all Communist delegations to the United Nations and a personal message from Polish Foreign Minister Adam Rapacki.

Here are the facts about the first increase in basic wholesale gasoline prices in 10 years

The fact is that today's basic wholesale price of B-A gasoline at 19.5c per gallon is 2.2c per gallon below the price of ten years ago.

During that period our wage level has risen 56%.

Only continuing improvements in operating efficiency have enabled us to maintain our lower prices. This is no longer possible in the light of rising wages, salaries, taxes, and overall production costs.

During that time, as well, the quality of B-A fuels has been greatly increased through the results of our continuing research.

For these reasons the basic wholesale price of B-A 88 and 98 gasolines and diesel fuel has been increased 1c per gallon . . . the first increase in ten years.

Retail prices are set by the dealers.

Russian Police Ride Down Church Rioters

MOSCOW (UPI) — Hundreds of policemen, including a dozen on horseback, Saturday night drove back a mob of about 5,000 youths who attempted to disrupt Russian Easter services at Yelokhovsky cathedral here.

Mounted policemen charged into the cursing mob full tilt, then swung around to push the teenagers, some carrying guitars, with the heavy flanks of their horses.

Scores of youths and even some old women trying to get inside the church went sprawling. Several persons were taken away by waiting ambulances.

HOOTING MOB

The mob hooted, screamed and whistled from behind police lines as bells chimed in the most solemn religious holiday of the year in the Soviet Union.

The Easter service, attended mostly by dwindling numbers of elderly Russian faithful, began at sundown. One hour before midnight, the street outside the cathedral filled with youths, some of them drunk.

Boys and girls did the twist in circles formed by their hand-clapping friends to the twang of the strumming guitars.

SHARP CONTRAST

At midnight, the mob started marching around the church and police got tough — a sharp contrast to last year's Easter service when police just looked on as teenagers jeered the priests and spat on worshippers.

Police lines broke at two points and crowd surged to the cathedral's fence but both times police horses rammed into the crowd and sent it reeling back.

The scene outside the cathedral, Moscow's central Russian Orthodox church, has become an annual, ugly tradition here.

This year the only persons let through police lines were worshippers and members of the foreign community, who were allowed into the church.

DOUBLE HOLIDAY

The Orthodox Easter his year came nearly a month after the holiday had been celebrated in Roman Catholic and Protestant churches here.

The Easter holiday came just before the national May Day holiday Monday. Soviet workers, with three days off, prepared to celebrate the double holiday with feasts, parties — or with a bottle of vodka.

Hess

Now Lone War Prisoner

'Not Mentally Ill'—Hess

BERLIN (AP) — Rudolf Hess, former deputy to Adolf Hitler and the last remaining prisoner in West Berlin's big Spandau war crimes prison, claims that he is mentally and physically sound.

"He said that except for some stomach troubles he has had over the years, he is totally healthy," Alfred Seidl, lawyer for the onetime Nazi leader, told reporters Friday after a half-hour visit with Hess.

It was the fourth visit by Seidl since Hess was sentenced in 1946 to life in prison by the Nuernberg war crimes tribunal.

Hess, 73 three days ago, often has been reported suffering from mental illness.

"He asked me specifically to counter any newspaper or press reports that he is mentally sick," Seidl said.

"From the four meetings with him (the first after Nuernberg was in November, 1964), I could not determine the slightest criterion to prove that he was not mentally healthy.

'LOOKED GOOD'

"He looked good and his face had good color."

Seidl said he spent most of the last visit telling Hess about a debate in the British House of Lords Feb. 9.

The debate concerned Hess, and Lord Chalfont, British disarmament minister, stressed his government's view that Hess should be freed on humane grounds.

The United States and France also have indicated they would be willing to see him released. Only the Russians have refused.

The Western allies have proposed cutting down the prison area that houses Hess to reduce the cost of keeping just one man in a prison built to hold 600. The Russians have agreed to this in principle. The West German government bears the cost of running Spandau, about $100,000, a year as war reparations.

Since Spandau is under four-power control it would take unanimous agreement by the wartime Allies to release Hess.

WON'T SEE FAMILY

There was no indication, Seidl said, that Hess had changed his decision against having his family visit him while he is still in prison.

Hess has not seen his wife or son since he took off in a Messenschmidt fighter plane and parachuted into Britain in May, 1941, claiming he wanted to tell the British to make peace with Nazi Germany.

TWO RELEASED

Hess, taken into custody by Britain, was later sentenced at Nuernberg for plotting against the peace and for planning, inciting and carrying out aggressive war.

At midnight Sept. 30 of last year, Albert Speer, former German war productions minister, and Baldur von Schirach, ex-Hitler youth leader, were freed from Spandau, leaving Hess the last of seven Nazis in the red brick prison.

Icelandic Sea Chase Nets British Boat

REYKJAVIK, Iceland (UPI)—An Icelandic coast-guard cutter was escorting the British trawler Brandur to port Saturday night after perhaps one of the most audacious sea escapades in years.

The cutter Odinn caught up with the 760-ton Grimsby-based fishing vessel after the captain and crew "kidnapped" two police guards and made a dash for the safety of British shores.

The trawler was being held here for allegedly fishing in Icelandic territorial waters.

NET SNAGGED

The incident started Monday when a gunboat caught the British vessel inside coastal waters hauling in the nets.

The Brandur's skipper "Bunny" Newton claimed the net had snagged what he thought was a mine, and his ship had drifted inside the limit. The gunboat's skipper thought differently.

The Brandur was escorted to dockside here and Newton summoned to appear in court the following day.

Six days and several court appearances later, the question still hadn't been solved. The case was adjoined until next Tuesday.

In the early hours Saturday morning, Newton slipped anchor in a dash for the safety of international waters. But he still had two police guards aboard.

SENT SPOTTER PLANES

The vessel's disappearance apparently wasn't noticed for five hours and then the search began.

Spotter planes were dispatched to make a sweep of the ocean and the cutter Odinn was ordered to keep a lookout for the British trawler.

At noon Saturday, the search was over. The Brandur was spotted about 43 miles west of Iceland.

Minutes later came the radio flash from the Odinn: "Brandur caught. Armed men put aboard her."

The defiant skipper's first order had been to paint out the vessel's identification. When the Icelandic cutter reached her, she bore the registration number H-52. It had been GY111.

SKIPPER ARRESTED

Newton and his mate were taken into custody aboard the Odinn and three crew members of the cutter were ordered to take the trawler to port.

The two policemen — who had been locked in the skipper's cabin — reported they were unharmed.

In London, the trawler's owners said they would press the government to ask why the ship had been forcibly apprehended in international waters.

Communists Use U.S. Students To Stage Madrid Flag-Burning

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A flag-burning exercise against the U.S. role in Vietnam at the University of Madrid demonstrates a deep Communist penetration of Spain's student movement, Spanish officials said Saturday.

They blamed a handful of the 1,200 Americans enrolled in the university for sparking the demonstration Friday, but they added the hard-core Communists—some Spanish, some Latin Americans — used the Americans, some of whom had been circulating petitions on the campus against the war in Vietnam.

"The hard-core group, including the pro-Peking Communist student organization, was happy to hide behind the American students who started the anti-war petitions," one official said.

"Many activities carried out under a claimed quest for student freedom are actually directed by the Communist core among university students."

The officials expressed the belief that fewer than a score of the Americans studying at the university were actively engaged in either the American students' anti-war campaign or the more organized Spanish Student Committee Against the Vietnam War.

Student sources say there were 1,500 to 2,000 Spanish and Latin-American activists in the leftist student groups, among them the Student Organization for a free Student Union.

READY-MADE PLATFORM

"American student intervention against U.S. policies in Vietnam handed the Spanish and Latin-American leftists at the university a ready-made platform to exploit," said one university official.

"Before it ended in the flag-burning episode Friday, the extent of extremist penetration became evident. The hard-core groups were no longer pretending to campaign for student freedom or a free student organization. The slogans they chanted and painted on banners came right out of the Marxist textbooks."

Johnson Brakes Troop Recall

BONN (AP) — An informed source said Saturday President Johnson decided to make concessions on withdrawing U.S. forces from West Germany after his talks with Chancellor Kurt Georg Kiesinger here this week.

One concession, the informant said, was to leave more nuclear strike planes on German soil than previously had been intended. The precise figure was not disclosed.

The U.S. President authorized his negotiator in London, John J. McCloy, to make the concessions in talks with the British and West Germans. The result, the source added, was the ease with which an agreement was concluded Friday on the stationing and financing of U.S. and British troops in West Germany.

The agreement still has to be submitted next week to the other members of the Atlantic alliance, but with accord among the three major powers concerned, little difficulty is expected.

Under the agreement 20,000 of the 225,000 American ground troops in West Germany are expected to be pulled out under a rotation system. More may be withdrawn later.

Britain is to take out 5,000-6,000 of its 50,000 troops and airmen.

Sedco and After

WITHIN THE NEXT few days one of Victoria's biggest, and certainly most imposing, industrial jobs will be completed. Next weekend the Sedco 135-F semi-submersible oil drilling rig will be commissioned at the Victoria Machinery Depot yard at Ogden Point, ready to go into service in the search for oil and gas off the western shores of Vancouver Island.

The rig, which towers over the Empress Hotel and all other tall buildings of the capital city, is notable because it is the most modern, and, it is hoped, efficient of the various offshore drilling equipments which have been built in leading shipbuilding and engineering yards throughout the world.

Built to the specification of its owners, Southeastern Commonwealth Drilling Ltd. of Texas, it is to be chartered to the Shell Oil Company of Canada for that company's intensive offshore drilling program.

In completing this job—an entirely new type of operation for the yard—Mr. Harold Husband and staff are to be highly congratulated upon their feat of producing the finished article at least a month ahead of schedule.

While inevitably many of the working parts of the rig have been constructed elsewhere, the vast bulk of the components and all the construction work have been done by the band of experts which VMD over the years has welded together into one of the most efficient engineering units in this part of the world.

The fact that VMD can do $8,000,000 jobs of this kind, without apparently turning a hair, should give all Victorians a feeling of pride and satisfaction. Sedco has won for Victoria publicity throughout the world in technical and non-technical journals. It has provided a pleasing new assessment of our city other than the "sleepy old Victoria" soubriquet which once was so prevalent.

As VMD also built the bulk of the famous B.C. Ferry Authority's fleet of passenger-vehicle ships, it can be said that the yard has contributed nobly to the economic advancement of the district in recent years.

Unfortunately when Sedco is towed off to its first assignment in the near future, the order book at VMD will be almost bare. Mr. Husband has been looking around vigorously for other ways in which he can find work for his expert crew, but so far he has had little luck.

High borrowing charges and ever-rising production costs that include not only labor but materials of every sort, have put the Canadian shipbuilding industry into a state of torpor. Even the "low cost" Quebec yards are beginning to feel the pinch of rising costs, particularly at the wages level.

Indeed with Japan now the world's shipbuilder the prospects for Canadian yards are not bright.

An order for another drilling rig for VMD would be a wonderful tonic, but as yet there is no sign that anyone else is as far advanced as Shell to make the big decision to drill off our coast.

The government of B.C. has also shelved its plans for a second ferry for the Kelsey Bay-Prince Rupert run, and hope for important new orders from this direction is dim.

Meantime it would be a great tragedy for Victoria if this talented crew of Mr. Husband's should be left without work, with the threat that it might be forced to disband, thus nullifying the many years of carefully devised training and experience.

A Note of Realism

CANADA'S AMBASSADOR to the United Nations, George Ignatieff, is to be congratulated on his attempt to inject a modicum of common sense into the General Assembly's hitherto unrealistic and fruitless debate on South-West Africa.

His suggestion that the United Nations now seek to establish some kind of rapport with the Republic of South Africa over the matter of the disputed territory is a logical one—though hardly one which will carry the approbation of the more militant African governments.

These governments—those of Ethiopia and Guinea in particular—are adamant in their view that South Africa should not be consulted on any policy decision relating to the future of South-West Africa.

Mr. Ignatieff, on the other hand, believes that the first step toward reaching any settlement would be for a United Nations delegation to meet with the South African government for full and detailed discussions.

Whether or not such a course is praeticable is, of course, not yet known as it has not yet been explored. But regardless of this, Mr. Ignatieff sounded a solid note of realism when he said that it was only sensible to recognize that South Africa still occupies the territory under discussion.

Such simple reasoning may come as a distinct shock to many of the more junior members of the United Nations. But it may help them to withstand the greater one they will eventually receive when they learn that South Africa has no intention of being pushed out of South-West Africa by the UN or anyone else.

Still to the Fore

PEOPLE WHO HAVE read Lord Montgomery's memoirs of his life and military times will be intrigued to learn that the famous field marshal, probably the greatest British general since Wellington and unsurpassed as a field commander in the last war, has written another book.

And, if he followed the practice of his memoirs, it will have been penned every word of it in his own handwriting.

The redoubtable "Monty" is approaching 80 years of age but apparently this hasn't daunted his approach to what must be considered a major task, no less than a 210,000-word book captioned "History of Warfare."

Such a theme is immense but Lord Montgomery was never fazed by the odds against him. And other historians and the whole military realm in addition, likely enough, will be agog to devour the contents. For the field marshal writes as crisply as he directed armies in the field. No doubts or inhibitions assail him.

His judgments of ancient campaigns and their captains should therefore be vivid and sparkling.

It is reported that in his new book he gives only three lines to the Vietnam conflict; perhaps this may be because he feels that in his own heyday he could have wrapped up this campaign without ever disturbing his sleep.

Wind of Change Blowing

The Market Street Mobilization

By DR. ARNOLD TOYNBEE

The eminent British historian, Dr. Arnold Toynbee, was in San Francisco on April 15, when demonstrators marched in New York and San Francisco to protest the war in Vietnam. These are his views of the "Market Street Mobilization" and the position of war critics in the United States today.)

AMONG the dozens of slogans I read on the banners carried by groups in San Francisco, marching in protest against the war in Viet Nam, were "Stop War and Poverty," "Napalm Our Chief Export," "Vietnam for the Vietnamese" and, to my mind most telling of all, "Soldiers of the World Unite."

Besides the slogans there were emblems, the skull and crossbones, the Stars and Stripes carried upside down, the bunches of flowers — these carried by "hippies," for flowers are the hippies' symbols of love.

The procession's goal was the stadium in the southeast corner of Golden Gate Park. The municipal official who gave permission for the stadium to be used is reported to have said that the participants in the march must be Communists because they had offered, unasked, to clear up the litter afterwards, and only Communists would have enough sense of order and discipline to offer that.

The jest was characteristic of the restraint and good humor shown by both the public authorities and the demonstrators, but the husk of the jest perhaps had a tougher kernel than the official realized.

Probably most of the marchers were teenagers, but fewer than half of them, I should judge, were young men of an age to be under menace of being drafted into the U.S. military forces. There were as many girls as boys, and there were very many participants who were either well below or well above the age of compulsory military service. There were whole families — father, mother and three or four children — the oldest child aged, perhaps 10, the youngest riding in its perambulator or on its father's shoulders. I believe that the majority of the marchers were personally disinterested; that the driving force was conscience, not a selfish concern to evade the risk of dying in battle.

The numbers of a crowd are notoriously difficult to estimate. My taxi-driver's estimate — and he was a hostile witness — was something between 60,000 and 100,000. Many bus-loads had come in from far off — not only from all parts of California, but from as far east in the mountain zone as Denver. I was told that every university and college in California was represented.

My taxi-driver muttered that he might not be able to convey us to our destination, for how was he to make his way through that solid marching mob? But when we reached Market Street and the traffic lights, giving access to Fourth Street, turned green for us, the marchers halted till they had the green lights for themselves again, and meanwhile our taxi shot through the parted masses of humanity as the Israelites passed, dry shod, through the Red Sea's two wall-drilled walls of water. I found myself laughing at the memory of a column of Stahlhelm I had seen marching up under Berlin's Unter den Linden in the early 1930s to protest against the Weimar regime. They were performing the Prussian military goose-step, and their expression was ferocious; yet, when they reached a sign saying "Keep Off the Grass" they obediently made left and right inclines and squeezed their passage along the unprohibited roadway on either side of the inviolate strip of lawn.

Their ideology was at the opposite pole to the American marchers' ideology; their temper was different, too; it was earnest and grim, while the American marchers' temper was earnest but humane. The Stahlheim procession had been working up for the Nazi revolution. This year's spring mobilization in San Francisco is working up for who knows what?

All that one can be sure of, so far, in America today is that the wind of change — hardly perceptible two years ago — is now blowing strong, and that history is being made here — the human race's history, not just the American people's, since today America and Russia, between them, hold mankind's destiny in their hands.

The vast difference in aim and attitude between the demonstrators in Market Street, today, and those in Unter den Linden, a generation ago, gives ground for hope. The Germans' docility to authority was undiscriminating, the Americans' was not. How representative is the current protest, among the American people, against the war in Vietnam, and the older and deeper and more far-reaching protest against the so-called "American way of life" which the protest against the war has now brought to a head?

Standing on the sidewalk of Market Street, San Francisco, I was as much interested in the spectators as in the demonstrators. Most of the spectators were sympathizers. I saw only one little knot of seven men, some young, some elderly, carrying a banner with the slogan "Support Our Men in Vietnam."

Most middle-aged disapprovers had either stayed at home, or at any rate kept away from the line of march.

I said to the taxi-driver that it had been lucky for the marchers that it had turned out a fine day. "I wish it had been raining," was his answer. "They don't like water. They don't wash."

So I knew where he stood politically, and I knew that whatever the absolute number of the demonstrators might be — in San Francisco, in New York and all over the world — the pro-Vietnam party in the United States was still a formidable majority.

The taxi was labelled "veteran" but, when I saw the driver full-face as I was paying my fare, I observed that he was too young to be a veteran, even of the Korean War. Undoubtedly, however, this taxi-driver was a member of the establishment, and I had heard already that the trades unionists were among the most uncompromising supporters of the war — not only because they too, like their employers, were making money out of it, but because, like their employers again, they were bona fide conservative-minded.

The latest recruits to a privileged class are often the most fanatical champions of it. And in the United States, as in Britain, the unionists have now at last secured a slice of the capitalist cake — a large slice, but not so large as to have satisfied them so far.

On the other hand, many of the marchers were rebel sons and daughters of organization men who were already so saturated with affluence that their children had become nauseated by it. But for the children of American trade unionists to reach this point will take a longer march than that of the bourgeois-born rebels up Market Street.

Washington Calling

Humanities Battle

By MARQUIS CHILDS

"I MUST study politics and war that my sons may have liberty to study mathematics and philosophy. My sons ought to study mathematics and philosophy, geography, natural history and naval architecture, navigation, commerce and agriculture, in order to give their children a right to study painting, poetry, music, architecture . . ."

Those were the words of that stouthearted U.S. founding father, John Adams, who like all the Adams tribe looked piercingly into the future of the land he loved. They were the keynote of the Report of the Commission on Humanities sponsored by three learned societies and made up of distinguished scholars, educators and public leaders.

The report recommended creation of a foundation supported by the federal government for advancement of the humanities. This was established as the National Endowment for the Humanities. An educator with an outstanding record and a droll sense of humor, Barnaby Keeney, former president of Brown University, was named chairman. At 52, Keeney put aside his career to come to Washington. He is now embattled in a dispute which he finds it difficult to reconcile with the broad objectives laid down by Congress.

It is a dispute that John Adams would have found utterly incomprehensible. Adams was saying that war and politics are not the end of society. He was looking ahead to the time when the infant republic should have to set its course that the third generation would have the opportunity to release the highest creative talents in poetry, the arts, music.

A House committee has just cut the requested $5,000,000 for the humanities to $3,000,000. One reason is economy, the mounting cost of the war in Vietnam. But behind the economy talk is a motive that would baffle John Adams and the other thoughtful, deeply committed men who founded the United States.

It is a suspicion of government itself and, above all, distrust of government in any involvement in the arts or letters. A Republican congressman from the Ozarks, Dr. Durward G. Hall, fastened on one of 69 recent grants by the humanities endowment as, in his expression, an "eye-grabber" to "teach the public how their money is running through the fingers of Congress." The eye-grabber, and Hall would have found another if this had not served his purpose, was a grant to compile a history of comic strips. Lest this not be eye-grabbing enough in itself, Hall announced that the art teacher at the University of California, David W. Kunzle, was not an American citizen. And to cap it all, Kunzle had criticized the United States' conduct of the war.

Those laboring to make a modest start at furthering the humanities with a small amount of federal patronage see this as yahooism. It reflects a primitive conviction that the arts and letters are themselves suspect, a kind of sissified diversion that may be all right for women's clubs. And John Adams, the scholar-patriot, would have found this most difficult of all to comprehend.

Both the humanities endowment and a similar endowment for the arts, headed by Roger Stevens, are patterned after the National Science Foundation. Even for the most suspicious congressman science is respectable. That is one reason for the imbalance with scientific research getting fantastic sums out of government while the few millions doled out to the arts and humanities are given the cold treatment. Out of the astronomical defence budget of $71 billion, perhaps as much as $7 billion goes for research. With the research of other departments and NASA added the total would be well over $10 billion.

In making their case, proponents of the humanities point out what other Western nations—Canada, France, Britain—are doing. With about one-tenth of the population and less than 10 per cent of the United States' gross national product, Canada is spending this year through the Canada Council $5,600,000 for the humanities and in the following fiscal year will spend more than $10,000,000.

The budget of the French national government is about $25,000,000 to support the humanities. Pride in the ancient tradition of French culture is a source of pride in a France revivified since the debacle of 1940. One of France's most noted men of letters, Andre Malraux, is minister for cultural affairs. The face-lifting he has carried out for the museums and historic buildings of Paris puts a large plus in the cultural ledger and is a dollar-and-cents asset for tourism. Britain may be pinched in the effort to rescue the pound but the government is putting up to 12 times into the humanities what the U.S. government proposes to spend.

The struggle in Congress is not ended, since there are stout advocates of the humanities program. But in the light of America's affluence, the battlefield is incredibly narrow.

First World War:

Fifty years ago today—In 1917—the British lines between Mochy-le-Preux and Vimy were counter-attacked; an unidentified aircraft bombed Zierikzee in neutral Holland; British units defeated 13th Turkish Army Corps at Shatt-el-Adhaim, Mesopotamia.

Second World War:

Twenty-five years ago today—In 1942—Hitler and Mussolini ended a two-day meeting at Salzburg; Admiral Harold R. Stark took command of U.S. naval forces in European waters; RAF Hurricanes carrying bombs damaged a German destroyer off Britanny.

Our Readers' Views

To be considered for publication in whole or in part, letters must be on subjects of general interest and if signed with pen-name, must be accompanied by writer's name and address. Preference will be given to those that are brief.

IN a notice in the paper recently, Dr. Charles Gregory, a Victoria psychiatrist, stated that PTA groups had utterly failed to establish communications between teachers and parents.

First, we would like to know — is Dr. Gregory a member of the PTA and does he go to meetings? We find most of the people who denounce PTA either have never attended a meeting, or have been to one or two meetings and judged the whole organization by a poor meeting. The PTA is not afraid to discuss anything worthwhile, and if Dr. Gregory took the time to read of our accomplishments he would realize this.

A local PTA would accomplish nothing by "hurting the teachers' feelings," as he put it. But he must realize that we are in the school because the principal allows us to be there. If the teachers, school boards and the department of education would acknowledge the things we do and have done, we might have a better public image.

Has Dr. Gregory read the brief we presented to the Chant Commission? The brief we presented on mental health services? Does he know our national centennial project is to promote childrens' reading and to help the Indian children? (Victoria has adopted an Indian school.) Does he know how hard we worked for the forensic clinic now being started in Burnaby? Has he read the tabulation of answers from the questionnaire on elementary schools done by the education research committee of the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation?

I'll bet he hasn't. Sure, our communications are poor. We're the first to admit it, but this is not peculiar to our group alone. We can't MAKE parents take an interest in education. We try to inform them and the public to the best of our ability. If people don't like the way PTA is working, let them come out to the meetings and say so — and let their names stand for the executive.

Strong Leader

I should like to commend you on your very fair and unbiased editorial "Castor Oil Treatment."

I feel that Mr. Wilson will go down in British history as one of the most brilliant and steadfast prime ministers since Disraeli. When he came to power he found the finances of the country in chaos after 11 years of Tory administrations with steadily mounting trade deficits.

He has had the strength to go against the wishes of his own supporters — the trades unions — in fixing wages and prices and it is little wonder that the council elections would go against him. He has fought to maintain the stability of the pound and the pound recently hit its highest level in many years. There is also little doubt that Mr. Wilson is very much opposed to the U.S. war in Vietnam and has been bitterly criticized by his own supporters for condoning the U.S. position. However there is little doubt in my mind that his policy of silent support for the U.S. position is based on his unswerving will to maintain the stability of the pound which requires the support of the U.S.

Except perhaps for General de Gaulle there are few leaders like Mr. Wilson who are prepared to put the interests of their country above party politics and I feel that we could well do with such a leader in Canada.

Wrong Image

When I saw a bunch of lads tumble out of a car during non-visiting hours at our private hospital I almost reached for the phone and police help. Such is their public image today.

When they declared themselves I started thinking. There is so much bad publicity meted out to these youngsters today and yet when they do something praiseworthy no one bothers to say a public "Thank You."

Ours was one of the private hospitals they visited and brought bunches of daffodils and real cheer to the lonely shut-ins whose relatives and friends have passed on or live too far away to visit.

All of us here want to say a big "thank you" and tell them that they will be welcome at any time.

New Life for Arab Girls

By M. S. WILDE
from Geneva

A NEW generation of emancipated young Arab women is emerging from camps in four countries where refugees have lived ever since they fled their homes during the Arab-Israeli war of 1948.

It is an irony that they will owe their fuller life to the exile of their parents, but it is a shaft of light in a sombre human situation. An estimated 650,000 Arabs left their homes in Palestine when the Jews carved out the sovereign state of Israel. Instead of diminishing with time the number is now about 1,300,000 — doubled in 19 years.

The camps are in Jordan, the Gaza Strip of the United Arab Republic, Lebanon and Syria. According to the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees more than 250,000 of all the refugees are children in 441 primary and secondary schools set up by UNRWA, and in private schools operating on UNRWA grants.

Attendance at secondary schools is growing at a greater rate than the refugee population, but the increase which UNRWA itself calls "significant" is that 45 per cent of the schoolchildren are girls. This has been a steady trend from 23 per cent 15 years ago.

From schools the refugee children go on to vocational training as well as university courses for a few exceptionally gifted. For girls there is strong emphasis on nursing, an emancipating skill but sometimes running up against ancient Arab inhibitions. The experience of Noura, a girl in one of the Lebanon camps, is an example. Her father set his face against her wish to become a midwife. Like many of the older generation in the Middle East, he considered it improper for a girl to work outside her home.

Noura went to the UNRWA field nursing officer, a Swedish nurse, who has worked for several years in Lebanon, and she discovered that the father's most specific objection was that Noura would have to shed her traditional "tarha" headdress and put on a uniform which he considered immodest.

The Swedish nurse borrowed a student-midwife's uniform and visited Noura's family. Over ceremonial cups of strong coffee she asked the father, "How do you like my uniform?" And then, "Do you think it immodest?"

"Not at all," said the father, all Arab courtesy.

"Well," said the nurse, "this is the dress Noura will wear if she goes into training."

Noura took her course and is now on the UNRWA nursing staff.

Technical Achievements Create Ethical and Moral Conflicts

Science, Medicine Face Fearful Problems

By HARRY NELSON

Who should receive soon-to-be developed "get smart" drugs that could make the stupid more intelligent — and powerful — than those persons now in control?

And when is therapeutic abortion or use of experimental drugs on humans justified?

These and other questions were discussed recently by a panel of scientists and a philosopher, arranged by the American College of Physicians.

They point up the ethical and moral problems facing science and medicine which are—or soon will be — the outgrowth of recent technical developments. The panel failed to find mutually agreeable answers but did succeed in outlining the complexity of these problems.

"We have come up against the same problems that baffled the Egyptian, Hindu, Greek, Roman and all other civilizations that in the past made material progress," said Dr. Irving S. Wright, president of the American College of Physicians.

"Time and again this has proven to be the turning point in the history of a civilization, and many are the material advances that have been lost through the centuries.

"Broadly, these failures seem to be related to the inability of man to live according to philosophical, moral and ethical codes that stand the tests of time."

One imminent problem was posed by a University of California at Berkeley, psychologist Dr. David Krech, who told how recent experiments with animals indicate that drugs will be available within five to 10 years which will significantly increase man's intelligence.

One interesting aspect, he said, is that the studies show certain kinds of chemicals work for certain individual animals but not for others. For example, Dr. James McGaugh of University of California at Irvine has shown that some "get smart" drugs work only on the most stupid animals. They do not make already - smart animals smarter.

Admitting that the transition from rats to man is a fantastic one, Dr. Krech nevertheless offered the following speculations:

Suppose a drug would make it possible to raise the IQ of any person 20 points. The changes which would suddenly be needed in education and politics would be tremendous. In addition, he predicted there would also be religious and moral value changes.

Suppose a drug were developed that raised the IQ only in persons of below-average intelligence. It is conceivable that it could reverse the status quo with respect to servant and master, developed and underdeveloped country.

At least two of the participants, both Nobel prize winning scientists, expressed skepticism that moral values are absolute.

Sir Peter Medawar, director of the National Institute of Medical Research, London, cited one example of the way new scientific knowledge is influencing changes in moral behavior.

Who would decide whether the drug should be used? Who would decide who would receive it? What would be the criteria?

"You will inevitably become involved," he told the physicians. "But doctors have neither the wisdom nor the knowledge to handle this — they can't be allowed to write social policy on a prescription pad. They will be forced to yield gracefully, without kicking and screaming, to social control."

One hundred years ago, he said, people believed that the child born of particular parents was inevitably the child that would arise from their mating.

Today, however, modern genetics makes it clear that any particular child is only one out of one million possible combinations of genes—and hence individuals—which could arise from the parents.

"It's at matter of luck which child is born. Sometimes the child has a serious defect. Why should we regard ourselves as bound by laws of chance if there is a humane and sensible way to prevent it from occurring?" Sir Peter asked.

The other Nobelist, Dr. Joshua Lederberg, professor of genetics at Stanford University, said the Earth is being subjected to "crisis and misery" because of over-population and "it is even possible the Earth will not survive as a habitat of humans" because scientists who knew better failed to speak out for population control 30 years ago.

On therapeutic abortion, Dr. Lederberg said there is "no shred of evidence that there is any moment in gestation at which life begins. All that we have learned opposes this motion with respect to human personality."

"There can be no answer to the question of when individual life begins," he said. "Life is a continuum which began 3,000,000,000 years ago, and since the first construction of DNA there has been a continuous transmission with gradual changes."

DNA is the genetic material which is passed on to offspring by parents who received it from their parents who —far back into the reaches of time—acquired it from earlier forms of life during the process of evolution.

"Even today if one attempts to define what is human in man's DNA, no more than 2 per cent of it differentiates the human from the monkey or the ape. There has been no sudden emergence of human personality," the geneticist said.

"The fetus is by no reasonable criterion a human being. Not even the newborn is a human being."

The newborn, he said, would be considered "human" at about the first year of life when his brain has developed to the point where he is capable of language and other human attributes.

"But I don't advocate infanticide," he hastened to add.

He said more studies should be undertaken to improve the detection of abnormal babies.

Dr. Lederberg was asked whether he thought it justifiable to practice infanticide on newborns with severe mental or physical handicaps. He replied that such infants may "be so interesting that they may be studied and observed to teach us more about human behavior.

"Wouldn't it be more humane than locking them up in warehouses or inflicting them on families who don't know how to care for them?" Dr. Lederberg asked.

On the subject of using humans to test new drugs or medical procedures, Prof. Samuel Stumpf, professor of philosophy at Vanderbilt University, said there is ample evidence of a basic disagreement among leading scientists over the proper ethics.

Some leading researchers apparently believe it is ethical to use people who would not be the beneficiaries of the treatment but who would be merely serving as experimental subjects, he said.

"We are in danger of arguing that the common good is more important than the individual good," the philosopher said.

Even the informed consent of the subject is not an adequate safeguard that ethics are being violated. The reason, Prof. Stumpf explained, is that "consent can't transform something intrinsically wrong into something right."

In other circumstances, informed consent involves duress—for example the use of prison inmates who give their consent perhaps because of the subtle inference that doing so will lighten their sentence.

"We must forego knowledge if the human cost is too high," he declared, but added that it is "unthinkable" to say that humans should not be used in adequately safeguarded experiments.

Before the Lawn Turns Green You Need a Mechanical Contractor

It's lawn planting time.

And that means careful preparation of the soil, careful selection of the seed—a good share of backache.

Then there's the other vital ingredient without which, however carefully the lawn is prepared, the grass just will not come up green.

That ingredient is water.

If you are right up to date you will have an underground sprinkling system installed before you plant the grass seed.

If you can't afford that, and it isn't as expensive as you might think, you will have hoses and sprinklers hooked up to outside faucets.

Which ever system you use the water will be delivered from the mains to the sprinkler by courtesy of the skills of the journeymen mechanics of the mechanical contractors' trade.

Without those skills we should still be back in the watering can days and, rustic and quiet though those days may have been, few of us would want them back.

One Was Bewildering, the Other Balanced

Bennett, Budget Made Lively Week

There has been enough said in this paper and elsewhere to take care of Premier Bennett's recent outburst against the municipalities, but there is one question which puzzles a lot of people:

Why does he strike back so savagely every time he encounters what he considers opposition to his municipal policies?

Why does he lash out blindly every time he meets opposition? Has it come to the point that no one dare raise a voice in protest against this great man and his government?

His recent denunciation of the municipalities for daring to ask for a re-examination of provincial-municipal relations made him look pretty silly.

The hectoring, jeering tone he adopted in answer to a reasoned request indicates perhaps what a lot of people have always contended — that he and his government have

CITY HALL COMMENT

By A. H. MURPHY

nothing but contempt for administrations at the local level.

When these presume, even by implication, to ask for anything beyond which the province is willing to give, they must, it seems, be slapped — slapped down in such a way that they are stung and insulted.

I suppose the provincial government works on the premise that it is safe to insult municipal leaders — that the voters they represent will not take offence. If the government is right in this cynical assumption it is a bad day indeed.

Meanwhile the annual battle of the budget has been fought at City Hall — fought and won, aldermen will tell you if you are silly enough to ask them. The fact that they were able to hold the general rate at last year's level, 39.3 mills, will be a great selling-point when a number of them come up for re-election in December.

They will be able to say, and with justification: "Yes, your tax rate increased but, you will notice, the boost was entirely due to increased school costs. The school rate went up 4.8 mills — a rate over which we have no control — while the general rate remained the same."

That they were able, in the face of rising costs, to keep the general rate level, without impairment to civic services, was due, more than anything else, to a whacking big surplus carried over from 1966. But this surplus, due to a massive increase in assessment values in 1966, will not occur again for a while.

It was due also to the fact that Victoria still has land to sell and a taxsale land fund which can be used for many things.

To save a mill ($120,000) this year it was decided to pay for one or two major projects out of the tax sale land fund rather than from general revenue.

These two fortuitous factors also enabled the administration to set up a reserve fund of about $100,000 against possible large mill rate increases in 1968.

Then, when the city's surplus will have returned to its normal level (about $75,000) the reserve fund can act as a much-needed buffer. Its establishment was an indication of sound thinking on the part of the city manager and city treasurer.

Citizen's Guide to Official Legal Mumbo-Jumbo

What's It All Mean?

"... Pursuant to the provisions of section 199 (1) (a) of the Motor Vehicle Act, B.C. Reg. 26-58, made by authority of Order in Council No. 1004, approved April 18, 1958, as amended, be further amended as follows: ..."

Now what on earth does all that mean?

Finding his way through the tangled thicket of provincial acts, amendments, orders in council, proclamations and regulations is a practically hopeless task for the ordinary citizen. Yet an understanding of the system is essential to anyone doing business with the government, which includes almost everyone these days.

Here, then, is a capsule summary of how the laws that govern us are passed down from the seats of the mighty, and a guide to finding them for yourself.

Proposed legislation comes before the government in the form of bills each winter. These bills are numbered consecutively in the order in which they come before the House. The bill number becomes meaningless after the bill is passed and becomes an act.

The acts, after the session ends, are published in a volume which lists them alphabetically by title. Each act becomes a chapter of the year's statutes.

That's easy. Then come the

CAPITAL REPORT

By BILL STAVDAL

amendments. It isn't enough to look up an act passed in, say, 1962. It's got to be followed up for possible changes.

This labor is reduced every 12 years by publication of the revised statutes which consolidate all previous acts and their amendments in a series of volumes.

Since the revised statutes of 1960 there have been six volumes of legislation, plus a seventh soon coming out of the recent session. The Girl Fridays in law offices annotate the revised statutes of 180 for their bosses to save them hunting. For the general public looking up law in the public library, a thorough check is the only way.

If you're interested in a specific piece of legislation, get a copy of the pink price list of statutes for sale by the Queen's Printer. These publications contain the original act and subsequent amendments, and the average price is 15 or 20 cents.

To go back a bit. Acts come into force in two ways: either by royal assent when the House prorogues, or by proclamation at a later date.

Some acts are proclaimed bit by bit as it suits the cabinet, and occasionally some never come into force.

Many acts make provision for the cabinet (or "Lieutenant-Governor in Council") to pass orders in council under the terms of the act.

These orders in council are the day-to-day method of doing government business. They aren't important enough for the attention of the Legislature, yet they are sanctioned by a law passed by the House.

The orders in council, after routine approval by the Lieutenant-Governor, have the force of law. They are numbered consecutively and filed in the provincial secretary's vault.

They are also catalogued and cross-referenced by subject in the provincial secretary's office. Copies can be had on request.

From the orders in council come regulations which elaborate on specific acts. All regulations are published once in Part 2 of the B.C. Gazette, printed every two weeks.

A subscription can be had from the Queen's Printer for $5 per year.

Part 1 of the Gazette includes cabinet proclamations, compulsory advertisements announcing lease and sale of crown lands, registration of companies and societies, changes of name, expropriation notices and so forth.

Both Part 1 and Part 2 of the Gazette are available in most public libraries.

The quotation which begins this article is numbered B.C. Reg 82-67, which means 82nd regulation passed by the B.C. cabinet in 1967.

As the year wears on the regulations pile up, and sifting through 11 months' accumulation just before their annual consolidation becomes a deadly chore.

Government offices will generally explain the current laws, orders in council and regulations on certain subjects. But then, everyone has his pet story of frustration in dealing with the civil service.

It becomes clearer why we have lawyers.

Flood Vans Ready

While the government soft-pedals talk of a possible flood in the Fraser Valley this spring, the B.C. civil defence organization is quietly getting ready, just in case.

Three new emergency welfare trailer units are being sent to the valley next week, it was announced Friday.

The eight-by-16-foot trailers are equipped to feed 40 persons an hour from food stocks they carry.

'MOST USEFUL'

John H. Erb, provincial civil defence co-ordinator, said:

"They would prove to be most useful in areas that may be damaged by abnormally high water, should it occur."

Without fanfare last Monday, civil defence officials sent a large self-propelled emergency feeding van from Victoria to Abbotsford. The van is one of seven standing ready around the province, and went to join another already in Abbotsford.

WEATHER KEY

The provincial snow survey has warned of near-record snow packs on B.C. peaks, and the danger of flooding. It depends on how fast the snow melts.

A spring with average temperatures would result in an even runoff. Disaster could come if a cool spring that holds the snow on the mountains is followed by a sudden thaw.

The three emergency trailers, plus a fourth being stationed elsewhere in B.C., will be on public view Monday at 11 a.m. at the Mooney Building in the 900 block Fort Street.

GO ANYWHERE

They are designed to travel through rough terrain and to support disaster operations wherever needed in B.C., said a spokesman.

Next Thursday, government officials will meet in Abbotsford to co-ordinate preparations for a possible flood. Recreation and Conservation Minister Kiernan, who represents Chilliwack, is expected to be among them.

Financial Probe Planned by UBCM

The Union of B.C. Municipalities plans to hire an economist to analyze financial arrangements which exist between provincial and local governments.

The decision was made at a meeting of UBCM executive members in New Westminster Friday, a session at which Reeve Hugh Curtis of Saanich represented the Greater Victoria area.

The main product of the meeting was a telegram to Premier Bennett, asking for an upward revision in grants for teachers' salaries. It also told the government of the "rising resentment" toward soaring school taxes at the local level.

UBCM will hire a "competent Canadian financial authority" to make a study not only of school costs but also the overall provincial - municipal relationships.

The economist has not been chosen, but it was expected he would be hired later this year to provide the information by 1968.

Work-Study Plan Boon to Apprentices

By GEORGE INGLIS

In these days of turbulent labor-management relations, Victoria plumbers and pipefitters and their employers have joined forces to benefit young men who seek to learn their trade.

The Victoria joint training committee of the pipefitting industry, celebrating its sixth birthday last week, is a joint venture of labor and management to train new craftsmen and to upgrade the knowledge of journeymen already working in the trade.

HEADS GROUP

The program is funded by the journeymen of Local 324 of the United Association of Plumbers and Pipefitters, with each man donating one cent for each hour worked.

Management plays its part in the administration of the program, with the president being selected from the employer side of the scale. Albert Evans is this year's head of the group.

About 45 to 50 youths and men are involved in the program, which calls for a considerable amount of classroom work under volunteer teachers in two classrooms at the Lansdowne campus of the University of Victoria that have been equipped entirely by the organization.

Apprentices who enter the scheme must apply first to the committee and be surveyed by a jury of journeymen to be assessed as suitable.

VARIOUS EMPLOYERS

If found to be acceptable, the apprentice is indentured to the committee, in order that he may be sent out to various employers during his five-year apprenticeship, to obtain diversified training.

The committee weighing on the suitability of applicants must also consider the availability of a position for the apprentice with a local firm.

After the apprentice becomes a journeyman, the chances of his being employed are strong, due to the associations he has made during his years of training. The committee, however, is not able to guarantee employment.

CLASSROOM TIME

During his apprenticeship, the youth is required to take a specified number of classroom periods, in addition to his work with a journeyman. Failure to take the classroom instruction can result in the apprentice being refused his journeyman status.

The journeymen themselves take voluntary classes, upgrading their technological knowledge and keeping abreast of changes in their trade.

The committee, drawn from both labor and management, sits down regularly to discuss items which may be included or excluded in the courses, in order to benefit the people who work at the trade, and their employers.

Mr. Evans, the president, is the owner of a plumbing business; Alex Simpson, secretary, is a pipefitter, and Thomas Wheatley, the committee's administrator, is business agent of the sponsoring union.

No Ban Stops Olivier!

LONDON (AP) — Sir Laurence Olivier has announced plans to independently produce the Rolf Hochhuth play The Soldiers.

The play has been banned by the board of the National Theatre where Olivier serves as artistic director.

He said Wednesday he would be joined in the venture by Kenneth Tynan, literary director of the National Theatre.

They have been embroiled in a row with the board whose chairman, Lord Chandros, said the play grossly maligned the late Sir Winston Churchill.

Our Principals

RCAF and POW Time Delayed Start

Not all of Greater Victoria's school principals went straight from acquiring to spreading education. Hugh R. Mooney of Gordon Head elementary, for example, was in his 30s before he took his teacher's training — his time having been occupied with service in the Second World War.

Born in Montreal, Mr. Mooney came with his family to Vancouver when very young and attended elementary and high schools there.

In 1939 he joined the RCAF, serving for 3½ years in ground crew, then switching to air crew as navigator.

He served with the 425 Alouette squadron in Halifaxes until 1944, when his plane was shot down. The next 14 months he spent as a prisoner of war in Stalag Luft 6.

Freed in May, 1945, he stayed in uniform a year before returning to civilian life — and normal school at Fredericton, N.B. He then spent 2½ years as vice-principal of a superior school and principal of an elementary school at Plaster Rock, N.B., before coming here in 1949.

Mooney

Mr. Mooney taught at Tolmie, then George Jay; then served as vice-principal of the same schools in the same order until 1960, when he took his present post.

In common with other principals, he believes in keeping in direct touch with pupils and teaches for two hours a day —mathematics, science and literature to Grade 7.

His greatest sense of achievement comes from seeing what former students have done in later years due in part, he always hopes, to the training they received in his schools.

Mr. Mooney's principal hobby lies in the field of electronics. Here, in addition to assembling an unknown number of audio circuits and hi-fi units, he applies his hobby to his work. He constructs electronic units to fit in with computer mathematics.

He also enjoys music (as a listener, he says) and art as a painter. A new hobby is in the preparatory stages: travel.

Married, Mr. Mooney has one daughter in Grade 10 at Gordon Head Junior High. — E.M.S.

to the fact the hordes kept swarming in until the 2:30 a.m. closing time. (Official estimate was that the million mark would be topped today.)

And the second-day turnout Saturday seemed huge again. Montreal cabbie Jerry Bourbonnais claimed it's because "everybody wants to be able to say I was there at the start." The fair's so good the invasion may never slacken.

They're still asking, the opening-day question, "Where am I?" And they will until Expo ends Oct. 27. But now, according to guide Louise Mignault of Hull and her fellow workers, the question asked more than all the rest put together is, "Where's the bathroom? There are plenty.

Elsewhere around Expo:

● Sir Laurence Olivier showed up to open the bookshop in the British Pavilion area but the miniskirts drew all the attention.

● The U.S. continued to outdraw the Soviet Pavilion, where a simulated space ride has apparently been cancelled due to the death of Cosmonaut Kamarov.

● Another bonus for the U.S. was the quiet departure the south of the border of the Viet war protesters, who made no impact.

● Minirail lineups grew to massive length but all agreed the 50-cent, 45-minute elevated view of much of the fair is probably the best bargain.

● Gaining in popularity was the telepherique in La Ronde, an enclosed cable car ride that slides over the entire gayway and looks down on everything, even the minirail.

● Near the heart of Montreal, some sharp eyes caught a billboard bearing only these words:
"Expo 70, Osaka, Japan."

Dane Sailors Hold Tigress

AALBORG, Denmark (UPI)— An angry tigress broke loose aboard a Danish freighter today and terrorized crewmen for several hours.

The animal eventually was locked in an empty cabin aboard the 1,875-ton ship Borreby by armed Danish coast guard men and zoo officials who were rushed to the ship in answer to a distress call. The animal was on its way to the Edinburgh zoo.

A few more comments on borrowing money, truth in lending, full disclosure—call it what you will.

The real problem to the borrower is not the lack of the disclosure of the total cost of borrowing money but rather the lack of a simple interest standard to allow the borrower to shop for his loan. Right now its like buying a roast of beef and not being told how much it costs per pound.

Most reputable lending services spell out how much the borrower is getting and also what the finance charges are and in most cases the charge is in accordance with the risk involved. Obviously a man who has had seven jobs in two years and lives in a rented trailer will pay more for a loan than a fully employed carpenter who owns his own home.

The real problem, then, is not the lack of the disclosure of the total cost of a loan but rather the lack of a standard measurement by which a borrower can compare. Only with the establishment of a simple interest standard will true free-enterprise come to the lending business.

Personally, I think our great banking system should take the lead in establishing the simple interest standard for all loans. The President of Canada's third largest bank said the other day: "Competition is the stuff of which progress is made." If his bank took the lead in establishing the simple interest standard for all loans there would be a lot more competition—and the borrower would be able to use his informed and wholesome discretion.

Thomas Jefferson once said: "I know of no safe repository of the ultimate powers of society but the people themselves, and if we think them not enlightened enough to exercise their control with wholesome discretion, the remedy is not to take it from them but to inform their discretion by education."

The best education we can get right now is through the establishment of the simple interest school. Then, we can all use our enlightened and wholesome discretion. Simple isn't it?

Ecce Quam Bonum

Old Arion Still Sparkles

When Canada was just a youngster of 25, a group of Victorians thought it might be a good idea to get a choir going.

The year was 1892 and after a great deal of effort by men such as the late Howard Kent the Arion Male Voice Choir was formed.

Now, 75 years later, the Arion remains the oldest male voice choir in Canada that is still active.

At each concert and rehearsal the group opens proceedings with the theme from Psalm 134 Ecce Quam Bonum which, in English, reads "Behold how pleasant a thing it is for brethren to dwell together in unity."

On Saturday the Arion Club will celebrate its 75th anniversary with a Festival of Song at Central Junior High School.

Taking part in the program will be two choirs which owe their being to members of the Arion Club.

The 80-voice Eugene Gleemen, one of the best-known choirs in the United States, and the Rotary Boys Choir founded by Arion member Frank Shandley will take part in this concert.

Conductor of the Arion Club, Frank Tupman, is celebrating his fiftieth year as conductor and will share the task of musical direction for this concert with Esley Schik of the University of Oregon.

Offerings by the combined choir will include works by Handel, Schubert, Bach, Gounod and a variety of folk and traditional music.

The Rotary Boys Choir will be conducted by William Hastings and will offer the centennial song Can-A-Da by Bobby Gimby.

The concert begins at 8 p.m. but anyone who would like a free preview can hear both choirs on a brief concert in Centennial Square at 2:30 p.m. Saturday.

The program is sponsored by the Greater Victoria Centennial Society.

Victoria Operatic Society is in the final stages of rehearsal for presentation May 16-27 of Annie Get Your Gun. The show will be staged in the McPherson Playhouse.

The musical comedy is directed by Cliff Clarke and Howard Denike.

Plot for the show is based on the life of Ohio sharpshooter and circus star Annie Oakley and takes place in the late 1800s.

This production stars Harry Elsdon, Barry Grimshaw, Janet Senior, Bill Nesbitt, Bill Broadhead, Archie Bain, Janet Englefield and Pam Trueman.

Auditions for young talented students who wish to appear as soloists with the Victoria Concert Orchestra during the 1967-68 season will be held May 20 at the Victoria School of Music from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Entrants will be expected to show they are able to perform a concerto or work of equal calibre and must be under 25 years of age.

Newly-appointed conductor Laszlo Gati has indicated he wishes to continue presentation of a youth concert.

Applications with name, instrument and teachers recommendation should be mailed to the Victoria Symphony Society, 1960 Lansdowne, Victoria not later than May 15.

Victoria School of Music has planned a series of concerts for May with artists Robin Wood, Jan Menting, Barry Moncur and Vancouver pianist Sonja Behrens.

In the first concert pianist Wood, flutist Menting and clarinetist Monour will perform works May 3 by Bach, Liszt and Faure.

Sonja Behrens will be heard in concert May 10 and on May 17 members of the School of Music Faculty will offer a chamber program.

Mannering Champions Theatre

By PATRICK O'NEILL

Culture mongers must not be allowed to grasp, throttle and kill Canadian theatre.

That is Peter Mannering's message, as he fights for a regional theatre, despite odds that sometimes seem to run about 7 to 5 against.

Victoria's bouncing, vital, regional theatre company, Bastion Theatre needs two things to survive, crowds and cash.

But one doesn't follow the other.

Even when the crowds come, they can't pay the costs of live theatre.

The answer is in subsidy, and the argument for such distribution of public and private funds in cultural lumps is put this way by Bastion Artistic Director Mannering:

"The importance of subsidization of the creative and performing arts, as vital forces affecting the emotional health and understanding of the community, has been recognized and actively endorsed in the world since the time of Greece's golden age more than 2,000 years ago."

The director said our memories of that wonderful era, its ideas and civilization, the standards of taste that were handed on to us, is found in the work of men who originally wrote for the living stage.

"Today, in a world full of scientific marvels, the individual citizen lives in a more uncertain emotional and mental state than ever before.

"Mechanical ease of communication is countered strangely by the fact that in an assembly line civilization, the individual finds it harder to communicate personally with his fellows, than at any other time in history."

He said while the communication problem is recognized and battled in Europe, only recently in North America have leaders begun to understand the practical importance of the stage.

In order to understand others we must first find our own personal identity

Mr. Mannering said the living stage is essential to self-understanding within a nation, and, in the broader sense to understanding between nations.

Another theatre official recently emphasised the importance of not only subsidy from the top, but involvement by the people.

Guy Beaulne, adjudicator of this year's Dominion Drama Festival, said he approves of state subsidy of theatre.

But Mr. Beaulne, formerly an official working on stage projects for the Quebec government, added:

"It is also the responsibility of citizens to invest in all forms of creative and artistic activities."

Why should they?

Here is Mr. Mannering's answer to that complex question.

"In order to understand others, we must first find our own identity. Where better can we learn than in the theatre?"

Mr. Mannering said "The most important development in theatre in Canada has been the regional professional theatre centre.

"Such centres are slowly creating a chain of communication across the nation."

He said the activities of the centres are always divided between educational and entertainment projects.

"In each region they provide outlets for creative artists living there, as well as opportunities for writers in the area to express ideas in vital, theatrical terms."

The Bastion official said these ideas, in time, should have a profoundly healthy effect on the community as a whole.

"As such regional centres grow, their work will be exchanged across the country, and will contribute greatly to national understanding."

He predicted these regional centres, often pushed financially, will begin to bloom in Canada's centennial year.

"For our first 100 years, our thinking was only a reflection of the ideas and ideals of other nations.

"Now, with the knowledge learned from these sources we must continue, as fast as possible, to think for ourselves and learn to express our ideas to ourselves through the performing arts.

"Only in this way can there be a Canadian culture which can be a positive force for good and an example to the world around us."

Mr. Mannering said regional theatres, like Bastion, Neptune Theatre, Vancouver Playhouse and Manitoba Theatre Centre, must have highest professional standards.

He said the prices for tickets must be within the reach of every citizen in the community.

And "theatre must not degenerate into a socially popular fetish for culture mongers."

He said theatre must be a vital and entertaining force, equal in importance and influence to schools, universities, and other recognized recreation and education facilities.

String players of the world unite, it's time to blow your own horns!

Concern for the chronic shortage of string players, and the search for string talent by even big orchestras, caused the American Federation of Musicians to encourage the strings several years ago.

There are two schools, one at Michigan State and one at the University of Southern California, where students from all over Canada and the United States go for two summer months to make music.

Last year Victoria Musicians' Association sent Trudi Conrad, a young violinist.

Association secretary E. K. Peaker has just returned from the Federation's Northwest Conference, where members of the string congress decided even more encouragement should be given.

Pools are being formed, to allow several districts to send another candidate to the school.

This means in forthcoming competitions in Victoria, for string players from 18 to 21, the association will send at least one, and possibly another student will be able to go.

Nova Scotia Farewell

Peter Lower of Waiting for Godot and Barbara Dunn of Endgame may go from Beckett to bedlam, as they try for the National Theatre School at forthcoming auditions. If they make the select list, it means three years of dancing, fencing, mime, speech and exercise in Canada's talent factory. Also expected to audition are Bruce Sharp and Linda Walton.

Victoria's singing bombshell Mary Grant is looking forward to returning to Victoria music scene in October. She is now in Nova Scotia, and her most recent achievement was an excellent showing in a big television Sing Along competition.

Shift work for Ian McIntyre has forced a cast switch in a comedy with the catatonic title Barbecueing an Indian. Ian has been replaced by Ed Fordham, whose previous part has been filled by Jim Cotton.

Ian can be caught tonight at the last performance of the Tiger and Typists at Bastion's Workshop. Jim has just completed On Monday Next. Barbecue opens at the Government Street workshop May 12.

Jug Music Is a Grass

The legendary Hillside Grass Band made a sudden and explosive appearance at Hippy Night at Gippers Thursday and walked off with the whole show.

More than 10 people, some playing, some singing, some just enjoying the clatter, stood on stage for a set and gave out with a strange and marvellous jug band cacaphony.

Dressed in strange clothes, sporting long hair, sunglasses, sandles, flowers painted on their faces, they made a combination that will be called back again and again to perform at the Government Street coffeehouse. They will be playing today at the Love-In at 12:30 in Beacon Hill Park.

Listening to troubled musicians and actors north of the Malahat might give Victoria theatre buffs a feeling of great gratitude for the existence of McPherson Playhouse.

In Duncan and Nanaimo, audiences sit on hard chairs, try to concentrate on drama in the tender setting of a gymnasium, and wonder what a real theatre looks like.

For example at Duncan, John Sanders of the musical club said his group spent $4,500 on the recent production of Show Boat, then had nowhere decent to show it off in Duncan.

But the club did one successful production at the McPherson in Victoria.

Sanders remarked wistfully "We might be better off to stage productions for the McPherson, and ignore Duncan."

At Nanaimo, the complaint of performers and audiences time after time is the lack of a theatre to show off the product.

It's hard to enjoy theatre in a gym where the smell of sneakers kills the smell of greasepaint, and the roar of the crowd is a groan for the dread distress of metal-chair-fatigue.

The Blood Is Strong

Humor in Pioneer Life

"Whiskey is infused with riotous living, debauchery and sinful luxury," says Murdoch MacDonald severely.

"Aye," agrees Hector Morrison, "It's wonderful stuff."

So goes the humor of Canadian play The Blood Is Strong. The Lister Sinclair comedy will be presented by Bastion Theatre as its last regular show of the season.

It opens Friday and runs to May 13 at McPherson Playhouse.

Centennially speaking, The Blood Is Strong is an appropriate choice, since it is the story of early Scottish settlers in Nova Scotia.

Scenes from the play were presented with great success in Bastion's Spring Centennial Tour of Vancouver Island high schools.

Three of the players featured have the same roles they played in the tour—Margaret Martin (Mary MacDonald), Bill Hosie (Barney Hannah), and Gina Bigelow (Kate).

With them in the full-length version is Robert Baird as Murdoch, crusty, uncompromising head of the household, who thinks he rules his family with an iron hand.

John Heath as son James, always ready with the pros and cons of taking up any career . . . "well there's for and against . . ."

Jonathan Raitt, Joy Richards, Doris Exton, Victor Williams, Jim Dunn, Norm Dyson, Denny Eberts, Cam More, Judy Pool and Marta Sutherland are also in the cast.

Peter Mannering directs, set design is by Glenn MacDonald, and costume design by Wendy Packard.

In his own introduction to the play Lister Sinclair says . . . "Although the play deals with Scotsmen emigrating to Nova Scotia in the early nineteenth century, the problem of the different attitudes of different generations is the same no matter where people come from or where they are going, or when."

Ian and Sylvia

By PETE JOHNSON

Ian and Sylvia, Canadian folk singers known as the composers of Four Strong Winds and You Were on My Mind, are in excellent form on their latest album, So Much for Dreaming (Vanguard).

Their close-knit voices wend through a dozen well-arranged songs including Si Les Bateaux, The Circle Game, a moving story of youth written by Joni Mitchell; Come All Ye Fair and Tender Ladies; Hold Tight and Catfish Blues, which features Sylvia in a spirited solo.

Ian Tyson is from Victoria.

Another good folk album spotlights three blues performers with divergent styles — Mance Lipscomb, Clifton Chenier and Lightning Hopkins.

Blues Festival, Concert and Dance (Arhoalie) was recorded during a live performance at Berkeley one year ago.

Tax Exemption Removal Draws Hamilton Attack

OTTAWA (CP)—Alvin Hamilton said Saturday "no government in its right mind would remove the three-year-tax exemption on new mines at this stage of Canada's development."

The Conservative MP for Qu'Appelle, Sask., was commenting on reports that some mining firms will curtail new projects because of a recommendation by the Carter royal commission that the exemption on mines be removed.

UNWARRANTED

Noranda Mines Ltd. said Friday it will put aside plans for two new copper mines in British Columbia. The projects would have involved a $90,000,000 outlay.

Mr. Hamilton said in a statement he believes his view is widely held among members of all political parties. "All the uproar raised in the last few days by leading spokesmen in the business world is unwarranted."

"Their words and actions are driving the average person in Canada towards those groups that would control the economy. They are saying the right things in the wrong way."

Mr. Hamilton was agriculture minister in the former Conservative government and is considered a top contender in the party's leadership convention in September.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Malcolm Wickson, British Columbia Conservative party president, Saturday called on Prime Minister Pearson to repudiate the sections of the Carter tax commission report which recommend cancelling mining industry tax incentives.

He said in a statement that unless Mr. Pearson makes it known publicly that his government will not cancel these incentives, the B.C. economy will suffer a serious setback.

"I understand that close to half a billion dollars worth of capital investment planned by the mining industry in British Columbia alone is in danger of being cancelled because projects are almost impossible to finance in the face of the Carter recommendations," Mr. Wickson said.

Mr. Wickson said these incentives had placed B.C. on the verge of becoming one of the world's great mining areas, and their cancellation would wreck the situation, just when it most needs government encouragement.

Skagway Link To Grow

VANCOUVER (CP) — Major port facilities are planned at Skagway, Alaska, to provide an improved shipping link from Whitehorse, Y.T., via the White Pass and Yukon Railway, it was announced Friday.

Frank Brown, president of the railway, told the annual meeting that a definite site has been selected and engineering studies are under way.

The new facilities at Skagway will accommodate ships of 65,000 tons, said Mr. Brown.

The White Pass and Yukon Railway extends from Whitehorse directly west across into the Alaska Panhandle to Skagway, servicing several major mining operations in the Yukon.

Net profits for the first quarter of 1967 totalled $259,658 compared with $143,830 for the same period last year, Mr. Brown reported.

Net earnings for 1966 totalled almost $1,000,000, the best in the company's history, said Mr. Brown. This provided a dividend of $1.28 a share, he said.

Goldale Exits With Loss From O'Brien

TORONTO (CP) — Canadian Goldale said Friday it has sold "most of its share position" in O'Brien Gold Mines at an estimated loss of $353,000.

Goldale, headed by K. A. Roberts of Toronto, was part of a group that took over control of O'Brien in 1965. Prudential Finance Corp., which went into bankruptcy last year, was another member. An inquiry into the Prudential Finance collapse showed that large loans had been made by O'Brien to Prudential Finance.

O'Brien shares traded on the Toronto Stock exchange at $1.09 on Nov. 16, 1966. It was suspended next day for not revealing the loans to Prudential. It now is selling on the unlisted market for 40 cents bid.

More Exports Sought

When Canada's 65 overseas trade commissioners paid recent visit to Vancouver to promote wider export of Canadian products, P. R. Woodford of Sidney Seaweed Products, right, represented one of B.C. companies to seek interview. Here he shows sample to L. D. Burke, from Kingston, Jamaica.

Carter 'Pills' Ready Soon

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

Some people have already brushed the Carter Commission recommendations on taxation under the rug—particularly if they did not like them—and assumed it would be years before our "go-slow" government got round to deciding about them, let alone implementing them.

In this I would adjure them however not to be too sure. Finance Minister Sharp this week told the Canadian Tax Foundation in Toronto that he and his department were very much on the bit so far as Carter and his pills are concerned.

He told the tax experts he would hope the government would be ready to make its decisions so that it could have legislation passed in 1968 — only one year away!

COMMENT INVITED

In the immediate period in which Mr. Sharp is making up his mind the minister asked that members of the foundation and others with ideas on the Carter report recommendations should make their comments to his department as soon as possible.

Mr. Sharp said he was interested in comments on tax on capital gains; integration of corporate and personal income tax; inclusion of bequests and gifts in taxable income instead of separately as now; averaging of income over a number of years for tax determination and taxation of the family unit as against the individual.

Mr. Sharp said he hoped to be able to make recommendations on major features of income tax reform by this autumn, and when the government makes its decisions, these would be incorporated in a white paper which would explain the steps proposed and how they would work.

HARDLY NEEDED

Mr. Sharp also wants to know what people think about fully taxable pension plan payments; business expense exemptions; single rate corporation tax for companies, big and small; tax concessions to the oil and mine industries, and the tax treatment of life insurance companies.

Mr. Sharp hardly required to ask people to present their briefs. He is already getting them in droves, particularly from the indignant giants of the oil and mining industries and also from the small independent companies to whom the standard 50 per cent corporation tax level could be crippling.

Anyway, Mr. Sharp has made it clear that the income tax side of the Carter report is due for immediate attention. Other aspects of taxation, it appears, will be allowed to follow later.

ENDAKO MAIN ASSET

Placer Development made more than 80 per cent of its first quarter earnings from its holding in Endako Mines Ltd.

T. H. McClelland, president of Placer, said the three months net earnings of $3,091,000 represented 58 cents a share. Of this 48 cents a share came from Placer's 84 per cent ownership of Endako, the big molybdenum mine west of Prince George.

Gas turbine mobile chipper ready for life of industry

Victoria Firm Shows Way

Chipper Works in Forest

By HARRY YOUNG
Business Editor

While VMD has been getting the accolade for being the first firm in Canada to construct an offshore drilling rig for the oil industry, another Victoria engineering firm has won praise by producing a first in Canada for the forest industry.

The engineering shop of Nicholson Murdie Machines Ltd. on Harbour Road is putting the finishing touches on an elaborate mobile combination log-barker and pulp-chipper, the first machine of its kind to be built in Canada.

The machine, known as a utilizer, has been built at a cost of $250,000 fort the New Brunswick forest firm of J. D. Irving Ltd., and within the next two weeks or so it will be shipped by rail to its new owners at Chipman, N.B.

IN FOREST

The utilizer is specially designed for woods operators who find it more convenient to debark their logs and turn them into woodpulp chips right on the forest floor rather than by trucking the logs to an in-plant chipper.

Ed Brown, Victoria manager of the Nicholson Murdie plant, says that his firm's utilizer machine has many advantages. The whole operation can be handled by one man who works from an elevated cab.

From his lofty porch, the operator controls a console of switches and levers that enable him to pick up a log off the deck, insert it into the log feed conveyor, and then control its passage through a mechanical barking device before passing in one straight-through movement to the six-knife chipper.

INTO TRAILER

As the chips are cut they are blown by way of a duct into an awaiting chip truck trailer.

While the chips are being dumped into the trailer that will take them to the pulp mill, the unwanted bark is being blow at high pressure back on to the forest floor where it will provide a new source of humus.

The Nicholson Murdie firm, whose head office and plant is in Seattle, has designed the utilizer using many of its own patented features.

IMPROVEMENTS

The first six utilizers were built in Seattle and are now being used in various parts of the United States, one of them by Crown Zellerbach at its Port Townsend, Washington, logging operation.

No. 7, however, has been produced in the Victoria plant, and it has many improvements and innovations which were lacking in the earlier U.S.-built models.

Besides being the first combined barker-chipper made in Canada for Canadian customers, the Victoria-built machine is also unique in being the first to use an industrial gas turbine engine, in addition to a Cummings 400 horsepower diesel.

SAME FUEL

The gas turbine engine — also 400 horsepower — drives the chipper and the infeed conveyor, while the electricity generated by the diesel provides power for all other functions.

Both the diesel and the gas turbine run on the same type of fuel — very convenient.

The utilizer comes in three sizes — one for logs of up to 12 inches diameter; one for 18-inch logs and one for 22-inch logs.

The one built in Victoria will handle up to 18-inch logs, of any length.

MOBILE

It is 40 feet long, ten feet wide and 13½ feet high. Weighing 86,000 pounds, it is mounted on truck-type wheels and it is mobile at speeds up to 10 mph under its own power.

The gas turbine engine is made in Montreal by United aircraft to Pratt and Whitney design.

When going full out the chipper will chew logs up at the rate of 100 feet a minute.

Mr. Brown says that the whole machine, including the wages of the operator, can be run at $9.64 an hour. This figure includes $3.25 for wages; $4.35 for fuel and $1.04 for maintenance.

Basic Training Key To Forest Safety

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charles Specht, MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. president, told a forestry safety conference last week the industry should get rid of the slogans, gimmicks and posters and get back to basics.

Mr. Specht said there is hope of reducing accidents if there is a return "to the basics of sound training in safe work practices and plain good housekeeping in our woods and mills."

Some management he said, assumes that appointment of a foreman as "in charge of safety is all that is required and such practices usually go unchallenged until there is an accident.

"Accidents are generally traced to unsafe work practices which turn out, on investigation, to have been ignored or, what is worse, condoned," he said.

"We find too often that an accident victim has probably repeated hazardous practices time and time again before he was hurt."

Bert E. Curtis, director of adult education at the Collegiate Institute Board of Ottawa, said an old dog can be taught new safety tricks.

He said it is a myth that adults will not learn faster than youth and that safety training therefore must be planned with adults and not for adults.

"This is the way that the experience of each learner can be brought to bear on the program," he said.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Dr. Wesley Munsie has been named campaign chairman of a $150,000 fund-raising drive put on by the B.C. Association for Retarded Children. The campaign is running through the month of May.

Artists Prepare Exhibits for B.C.'s Jewel Box of History

Museum Destined to Be Victoria's Prize Showpiece

By BILL STAVDAL

Hardly anyone in Victoria realizes it yet, but a fabulous showplace is being readied for them as the new provincial museum approaches completion.

Right now it's only a skeleton being fleshed out with concrete. But the museum may open on a limited scale this July, and completion is promised by the end of the year.

When it does, the spacious display halls will become a jewel box presenting thousands of facets of B.C. history and wildlife in vivid detail.

Extra Dividend

When the whole museum-archives-curatorial building complex at Belleville and Government is finished it will be complemented by spacious landscaping and mirrored in a sunken, ornamental pool which will be the setting for a carillon tower.

It's a safe prediction that the centre will become the capital city's prize showpiece, another dividend to life in Victoria.

Taxpayers having paid for it, the museum will be free to visitors.

The bill for all this is now estimated at between $8,000,000 and $9,000,000 by Works Minister Chant — nearly three times the estimate in the original conception of a few years ago.

Completion of the museum is assured by year's end, but Mr. Chant isn't committing himself to a date for the adjoining 13-storey curatorial building or the low archives structure at its foot.

Vision Caught

Until money is available, says Mr. Cahnt, they will remain steel frames only.

Only the people working closest to the project seem to have caught the vision of what's to come.

"I think it's going to be one of the nicest buildings in town," says Brian Scroggs, who is pardonably prejudiced as project superintendent for Farmer Construction Co.

He points out all sorts of bonus features the museum will hold, such as the 300-seat theatre on the main floor which has a capacious elevator to bring props up from the basement.

Large workshop areas in the basement will allow artists to restore the biggest totem poles and prepare new exhibits.

Lavish use of structural steel makes possible the spacious, pillar-free exhibit halls. To save legwork and make viewing less wearying, escalators will carry visitors to the second and third storeys.

Tile, Marble

The museum will be faced with Haddington Island stone, same as on the nearby legislative buildings. Ceramic tile, pre-cast concrete and white-and-green marble also will be used for trim.

After excavation, footings, foundations and steelwork, the main contract was let to Farmer Construction for $3,-335,000. The department of public works is reticent about telling the exact cost of the museum.

A senior spokesman for the department points out that cost of excavation and utilities servicing for the three buildings must be shared between them.

For years people said Victoria needed a new museum to replace the crowded one in the east wing of the legislative buildings. In December, 1959, Premier Bennett announced that the museum would be built in two years. It would closely follow the architecture of the legislative buildings, he said.

Works Minister Chant first favored a site in Beacon Hill Park, but public opposition killed that idea. The Belleville-Government site was chosen in February, 1963.

50-50 Split

Meantime, the estimates were rising. In August, 1964, Premier Bennett raised the figure to $5,000,000, half to be paid by the federal government as a project for Canada's centennial year.

The $2,500,000 federal contribution still stands, but Mr. Chant now favors a straight 50-50 split.

Saskatchewan and Quebec are asking more for their provincial centennial projects, he noted last week. If they get it, B.C. will go after more also, he said.

Good Value

Admitting the cost is high, Mr. Chant says B.C. will get value for its money.

"The museum will be the best in Canada for its purpose," he said.

Extra steel has been put into the building to withstand B.C.'s occasional earthquakes, he said.

The museum building also costs more because of its air conditioning and temperature controls needed to preserve delicate old relics.

Stone facing to harmonize with the capitol buildings cost more than $300,000, said the minister.

"It must have character, quality, good lines and appearance," he declared.

"If the building is looked after, it will be in use for 500 years," he predicted.

But what about the contents, most important part of any museum?

Lured Home

In a former garage at 845 Yates, a half-dozen artists are preparing the first of many displays and dioramas which will grace the museum.

They are supervised by Erik Thorn, a one-time Victorian lured home from the National Museum of Canada. Mr. Thorn's credentials include experience at the British Museum and Toronto's noted Royal Ontario Museum.

The ex-garage houses a vast range of relics, from old-time school desks to First World War machine guns. But most of its space is taken up with a collection of Indian carvings being restored, and the wildlife dioramas now in preparation.

Scale Model

John Smyly, former cabinet-maker, is restoring a rare "weeping" totem pole brought from the Queen Charlotte Islands by anthropologist Wilson Duff in 1954. It is one of two known to exist, and is in badly decayed condition after standing for an estimated 65 years.

Mr. Smyly, who always preferred model-making to cabinet construction, is also completing a scale model of the old Indian village of Skedans on Moresby Island in the Queen Charlottes.

A portion of the village — Mr. Smyly's work — is already on view in the old provincial museum.

He works from photographs taken in 1878 by George M. Dawson, the crippled researcher of the National Museum who made invaluable photos of the old Indian life before it passed away.

Mr. Smyly is even carving scaled-down totems from the Dawson photos.

Upstairs, restoration specialist Philip Ward, formerly of the British Museum, used ordinary auto body filler to repair damaged Indian argillite carvings.

Tom Putnam, an artist who came from the National Museum last summer, specializes in plant foregrounds for the lifelike dioramas. His plastic leaves, cast from originals, are complete down to bug-holes done with a ticket punch.

"The general theme of the whole museum will be ecological — man and nature," said Mr. Thorn. His artists, for example, will attempt to reveal the relationship of the prehistoric Indians to their abundant wood supplies and maritime life.

Mr. Thorn hopes that first displays will go on view in July, though he's not counting on it.

An official opening will take place sometime next December or January, and by the summer of 1968 the museum will be proudly on full view.

The Victoria business community will get an added bonus, predicts Works Minister Chant.

"It will help hold the tourists here. I bet many will stay an extra day just to see the museum."

Treasured Fakes Unveiled

Forgeries Rock World of Art

The London Sunday Times

The international art world is in uproar following the discovery by French police last week that the Paris-based ring of art fakers has cleaned up at least $1,100,000 including about $19,000 from a French government department.

This means that dozens, possibly hundreds, of paintings in galleries and private collections in Europe, the United States and South America must be fakes.

Civil lawsuits involving more than $2,800,000 have been started. Two of them in New York, concern some 50 works which were attributed to the Spanish painter Jon Miro, but which the artist himself says are not by him.

Miro arrived in Paris last week "to make an issue over this scandalous business" and will later go to New York.

The latest known fake, to the embarrassment of the French authorities involved, turns out to be in the vaults of the Credit Municipal, the nationally-owned bank and pawnbrokers, in Paris.

Following the Sunday Times exposure three weeks ago of the large-scale trafficking in art fakes, a Credit Municipal employee remembered lending a young Canadian about $19,000 on a painting called "Model in Repose," supposedly by Matisse.

As authentication, the Canadian had presented a photograph of the painting signed on the back by Mme. Marguerite Duthuit-Matisse, the artist's daughter. But on Friday, when worried officials contacted Mme. Duthuit-Matisse, she told them: "I have never written any such attestation."

Mme. Duthuit-Matisse will now join the growing list of irate painters, painters' relatives, gallery owners and private collectors who are filing complaints against the art fakers — and Matisse's name will join those of Miro, Marquet, Derain, Dufy, Chagal, Vlaminck and Picasso as painters whose works have been brilliantly forged by the gang.

Seven Murdered

From AP and UPI

A 14-year-old boy was charged with first-degree murder Saturday night in the slayings of two young sisters from Westland, near Detroit.

The girls, Kimberly Crother, 6, and her sister, Deborah, 8, were found molested and strangled in a field less than 300 yards from their home Friday afternoon.

SHOT IN HEAD

Texas police Saturday found three members of an East Texas family slain in a pasture 200 yards behind their farm home. All had been shot in the head, put in a shallow, common grave and covered with six inches of dirt.

The dead were Dale Hadaway, 44, his wife, Dorothy, 33, and Hadaways father, Earnest J. Hadaway, 70.

HERMIT CHARGED

Near Springfield, Ill., a hermit sharpshooter with a history of psychiatric difficulties was charged with murder Friday night within hours of the finding of the dismembered bodies of two known gamblers.

The recluse, Stuart Kol, 42, was captured earlier by about 30 city, county and state police at the windowless, doorless tower where he lived.

Kol was taken into custody after two mushroom hunters, drawn to a wooded gully by smoke from burning clothing, stumbled upon the torsoes which had been dumped into a shallow, water-filled hole near a creek.

Two Superjets Win Washington Approval

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson approved Saturday the next giant step toward a supersonic jet airliner.

Two prototypes of the SST, designed to carry 300 passengers at 1,800 miles an hour, are to be built.

BACK IN RACE

The announcement at the White House put the United States squarely back in the competition for air superiority against the British-French and Soviet transport planes now under construction.

Johnson said in a statement he would ask Congress for an additional $198,000,000 for the construction of the prototypes during the 1968 fiscal year. There is some $250,000,000 now available for that purpose, bringing to some $450,000,000 the funds to be spent during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

MANY TEST HOURS

Alan S. Boyd, secretary of transportation, said government expenditure of $1,144,000,000 would be required to build the prototypes and test them through the first hundred hours of flying.

The present aim is to have the planes in the air by mid 1970 and in commercial service by 1974.

BOEING

Johnson authorized Boyd to sign contracts for the prototype construction. Boyd told newsmen at a White House briefing he expects representatives of the Boeing Co. of Seattle, Wash., and General Electric Co. to sign contracts this week.

Boeing, which will build the airframes, and General Electric, which will supply the eight engines for the two planes, won the design competition last December after an 18-month competition that cost $220,000,000.

Forgiven— All Way Up

NEW YORK (UPI) — The New York Daily News ran the following notice:

"Alan K. please come home. All is forgiven. You won't have to cut your hair."

The plea was signed "Mother & Dad."

Even If Money Is No Object, Should You Replace Old Furnaces With Electricity?

No! Not only does electricity cost up to 100% more per year to operate, but it not as healthy a heating system as oil heat. This is a fact! Intelligent homeowners who require a new heating unit or system examine the quality, dependability and comparative costs of the available units or systems before making a decision. And anyone, who objectively compares oil with electricity will choose oil. Oil heat is not only far more economical than electricity . . . it constantly circulates and filters the air in a home, and it produces hot water six times faster than electricity. Electricity does not circulate the air, it does not remove stale air. That's why electric heated homes are often so stuffy!

A Pitcher?

It isn't often a pitcher hits the dirt like this but veteran Jack Sanford of California Angels wanted that triple badly yesterday against New York Yankees. He hit dirt six feet from base, lost his hat and skidded the rest of the way to get his extra base when ball got away from third-baseman John Kennedy. But Sanford's heroics were wasted, Yankees going on to take 5-2 decision which kept them sharing American League lead. —(AP)

Leafs Do Another About-Face Superb Effort Stars Sawchuk

TORONTO 4, MONTREAL 1

MONTREAL—Toronto's confounding Maple Leafs, who can change from mediocrity to brilliance, or vice versa, overnight, again looked all but unbeatable Saturday afternoon as they took a 3-2 lead in the Stanlay Cup final by outclassing Montreal Canadiens, 4-1.

Led by goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk, who had been so shaky in the 6-2 trouncing the Leafs took Thursday night, and their non-stop centre, Dave Keon, the Leafs played superb hockey.

They caught the defending cup champions when they were at their skating best and with Sawchuk again the goalkeeper who starred in the semi-finals against Chicago to balk Canadiens in the first period, the Leafs went on to take command of the game.

YIELD FIRST GOAL

They yielded the first goal to a Montreal attack that seemed unstoppable, squared it with a power-play goal before the first period was over and then won it with three second-period goals and great marking hockey which never allowed Canadiens to again get control.

As was the case Thursday, when Rogatien Vachon did it for Montreal, it was early goalkeeping which decided it.

Sawchuk set up the Leaf comeback with his first-period brilliance, then kept Canadiens from the comeback they never quit trying for with clutch puck-blocking in the last two periods.

He hinted at things to come early when Ralph Backstrom, best of the Canadiens, cut in after a spectacular rink-length rush. Sawchuk went down at the right second to block the shot.

It stopped Canadiens only temporarily. Jim Pappin took a penalty in the pressure and while Leafs held Montreal off on the power-play, Sawchuk finally had to yield as Henri Richard, Leon Rochefort and Dick Duff put on a free-wheeling display in the Toronto zone.

KEPT IT UP

Rochefort finally scored after Sawchuk had made three outstanding stops but Sawchuk later stopped Richard and Claude Provost to prevent a second goal which could have kept things going the way they started.

That was only a good start for Sawchuk. After Brian Conacher's goal early in the second period had given the Leafs a 2-1 lead, he kept Canadiens from their second goal by being both good and lucky.

He stopped Backstrom twice and J. C. Tremblay once with particularly good moves before Red Kelly drew a penalty. Sawchuk had a few breaks on the power-play but made a fine stop on the play before Marcel Pronovost broke away for the 3-1 goal. And then followed a great leg save on Jean Beliveau before Keon sealed it with Toronto's fourth goal.

TOOK CHARGE

Once ahead, however, the Leafs needed only occasional stops like that from their goalkeeper.

They had what was their best game of the series, skating with Canadiens all the way and never letting them mount a sustained attack after the penalty to Kelly with alert, positional defensive play.

Time and again, the Leafs forced the Canadiens, whose speed and head-man passing make the procedure difficult, to turn back and start another rush.

ALL WERE STARS

It was a great team effort. Up front, George Armstrong, Kelly and Ron Ellis were having their best games of the series and Keon was all over the ice, breaking up plays and starting rushes.

With all their forwards blanketing their checks, the Toronto defence, led by Pronovost and Tim Horton, was almost letter perfect. Harried by Leaf forwards and finding the Toronto defence at the blue line, Canadiens were called for offside often and were challenged all the way when they shot the puck into the corners and raced after it.

WENT BOTH WAYS

But it wasn't just a one-way performance. The Leafs were also sharp on attack and alertly took advantage of any miscues their forcing hockey caused.

Pappin's 1-1 goal came unexpectedly with the Canadiens looking as if they would kill off a penalty to Claude Larose without any trouble. But they lapsed less than half a minute before Larose was due back and Keon found Pappin alone in front with a pass from the left boards.

A low shot past a sprawling defenceman beat Vachon.

RED WORKED FOR IT

Persistence by Kelly made Conacher's goal possible. Kelly got the puck back to Larry Hillman at the right point, was in position to get a shot away after Hillman's drive was blocked and saw the hard work pay off when Conacher rapped the rebound in.

Hustle also brought the other two second-period goals. Pronovost was joined by Ellis on a break from the ganging attack Canadiens were putting on with Kelly off but used his teammate only as a decoy. He let go a low shot from about 30 feet to find the net.

The tireless Keon set up his own goal, carrying in on a fine rush and getting the puck back to Horton before beating the sprawled Vachon with the rebound off Horton's shot.

Vachon looked weak on the last two goals and Montreal-coach Toe Blake, probably thinking about Tuesday's sixth game in Toronto, had Gump Worsley in goal for the third period.

Worsley handled 10 shots without a miss, three or four of them labelled, in his first playoff action and his performance will likely have him in goal on Tuesday.

Imlach's Vote Goes to Terry

MONTREAL (UPI) "He deserves the next game."

The statement came from Toronto-coach Punch Imlach after yesterday's game and it meant that Terry Sawchuk would be playing against Montreal Canadiens in the sixth game of the Stanley Cup final in Toronto next Tuesday.

"He certainly played well," Imlach said, "but you really have to give them all credit. They aren't the most talented hockey club in the world but when they get together they can really go out there."

Imlach refused to allow his players to be interviewed and a team official explained that the Leafs had to rush to catch a plane that was taking them back to Toronto.

Reporters were permitted into the Montreal dressing room, but it took some time before coach Toe Blake permitted the door to be opened.

Blake didn't say who would be in goal for his club in the sixth game but absolved rookie Rogatien Vachon of any blame for the 4-1 defeat which gave Toronto a 3-2 series edge.

NOT AT ALL HAPPY

"We gave the puck away all through the game and just stood around and watched them put it into the net," Blake growled.

However, he put veteran Gump Worsley in goal for the third period. Worsley, who had been idle since March 12, when he was hit on the head by an egg thrown from the balcony in Madison Square Garden, came up with a good job in stopping 10 Toronto shots.

Arrigo Throws One-Hitter

Reds Find New Mound Depth

Cincinnati Reds are finding it a baseball season of pleasant surprises.

Galloping along in front in the National League because of unexpected good pitching, they discovered another arm yesterday when they were unable to start either Jim Maloney or Milt Pappas because both were ailing. So the Reds called on Gerry Arrigo, a 25-year-old left-hander who had seldom been able to get the most out of what baseball men knew was a major-league arm.

They sent Arrigo out to face New York Mets, the club he was with last season, although he had a 102 temperature Friday night. There was no one else available.

All Arrigo did was miss a no-hit, no-run game on a bad-bounce single, hit by Jerry Grote in the first inning, which caromed off Tommy Helm's glove.

TOO FRIENDLY

The amazed Mets made it easy for their former teammate by making three errors, two by shortstop Bud Harrelson, who now has seven in his last four games. The Reds just breezed, 7-0, for their ninth win in 10 games and a three-game lead.

A two-run homer by Joe Torre and a bases-empty clout by Clete Boyer gave Atlanta Braves a 3-2 win over Philadelphia Phillies and San Francisco Giants blanked the stumbling Los Angeles Dodgers, 5-0.

The shutout was a five-hitter by Juan Marichal, back in top form after losing his first three starts. He struck out 13.

TRAILERS LEAD

New York Yankees and Boston Red Sox moved out front together in the tight American League race. They finished 10th and ninth, respectively, last season.

Mickey Mantle drove in three runs, two with a 407-foot orbiter which was his 497th career home run, and Fred Talbot pitched a two-hitter as the Yankees knocked over California Angels, 5-2.

Boston kept pace the hard way, blowing a 9-5 lead and then coming back with two runs in the last half of the 15th inning to edge Kansas City Athletics, 11-10.

Pinch-hitter Jose Tartabull beat his former teammates with a bases-loaded single after Rick Monday had given the Athletics a 10-9 lead.

Baltimore Orioles slipped back into a third-place tie when they were tamed, 4-2, by Detroit Tigers' Mickey Lolich.

Has Roger at last found true happiness in the great west? Will Albert love him in October as he does in April? Is Lee, the master trader who brought a world championship to Baltimore, destined to do as much for St. Louis? Stay tuned all summer as this thrilling real-life story of deeply human emotions unfolds.

If it is true, as some are beginning to suspect, that life has begun anew for Roger Maris at 32, then a whole new script may have to be written for the National League baseball season of 1967.

In his third summer as a thinker rather than a doer, Albert Schoendienst may be granted his membership card in the licensed wonder-workers of the world (flannel rompers division). St. Louis fans may owe to Lee MacPhail, who traded the window-faded hero to the Cardinals, the same debt of gratitude that Baltimore felt for Bill DeWitt after he sent Frank Robinson to the Orioles.

And Maris, whose sun had set with the Yankees, may win the recognition which was denied to him for years because a single talent exhibited in one extraordinary season obscured other skills that would have been acclaimed in somebody else.

The best thing Maris ever did was the worst thing that could have happened to him as a sports idol. In 1961 he hit 61 home runs and was irrevocably cast in a role that didn't suit him and a mold he didn't fit.

For One Reason or Another

Some fans resented him because he had the irreverence to challenge Babe Ruth's pre-eminence in one field but had none of the gaudy color Ruth had taught them to expect of a folk hero. Others saluted him for his achievement but were disenchanted when he did not repeat it.

They demanded that he hit 61 home runs every year and when he didn't they rejected him, ignoring the fact that he did many other things exceedingly well. He was a truly fine outfielder, a dangerous pull hitter with rare batting style and a first rate team player.

If he had never pretended to the throne of home run king, he would have been remembered warmly for the other things he did so well, as, for example, Tommy Henrich is remembered. Instead, he was jeered. "What has he done for us lately?" the fans demanded.

It is true that Maris did little to polish up his own image. He was acutely uncomfortable in the spotlight, where Ruth had revelled. Once he realized that the home run record was within reach he wanted it desperately; he became so wrought up that his hair started falling out.

He was too nervous to enjoy the cheers when he was winning them, and he never learned to ignore the boos that followed. He retreated into sulkiness, and was repaid with misunderstanding. When he was actually injured, he was suspected of malingering. By the end of last season he had had it in New York. If he hadn't been traded he might have retired but the Cardinals wanted him. Probably it felt good to be wanted. Moving into a new league, playing in a town not too far removed from his home and getting the same big money he had received in New York added up to a new opportunity.

Different Training

It was a much happier Maris training in St. Petersburg this spring than the one the Yankees had known. One day before an exhibition, the Cardinals invited fans down to the field to take pictures. Roger drew 95 per cent of the business; he posed patiently with old dolls and girls and kids, scribbled autographs endlessly, his small grin almost warm.

Then the season opened, and he was a major factor in the team's fast start. While the Cardinals were winning their first six games, he batted .400, hitting no home runs but stroking the ball to all fields for extra bases. When the defence overshifted to right he responded intelligently by laying down bunts along the third base line or slicing a single to left.

He has been an alert opportunist on the bases and his usual competent self in the outfield. He has been playing the game not like Babe Ruth but like Roger Maris, which is a very good way to play it, indeed.

If he can keep going through a good year there will, no doubt be criticism of the Yankees for trading him off. If he should help the Cardinals win a pennant, chances are MacPhail and Mike Burke will be subjected to the same editorial massage DeWitt got last year for trading Robinson.

Yet the Yankees needn't apologize for the deal. They couldn't have kept Maris, at his salary, without playing him. That would delay the development of young ones like Steve Whitaker and Bill Robinson, who represent an investment in the future.

If one or both of these kids achieves maturity this summer, this may turn out to be one of those deals we often hear about and seldom see, the trade that helps both clubs. Red Schoendienst and Stan Musial will be satisfied, however, if it just helps one.

Colt, Mack Leagues Get Started Today

Carnarvon Pony League got the jump on the 1967 minor baseball season at Carnarvon Park Saturday when One-Stop Service blasted Brown's Florists, 16-4, in the season opener.

Ricky Smith, a 14-year-old pitcher, stole the opening day show.

Smith gave up just six hits while striking out 10 and allowing only three walks. At the plate he banged out two singles and a triple to drive in three runs.

Official opening ceremonies at Carnarvon will be held today after the first game of a split tripleheader.

Evening Optimists play Rotary at 12:30 p.m., Carnarvons meet Cubs at 3 p.m. and Jokers play Estevan Merchants at 5 p.m.

Victoria Colt League plays its first games today, with a split doubleheader at Topaz Park.

Smith Cedar Products play Victoria Social Club at 1 p.m. and Evening Optimists meet Carpenters at 3.

On Monday, Social Club plays Cedar Products at 6:30 p.m.

Also starting today is the Connie Mack League at Windsor Park, which is also scheduling a split tripleheader.

Cosmopolitan Royals and Evening Optimists meet at 12:30 p.m. followed by Victoria Optimist and Painters at 3:30 and Bernies and Al's Esso at 6 p.m.

LITTLE LEAGUERS

Three Little Leagues holding ceremonies today are Gordon Head at Majestic Park, American at Allenby Park and James Bay at Macdonald Park.

Each league is starting with a split doubleheader.

At Gordon Head, Al's Esso meet Foresters at 1 p.m. followed by Cablevision and Ventreights at 3 p.m.

At Allenby Park, Evening Optimists and Cablevision meet at 12:45 p.m. followed by Tuglets and Oak Bay Optimists at 3:15 while at Macdonald, Totems play Vic Sports at 1:15 with Jeune Bros. meeting Optimists at 3:30.

Host Teams Gain Split At Langford

Host Langford teams managed a win and a loss in the first day's play of the Langford Centennial Juvenile Soccer tournament at Belmont High School yesterday.

Langford won its Division VII game, 2-1 from View Royal while Saanich Thistle defeated Cadboro Bay Gyros, 4-1.

Duncan Comets defeated Langford, 5-4, on penalty kicks when the teams remained tied, 2-2, after two overtime periods in the Division V competition. Duncan Legion won the other match, 4-1, from View Royal Eagles.

The tournament concludes today with play starting at 10:30 a.m. and the trophy presentations at 3 p.m.

Adanacs Serve Warning

COQUITLAM—Coquitlam Adanacs, not to be outdone by Victoria Shamrocks, pounded New Westminster Salmonbellies, 19-3, in an exhibition box lacrosse game Saturday.

Shamrocks had dumped New Westminster, 16-3, in the Inter-City League opener Wednesday but the Victoria win was more impressive as Salmonbellies were without six regulars while Coquitlam was at full strength.

Gord Gimple, Bill Bradley and Fred Usselman each scored three goals for the winners, Jim Watson, Mike Gates and Alec Carey scored two each with singles coming from John Surinak, John Allen and George Longman.

Bill Wilkes with two goals and Wayne Bellwood scored for New Westminster.

Jerome Star Of Seattle Track Meet

SEATTLE (AP) — Olympic star Harry Jerome rallied on the last lap of the mile relay Saturday to win the event for the Vancouver Optimist Striders and give them victory in a triangular track and field meet.

The Striders edged the Washington frosh 70-67. The Vancouver Olympic Club was third with 44 points.

Jerome also won easy victories in the 100 and 220-yard dashes and anchored Striders' winning 440-yard relay squad.

He ran the 100 in 9.9 seconds and the 220 in 22.4 seconds, both far off his best times.

Hoop Star Demands $300,000

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Walker of Providence, who may become the first $300,000 rookie in pro basketball, tops the list of college players up for grabs in the National Basketball Association draft this week.

Detroit has the first pick in the draft opening here Wednesday and everyone expects that the Pistons will tap the 6-foot-3 All-American who was the leading major college scorer last season with a 30.4 average.

Detroit, which finished last in the western division of the NBA, got the first pick by winning a flip of a coin with Baltimore, the last place team in the eastern division.

Walker, who already has been drafted by Indianapolis in the new American Basketball Association, said several weeks ago that his goal for turning pro was $300,000.

Speedway Opener Gets Huge Crowd

Western Speedway opened its 1967 season Saturday night with the largest first-night crowd in the track's 14-year history.

A total of 3,980 paid admissions were counted and with children under-12 admitted free, the crowd was estimated at well over the 4,000 mark.

Roy Haslam turned in the fastest time of the night, completing the circuit in 21.52.

Ross Surgenor captured the "A" trophy dash with Roy Haslam finishing second after Bob Bissenden and Rick Stanley spun out together in the last lap.

The only rollover came in the 20-lap "B" main event where Barry Little upended on the second lap but was uninjured.

Next racing at Western is on Saturday when inter-city modified Indianapolis style racing cars will be on hand. As a special feature, Victoria Motors Sports Club is sponsoring two sports car races.

Saturday's results:

"A" trophy dash—1. Ross Surgenor 2. Roy Haslam.

"B" trophy dash—1. Mel Marshall 2. Gary Haskell 3. Jim Caldwell.

Fund-Raising Match An Over-All Failure

By ROBIN JEFFREY

There's a soccer admonition when a team is scoring lots of goals and playing well: "Save some for next week."

At that rate, Victoria O'Keefes ought to have plenty of class left for next weekend's Kennedy Cup in Vancouver, for O'Keefes didn't use much in drawing, 2-2, with UBC Thunderbirds in an exhibition soccer match Saturday at Macdonald Park.

The crowd of 351 was about large enough for O'Keefes to break even on a game which was originally supposed to make money for Kennedy Cup expenses.

NO CLASSIC

It was scarcely a classic match.

O'Keefe's trailed, 1-0, for much of it, and the big-game incentive was obviously missing. Under the circumstances, it would have been more remarkable (and perhaps more cause for worry for O'Keefe fans) if the club had played well.

OFF TARGET

O'Keefes' shooting was hopelessly erratic, and although they sent 23 shots at the UBC goal in the first half, only five were on the net. None went in.

And at 18 minutes, UBC centre forward Alan Martin first-timed a cross from Harry Lendvoy past goalie Barry Sadler from about six yards.

Martin Taylor tied it for O'Keefes 25 minutes after the interval with a left-footer, and Dunc McCaig appeared to have the winner when he converted Russ Ball's long diagonal pass five minutes from time.

PLAY SATURDAY

O'Keefes play Los Angeles at Empire Stadium in Vancouver at 7 p.m. Saturday. The winner meets the victor of the 9 p.m. Mexico - San Francisco game, Sunday at 3 p.m. The losers play Sunday at 1.

Tickets for the Kennedy Cup are on sale at Victoria Sporting Goods.

Tickets for O'Keefes' game with English FA Cup finalist Chelsea at Royal Athletic Park May 30 go on sale at Memorial Arena May 10.

UBC—Bruce Ballam, Jim Berry, Sandy Beveridge, Bill Sinclair, John Humphries, Ian Daniel, Robbie Goodheart (New Westminster), Allan Safarik, Alan Martin, Ash Valdal, Harry Lendvoy. Reserves: Joe Johnson, Oscar Valdal (University of Victoria).

Runs for Roses on Saturday

Damascus Favored in Derby

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The Kentucky Derby will be run for the 93rd time Saturday at rambling Churchill Downs with highly favored Damascus giving America's premier horse race old but familiar overtones.

The well-built son of Sword Dancer-Kerala, owned by Virginia's Mrs. Edith W. Bancroft, will carry the white and red dot silks made famous by such Kentucky Derby winners as Gallant Fox in 1930, Omaha in 1935 and Johnstown in 1939 when the Belair Stud was all-powerful.

KEPT SILKS

Mrs. Bancroft, a comparative newcomer to the sport, kept the silks when the Belair Stud was dispersed several years ago following the death of her brother, William Woodward Jr.

The colors were originated by William Woodward Sr. founder of the racing dynasty and whose horses were trained by racing immortal Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons.

EXPECT 15 RUNNERS

Despite Damascus' imposing career record of six victories and two seconds with a 3-1 performance this year, Churchill Downs officials look for a field of 15 three-year-olds.

If that many start, the value of the Derby will be $153,700 with victory at the end of the 1¼ miles bringing $111,200 to the fortunate owner. Second place will be worth $25,000, third $12,500 and fourth $5,000.

The trainer and jockey of the winner each will receive 10 per cent of the first place purse.

Picking the second choice for a race, which but for the presence of Damascus would figure to be wide open, is a difficult talk. But that position in the betting likely will go to Louis Rowan's Ruken, little-known at the start of the year. But he qualified for the first of the Triple Crown series, which also includes the Preakness and Belmont Stakes, by winning the Santa Anita Derby and then whipping Successor in a seven-furlong warm-up at Keeneland.

OTHER HOPES

With the possibility that the one-mile of Tuesday's Derby Trial may cause a change of minds, the remainder of the field figures to include Successor, who had enough of an excuse in the Blue Grass to warrant another chance in the opinion of trainer Eddie Neloy; Reason to Hail, winner of the California Derby; Canadian-owned Cool Reception; Ask the Fare; Puerto Rico-owned Dawn Glory, a starter by popular request of his home land fans; [illegible] Stakes-winner Diplomat Way; Tumble Wird, Gentleman James, Proud Clarion, Lightning Orphan, Dr. Isby, Barbs Delight, Free Tumble and possibly Betemight and Second Encounter.

Willie Shoemaker, winner of three previous Derbies in 15 rides, will be aboard Damascus.

He spotted the colt last year when he rode him to victory in the Remsen and never has backed down in his opinion. Shoe last won in 1965 with Lucky Debonair.

He also scored with Tomy Lee in 1959 and with Swaps in 1955.

Goalby Stymied By Bogey Binge

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — Bob Goalby bogied the final four holes of the third round to drop into a three-way tie for the lead in the $100,000 Texas Open Saturday.

Tied with Goalby after 54 holes at 210 were Billy Casper, who fired a 69 Saturday, and Miller Barber, who had a 67.

TWO AT 211

Bob Charles, who shared the second-round lead with Goalby, had 211, along with Chi Chi Rodriguez.

A high wind bothered the pros all afternoon, as it did both of the earlier rounds.

Goalby dropped a 20-foot putt on eight for a birdie, a 40-foot putt on nine for an eagle and a 10-foot putt on 10 for a birdie.

TREE TROUBLES

"I hit a tree on the 13th and lost my confidence after that," he said.

Goalby three-putted 15, was in a bunker on 16, hit another tree on 17 and was again in a bunker on 18 to card his four straight bogies.

Charles needed only a par on the 18th to share the lead, but hit a ditch and a trap and bogeyed the hole. Rodriguez also had a good shot at the lead after nine holes, but bogeyed No. 15 and then double bogeyed the last hole.

Four pros are at one-under-par 212 and six are at par 213 as the tightly bunched field entered Sunday's final round.

TURNING POINT

Goalby, who also bogeyed the first hole, pointed toward the 12th hole, where he missed an eight-foot birdie putt as his downfall.

"If I had made that, it might have gone a different way," he said. "I'm fortunate I'm still in the lead, the way I finished. It could have been worse."

Casper, happy with his green play, dropped birdie putts of six, three and four feet and two-putted from 50 feet for another bird. He also dropped a 25-footer on No. 11.

Still Working

Barry Von Gerbig, owner of the California Seals of the new National Hockey League division, announced yesterday in Montreal that Rudy Pilous is still the general-manager of his club. Gerbig said he made the statement to "clear the air" after rumors Pilous had been deposed. Gerbig confirmed that Frankie Selke, Jr., has been appointed club president.

Ryun Runs Fast Mile In Relays

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Jim Ryun, world's greatest middle distance runner, celebrated his 20th birthday by anchoring Kansas to a world distance medley relay record with a 3:55.6 mile in the windup of the 58th Drake relays Saturday.

The Kansas quartet, picked up tremendously by Ryun's fifth best mile of his sensational career, was clocked in 9:33.8. That knocked two-tenths of a second off the accepted world, American and national collegiate record of 9:34.0 by UCLA in 1965.

In the 20-event closing session under murky skies, a capacity Drake Stadium crowd of 18,000 saw nine meet records smashed, and one tied, producing a two-day total of 12 Drake marks.

Pastrano, 31 May Return

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP)— Willie Pastrano, the dancing dandy who was nearly maimed while losing his light-heavyweight title to Jose Torres 26 months ago, says he may come out of retirement.

Pastrano, 31, has been training for five days and will give himself about three more weeks before he definitely decides to resume his ring career.

Bonspiel, Tennis Tourney To Open New Family Club

Curling and tennis will get a simultaneous competetive start at the Victoria Racquets Club, whose new premises are rapidly nearing completion.

Manager Joe Bodien has announced that a tennis tournament and a bonspiel will be held the week of June 12-17 to mark the opening of Victoria's first recreational family club.

The official opening will take place on Friday, June 23, with Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes officiating.

HAVE SIX SHEETS

The bonspiel will be held on six sheets of ice in the about-to-be completed skating rink, which has an ice surface 185x85 feet. Curlers will share the building with skaters for the first season but will ultimately have their own ice surface.

Limited to 48 rinks, the bonspiel is for mixed rinks of two men and two women with the distaff curlers to throw third and lead rocks.

Rinks will curl through three events on a Chisholm draw with all draws in the evenings.

There will be draws at 5:30, 7:45 and 10 on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, leaving only the finals for a draw early Saturday night.

The bonspiel offers prizes for the 12 rinks reaching the semi-finals plus individual trophies for the three event winners. The prize presentation and a dance will follow the finals.

Entry fee is $24 a rink and entries should be mailed or brought to the Victoria Racquet Club office at 3964 Gordon Head Road. A minimum deposit of $12 is required with each entry. Further information may be obtained by telephoning 477-1801.

SKATING MAY 24

Ice is expected to be ready by May 24 and the hard courts for tennis will also be ready for play well in advance of the tournament.

Plans call for a week or 10 days of skating before the bonspiel. Skaters will take over again after the bonspiel with ice to be kept in during the summer months for skating and a summer figure-skating school.

Punting Ace Picks Argos

TORONTO — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League have announced the signing of a punter who had the second best punting average in U.S. college football last year.

He is Ray Scott, a six-foot, seven-inch 240-pound defensive end who played last year with Prairie View A. & M.

Drafted ninth by New York Jets of the American Football League, Scott averaged 46.1 yards a punt in 1966. He is also rated as the toughest defensive end in his conference.

Cassius May Expect Only Fringe Support

By MILTON RICHMAN

NEW YORK (UPI) — Cassius Clay finally made it.

Today he is a martyr. Some martyr!

In case he's curious about the immediate reaction of the so-called man in the street over his refusal to be sworn into the U.S. army, it was what is known as generally mixed, which in this case means generally poor.

Some were resentful of his stand in Houston; others were rather indifferent. None stood up and cheered his show of martyrdom.

UNSYMPATHETIC

The first two men asked their opinions may or may not have been representative, but one was white and the other Negro and both their answers were more or less like a majority of the others.

"I went," declared the first fellow.

"Who the hell is he?" snapped the second.

Clay says the only thing anyone ever leaves behind when he dies is his good name, and then he promptly tosses names around like Jesus, Columbus and Abraham Lincoln, the implication naturally being that one day his name may be bracketed with theirs.

LONG JOURNEY

He has a way to go before that. A long way.

En route he wouldn't be badly advised to detour a bit to a good dictionary where it also would not be a bad idea for him to look up the word which obviously means so much to him: Martyr.

The dictionary here lists several meanings and Clay is free to choose whichever suits him.

1—One who voluntarily suffers death as the penalty of refusing to renounce his religion.

2—A great or constant sufferer. or,

3—One who adopts a specious air of suffering or deprivation as a means of attracting sympathy or attention.

Clay already has said he would die for his religion. But that wasn't the first thing he said in the prepared statement he handed out personally in Houston. The first thing he referred to there was his world heavyweight title, without which, even he admits, his voice doesn't carry so far.

"I am looking forward to immediately continuing my profession," he said. "As to the threat voiced by certain elements to strip me of my title, this is merely a continuation of the same artificially-induced prejudice and discrimination."

POOR WAGER?

Clay went on to say that the "sports fans and fair-minded people throughout America" never would accept any other title-holder who would come out of an elimination tournament.

Don't bet on it, Cassius!

The sports fans and fair-minded people throughout America have accepted a lot of things in their time. Maybe the best illustration of that is that they even accepted Cassius Clay and his beliefs for a while.

By his stand, Clay now is liable to prosecution by the justice department. It doesn't seem to worry him that much, nor does he seem overly concerned that he is being stripped of his boxing licence by one state commission after another and suddenly the country may be closing in on him.

IT'S HIS COUNTRY

No matter how loud or long Clay talks, this still is his country.

He was born here, he made his reputation here and he was able to speak up as he did because he was here. Also, whenever he fought abroad they always listed him as being from the United States. He never objected then. He didn't have them change it to Mecca or Mars.

SOME HAVE PITY

Now he has made his decision and because of it some people are angry with him and some are sorry for him. William Faverham, the Louisville businessman who is his friend and who helped get him started on his professional boxing career, belongs to the second group.

"I'm very sorry Cassius has taken this stand," he said. "I feel it is rather tragic that he felt he had to go this far."

Champion Discovers Supporter

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Luis Spota, president of the World boxing Council, said Saturday he sees no reason to withdraw his group's recognition of Cassius Clay as heavyweight boxing champion.

"We cannot mix in political problems of the United States," Spota said. "I think the attitude of the World Boxing Association and the New York Athletic Commission is totally unfair."

The WBA and the New York commission took the title away from Clay Friday after he refused to be inducted into military service.

"There are no reasons in the sport to take the championship away from a pacifist who considers war unjust," Spota said.

"We respect his decision not to fight with a rifle and kill humans. Only two ways exist to take a title from a champion: by losing it in the ring or by breaking the rules of the sport."

Celtic Cup Victor

GLASGOW (CP)—Inside forward Willie Wallace fired two goals today and led Glasgow Celtic to a 2-0 soccer victory over Aberdeen in the final of the Scottish Cup. Celtic led 1-0 at half-time.

The Glasgow team also has won a place in the final of the European Cup of Champions.

Aberdeen might still get a place in the European Cup of Cup winners next season.

Celtic is likely to win the Scottish League, too, and in that case would compete in the Cup of Champions again next season, whether or not it wins the final of the big tournament in Lisbon May 25. Aberdeen would then play in the Cup winners' cup as Scotland's defeated finalist.

Jimmy Greaves, Tottenham's international inside forward, put his team on the victory path by scoring after 30 minutes with a long - range shot. Frank Saul clinched the game for the Spurs with a goal in the 66th, minute. The victory was Tottenham's 19th without defeat.

Tony Hateley scored for Chelsea a minute before halftime. A hairline offside decision prevented Leeds from scoring in the 84th minute when inside forward Cooper netted the ball only to have the referee give a free kick to Chelsea.

LOSE AGAIN

A minute from the end the referee disallowed another Leeds goal. Peter Lorimer beat the Chelsea goal-keeper following a free kick, but the referee apparently had not signalled for the kick to be made.

In English League play Manchester United crept a step closer to the Division I title with a 3-1 victory over Aston Villa. Manchester has a five-point lead over Nottingham Forest.

Coventry beat the Wolves, 3-1, in the Second Division. Both Coventry and the Wolves had previously made certain of promotion but Saturday's match had a bearing on who would win the Second Division championship. With two games left, the rivals are tied with 56 points from 40 games played.

In the Third Division, Bristol Rovers boosted their promotion hopes with a 2-1 victory over leading Queens Park Rangers.

In Scotland, the Rangers tied Dundee 1-1 and almost certainly presented rival Celtic with the Scottish League championship.

Bluebacks Crowd Waters

The fish are ready now for King Fisherman anglers, as proven by this catch of eight bluebacks from Chatham Point, north of Campbell River, and 12 rainbow trout from Lower Campbell Lake. Lucky anglers are Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Forrer, of Le Mont-Dore, France, who were guests at Painter's Lodge last week. A lucky King Fisherman angler will win a holiday weekend for two at Painter's Lodge in July, just when those bluebacks have reached seven and eight-pound fighting coho size.

The pattern for winning Coho Prince Buttons for May in the Colonist King Fisherman Contest may be a little different this year.

It all depends how long the unprecedented run of coho grilse (bluebacks) now in lower Island waters stays around this area.

Not within memory have so many grilse congregated in these waters, and not for so long. They are still there and they are getting fatter and fatter. If they stick around long enough Sidney to Port Renfrew sports fishermen may be able to pick up qualifying five-pound coho by the end of May.

First Wave

Usually the bluebacks reach the five-pound coho qualifying size during the last weekend in May in the Lantzville to Deep Bay waters. This is the first wave of coho grilse to make its way northward from Crofton waters.

Usually only a few reach the five-pound class by the end of May. Seldom does the King Fisherman Contest issue a full quota of 25 Coho Prince Buttons in May.

Last year 11 were issued ... three from Deep Bay, one from Qualicum Beach, two from Campbell River, one from Lantzville, two from Oak Bay, two from Bates Beach. Heaviest was six pounds from Deep Bay and any five-pounder qualified for a button.

April Fish

Prince Buttons will be awarded again in this year's Canadian Centennial Edition of the King Fisherman Contest which opened Saturday. Fish caught in the last two days of April will count as May fish.

Buttons will be awarded each month for the 25 heaviest spring (chinook) salmon, 25 heaviest coho, 25 heaviest tyee, 15 heaviest lake trout (trout caught in a lake,) 15 heaviest bass, 15 heaviest river trout, with five buttons, including one gold for other than rainbow and steelhead.

Gold-plated Prince Buttons will be awarded for the heaviest fish in each category each month.

Near Victoria

Anglers don't have to go far from Victoria to win Prince Buttons for spring (chinook) salmon in May. Honors usually gravitate between Oak Bay, Victoria and Saanich Peninsula waters.

Last year in May Saanich Inlet led with nine button winners and Oak Bay had seven. Esquimalt produced one, Sooke two, Pedder Bay one, Chemainus one, Deep Bay two, and Active Pass one.

Heaviest was 27.12 pounds from Coles Bay which was the Inlet's hot spot and smallest qualifier was 18.13 pounds from Deep Bay, where it is possible to win both a coho and spring (chinook) button in the same month of May.

Interesting news for spring (chinook) fishermen is that on the other side of Juan de Fuca from Swiftsure to Port Angeles sports anglers are enjoying one of the biggest spring (chinook) salmon runs within memory of sports fishermen. Big concentration has been at Neah Bay and La Push, just across the Strait from Sooke.

Hatchery Fish?

Big IF is whether or not they will cross to this side of the Strait, and whether or not they are the spring (chinooks) which usually come to our waters. Of special interest is whether or not these spring (chinooks) are American hatchery-raised fish.

Cowichan Lake is the hot spot for trout in May, especially big ones. Last year Cowichan produced eight of 15 Prince Button winners in May. Nahmint Lake gave up three. Lower Campbell one, Roberts Lake one and Great Central two.

Beaver Heaviest

Heaviest was an eight-pounder from Nahmint Lake and smallest qualifier was a 4.13-pounder from Great Central Lake.

Elk Lake is hot spot for smallmouth bass in May with six button winners last May. Beaver and Spider Lakes each produced three, St. Mary one, Prospect one and Matheson one. Heaviest was five pounds from Beaver and smallest button qualifier 3.6 pounds.

Last May Koksilah River gave up four steelhead in May to win Prince Buttons.

Cayeuse, Chemainus, Somass, Cowichan, Nitinat and Nanaimo Rivers each gave up one button winner in the steelhead class. Heaviest was a 14.14-pounder from Cayeuse and smallest a 6.10-pounder from Koksilah.

China Creek

In the other than steelhead or rainbow category Campbell River and Cowichan River each produced two Prince Button winners. China Creek and Englishman River produced one each. Heaviest was a 5.12 cutthroat from China Creek and smallest qualifier a 3.14-pounder from Cowichan River.

Anglers may win only one Prince Button in each category, each year, except for Gold Prince Buttons which will be awarded to the heaviest fish in each category each month.

Sleeping Bag

The anglers catching the heaviest fish in each category for the entire six months of the King Fisherman Contest will win handsome King Fisherman trophies.

If they are Colonist subscribers they will also win valuable merchandise prizes.

Heaviest lake trout will win a Black's down-filled polar sleeping bag donated by Jeune Bros. of Victoria. Heaviest river trout will win a down-filled sportsman's jacket, pants and parka, donated by Jeune Bros.

Heaviest bass will win an Imperial Esso prize valued at $100.

Heaviest Tyee

Victoria Photo Supply will give an Agfamatic 1A 35-millimetre camera kit for the heaviest tyee.

Colwood Pharmacy will give a zoom lens moving picture camera for the heaviest spring (chinook) salmon.

T. Eaton Co. will give a Viking three-horsepower outboard motor for the heaviest coho and also an Elizabeth Arden fitted cosmetic case as a contest-long hidden weight prize for women anglers.

The King Fisherman Contest is open to all anglers, resident and non-resident, Colonist subscribers or non-subscribers, who fish Vancouver Island waters, except professional guides, holders of commercial fishing licences, and Compleat Anglers who have won all Prince Buttons in any one year.

Students Paddle East to Expo

Two University of Victoria students will join the throng of "on-to-Expo" enthusiasts next week, when they take off from Hudson Hope in a frail cedar canoe, intent on arriving in Montreal about September.

Kenneth McRae, 21, and Geoffrey Davis, 20, both of Kimberley, are taking off on their own centennial project with little but courage, enthusiasm and a cursory knowledge of the problems they will encounter.

The two youths, both pre-law students, have plotted their course as well as possible with the maps available. The rigors of the journey and the barriers of nature, however, are comparatively unknown.

COURSE SET

Their 18-foot canoe weighs 80 pounds; their tent, sleeping bags and lifejackets weigh 15 pounds; their food load is yet to be determined.

Both youths have done some canoeing, but have never undertaken a journey of such magnitude before. They have studied the watersheds, read some history of the French-Canadien voyageurs, and set their course on paper.

After they arrive in Montreal, the boys hope to sell their canoe to make enough money to come back home for the university term.

Old Trail Topic Tuesday

The old West Coast trail from Bamfield to Port Renfrew will be discussed at the next meeting of the Victoria branch of the English-Speaking Union in the Art Gallery at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

R. Bruce Scott will show colored slides and give a commentary dealing with the southwest coast of the Island.

A proposal is being made to the department of recreation to re-open the trail which was built before the turn of the century to maintain communication between lighthouses as a life-saving trail for shipwrecked mariners.

Visitors are invited.

Garden Notes

They're All Yours!

By M. V. CHESNUT

If this column has appeared to be a bit distraught over the past week or so, it is because I have been suffering from a bad case of the fidgets — fretting over the non-arrival of seeds for our third Colonist free seed offer.

I had set my heart on obtaining seeds of a certain flower almost unknown here, and it has taken me three years to find a seed grower who could provide me with sufficient quantity to supply our loyal Colonist readers. When the seeds didn't arrive on the promised delivery date, I was afraid some seednapper had highjacked my precious shipment, hence the case of jitters. Fortunately, the express man has just staggered in with the long-lost sack of seeds, so we're back in business again.

Our free seeds this time are of a lovely and easy-to-grow flower seldom seen in our gardens hereabouts; in fact, in my entire collection of Canadian and U.S. catalogues, I find it listed by only one seedsman. Its name is malope, pronounced mallow-pee, and it is known affectionately to European gardeners as Mallow Marvel.

I have known and admired this flower for quite a long time without knowing its name; it took me two years to get it identified and another three years to find out where I could buy the seeds. It is quite a story:

Five years ago, a lady sent me a dried flower carefully pressed between sheets of blotting paper and asked me to name it. She had found it blooming in her garden and was so thrilled with it, she wanted to know its name so she could buy seeds and grow it again.

I couldn't name it. It was a most beautiful dark red flower with veins of deeper red in its petals, and while it reminded me somewhat of a tropical hibiscus, I didn't have a clue as to its identity.

That summer I must have had at least 40 requests to name this gorgeous flower, and the following summer there were even more. The folks who had the plant growing in their garden couldn't remember ordering any unusual seeds, but all of them had fallen for it in a big way and wanted to grow it again. Gradually, though, a pattern emerged, although it took quite a bit of detective work on my part to find out how it got into their gardens.

It seems all these people had bought their garden seeds from the same catalogue seedsman. It was the practice of this firm to enclose, as a free gift with every order, a packet of mixed flower seeds suitable for children's gardens or for scattering haphazardly in the wild parts of the garden. It became evident that our mystery flower arrived in this seed mixture.

I checked with the seedsman. He didn't know the name of the flower, but I learned that he bought the seed mixture for his gift packets from a seed grower in Holland. So I wrote to the Netherlands.

The Dutch grower told me he threw all his leftover flower seeds into a bin at the end of the season, and it was from this bin of mixed flower seeds that orders for the so-called "Wildflower Mixture" were filled. In further correspondence and by sending him one of my pressed flowers, I learned the mystery flower which had so delighted my correspondents was malope trifida grandiflora, the Mallow Marvel.

These, then, are the seeds I have for you. Here is a flower which came to this country as an average seed in a cheap mixture from a rubbish bin in Holland; the seeds were scattered and grown without any care at all, yet the plants survived this casual treatment, and the flower captivated the heart of every gardener who saw it.

This week I'll give you a few pointers on where and how to grow your Mallow Marvels. In the meantime, I suggest you write in for your free packet of malope seeds. Don't forget to enclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

SHEILAH GRAHAM Visits Head of Desilu

They're Needling Lucy

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Lucille Ball, suffering with an undiagnosed allergy, is taking 40 shots a day, and her upper arms — 20 shots in each — look like pincushions with the pins removed.

"The doctor doesn't know yet which allergy I have, so I'm getting shots for every known thing," said Lucille to this reporter in her magnificent suite of offices at the Desilu studio. The shots are for dust, tapioca, Bermuda grass, and tobacco. You name it, Lucille's getting it . . .the discomfort is not interfering with her preparations for The Beardsley Story, her first picture, with Henry Fonda, since her movie, The Critics' Choice, several years ago with Bob Hope.

"The last time I worked with Hank," she told me, "was in The Big Street in 1940. We've been friends for years, and I'm delighted we'll be working together again. We're changing the title, and some of the story line. This is about Helen North with eight children and Frank Beardsley with 10 who were married with all kids at the wedding. I believe they now have 19 or 20 between them. In actual life, he was a retired naval officer. With so many kids, we'll have him still working."

She looked around with pride at her office with the huge modern desk, comfortable settee, large armchairs, and a tea cart with its silver tea set and told me, "Gary designed all this for me." Husband Gary Morton also refurbished the board room at which Lucille — as president of Desilu — has presided at the meetings. "Why did you sell the company to the people who bought Paramount?" I wanted to know. "It was such a marvellous deal — $17,000,000 — for the stockholders," she replied, "I couldn't turn it down. From the onset, I knew I couldn't sit here with all that stock. Don't forget, I gave Desi $3,500,000 in the settlement." I remarked on how casually she had said $3,500,000. The way she said it, it sounded more like $3½.

She shrugged. "Everything is invested. It's paper, Sheilah, paper; it's bank loans and mortgages. Big business is elusive. I never see a paycheque. The only money I see is what I give the kids for spending money. Five dollars each week."

Young Desi will be 14 in June. Lucy is 15.

"The first bank account I had was across the street from the Goldwyn studio." When she was a chorus girl in the Eddie Cantor musicals. "My kids," she confided, "have a hard row to hoe, and then we compound the fracture by Desi having his own group. They say, 'Just because you're the son of Lucille Ball and Desi Arnaz, you think you're good, huh?' But nothing can stop him not making it from the way he acts. He's become a really great drummer. But he doesn't want to be a drummer. He plays the organ, the piano, the vibes (xylophone).

"Lucy is a fine little actress, and she'll have a big career if that's what she wants to do. Her highest grade is in drama. They are both B average students, and I make sure they stay up there. When Desi was grounded with two D's, for two months, he couldn't take telephone calls, no swimming, no friends, no television. At the end of it all, he said, 'I guess I accomplished something.' I suffered as much as he did. But when I saw how he buckled down, and the way he respected me, it was worth it."

The I Love Lucy show will be starting its 16th season in the fall. "Fifteen years in the same spot," she said with justifiable pride. "I'll be working for the next 12 months without a vacation. You can put this down: I have no thought of retiring."

MGM will fly in more than 200 reporters from the five continents of the world, for the June premiere of The Dirty Dozen. All 12 stars have promised to be present — that's a nice change — with Lee Marvin as No. 1 host for the press.

Sylvia Koscina is co-starring with Paul Newman at Universal in Meanwhile, Far from The Front. But in real life she is starring in that girlie magazine wearing nothing but her birthday suit. I have not yet discovered why these lovely talented girls are impelled to strip for the casual reader. Can someone explain this?

ART BUCHWALD on the Powell Revelation

There Goes the Faith, Baby

WASHINGTON — Mrs. Adam Clayton Powell, wife of the frequently-elected congressman, has just written in the Ladies Home Journal that her husband told her he was not a Negro. This news has shattered the prejudices of everyone in this country, both white and black, and no one knows if we'll be able to recover from it.

As soon as I read about it, I went up to the Capitol to speak to members of Congress to see if they might change their position on Powell now that they know he is white.

The first congressman I spoke to said, "It doesn't change my position at all. If there's anything I hate it's an uppity white man."

Another congressman said: "We did not kick Powell out of Congress because of his color. Why, some of my best friends are white folk. I used to play with white children when I was a boy. I grew up with white people, white people work for me, and even today I cherish my white friendships. But Adam Clayton Powell is a disgrace to the white race and he's set the Caucasian cause back in this country by 100 years."

A third congressman was shocked by the news. "This puts a whole different shade on the issue," he said. "We may now have to look at this in a new light."

"Does that mean you might vote to seat him?"

"Well, he really didn't do anything wrong, did he? I mean, he might not have kept accurate books, and he could have been loose with his expenses. But many of us would have done the same thing if we had been in his position. You give a white man all that power and he's bound to run away with himself. I think he should at least be given another chance."

A southern congressman was so mad when I broke the news that he could hardly talk. "If there's anything worse than a black man passing as one of us, it's a white man passing as one of them. How can we judge people fairly if we don't know what race they belong to? I think we should find out how many more white people are pretending they're black so they can reap the benefits of the Great Society."

A liberal congressman said: "If we don't seat Adam Clayton Powell this time, the white people all over America are going to rise up in anger and take out their frustrations on this Congress. Adam Clayton Powell may not have been punished because he is white, but the important thing is that the white people think he was, and he has now become a rallying cause for 'white power.'"

"Then you predict a long hot summer with white riots in the streets?"

"It could come to that. The white people are getting tired of having everyone promise them things and no one delivering them. They see in Adam Clayton Powell not a wrongdoer, but someone who is being punished only because he's a Caucasian.

Several Negro leaders were also upset by the revelation that Powell told his wife he was white. One said: "I've got nothing against Adam Clayton Powell personally, but I think he should be punished as an example to other members of Congress who think they can get away with anything, just because we've mistreated the white people all these years."

A militant Negro said, "Well, there goes the faith, baby. The only thing that can save us now is if Sen. Dodd turns out to be one of us."

The last Negro I spoke to just shook his head and said, "And to think Powell wanted to marry my sister."

Saanich Inlet Sewage Plan Rapped Again

Fifteen property-owners in the Brentwood Bay area endorse a brief that condemns Central Saanich's plans to dump treated sewage into Saanich Inlet.

Their spokesman is Victoria merchant T. G. Denny, who on Saturday released copies of correspondence he has had with the Pollution Control Board on the sewage proposal.

They argue that the municipality should conform to a suggestion made in the Greater Victoria Sewerage Study and extend the disposal system into 200 feet of water instead of the planned 100 feet.

BEACH POLLUTION

The municipality is anxious to connect homes in the Brentwood Bay area to a sewer system because existing septic tanks are causing beach pollution. There have been fears that this pollution could precipitate an epidemic of disease.

Also on Saturday, Dr. Michael Healy, an oceanographer with the University of Washington in Seattle, telephoned the Colonist to say he wants to come to any public hearings the Pollution Control Board has on the proposal.

Dr. Healy last week condemned the scheme on the basis that tidal action of Saanich Inlet is so slight that it wouldn't remove the volume of sewage which would be discharged into the water.

CENTURIES-OLD WATER

Enqual, the organization of Victoria scientists and other specialists interested in environmental quality, also pointed out that water in the deeper regions of Saanich Inlet does not change and it is possible it could be the same water today as that which occupied those depths centuries ago.

Mr. Denny said in a letter to Central Saanich's Reeve R. G. Lee:

"The goup of people that I represent are greatly concerned that the proposed installation will in no way, shape or form comply with the recommendations contained in the sewage study."

There has been no word from the Pollution Control Board on whether a hearing will be held.

Survey Indicates Shortcomings

City High School Graduates Not Prepared for Jobs

By NANCY BROWN

Victoria's high school graduates are becoming unhireable.

A report from business and industrial leaders which will form part of an education survey says the students are not made aware that they have to go to work.

They cannot write a decent letter; don't know how to present themselves for a job interview; and their manner of speaking has to be translated to make sense in the adult world.

MEETING MAY 25

Mrs. C. Y. Brown, of the Association of Women Electors, said Saturday these were some of the opinions of the school system which will be presented at a general meeting of the association on May 25.

Mrs. Brown said the association was conducting a survey of teachers and parents, to get opinions on the Greater Victoria schools.

She reported overwhelming response to the 500 questionnaires sent out to teachers, and the thousands sent to parents.

GREAT INTEREST

"Some replies are being received on copies of the questionnaires, which shows a very great interest."

Academic courses had been criticized by businessmen.

At one time they had had a stream of youngsters coming into the business world, well versed in shorthand, typing, bookkeeping and general office procedure.

JUST SMATTERING

Now these youngsters were taking an academic course with just a smattering of commercial courses, although they intended going into the business world.

Mrs. Brown said she and her committee were about two-thirds of the way through tabulating the replies.

There was a general interest by both parents and teachers in having a voluntary system of education in senior schools.

LOSING INTEREST

It was felt that high school students were losing interest in their education, because they were unable to choose their own courses.

If they weren't compelled to take certain courses, simply because they were in one stream or another, they would have time for those that did interest them.

Parents felt that added interest would bring higher grades.

UNWANTED COURSES

Teachers had pointed to the difficulty of maintaining discipline in many high school classes.

"They feel their problems stem from the students taking courses they don't want to take.

"If the compulsion was lifted from them their attitude would alter, and they would not be disturbing classes they didn't have to attend at all."

REFERENDUM

She said many teachers felt the school system did not allow them to help children nearly as much as they would like.

Mrs. Brown said one reason for conducting the survey at this time was to focus attention on the forthcoming school referendum.

Taxpayer Complaints Termed Legitimate

Homeowner's complaints about their share of school costs are legitimate, the president of the Greater Victoria Teacher's Association said Saturday night.

"The overall amount of money being pumped into the school system by the provincial government is niggardly," said Ray Wunderlich.

"School boards are told they have plenty of freedom. But when it comes to money to operate within those so-called freedoms, it just can't be found."

Mr. Wunderlich said that while he didn't have any quarrel with some of the government's basic formulas, its grants were not in line with current costs.

"The alternative to increasing grants is to increase the burden on the local taxpayer," he said, "and this is that has happened this year."

Mr. Wunderlich said he agreed with I. A. Isaacson, principal of Macaulay Elementary School, who told a service club last week that the government's system of grants was inadequate.

"When I see the attitude of the provincial government, words fail me," said Mr. Isaacson.

The chairman of the B.C. Teachers' Federation effective teaching and learning committee, he claimed:

- The government was five years behind the times in its contributions to teacher salary costs. It is paying 50 per cent of the salaries as they were five years ago.
- It hasn't kept the pupil-teacher ratio down to a level where students can be taught effectively.
- And it should appoint a full-time education minister. (Leslie Peterson now holds the education and labor portfolios.)

Mr. Isaacson added:

"I'm trying to avoid getting on a political platform on this issue but the failure to appoint a full-time minister seems to sum up their attitude to education."

Benefits of Ownership Out of Reach of Most

By JOHN MATTERS

The much-extolled concept of home ownership is "somewhat fatuous," says Coun. Edith Gunning of Saanich.

Most mortgage programs are financed under the National Housing Act, with federal funds, and "it thus turns out that many people are contributing to mortgage programs, through their federal taxes, which they themselves cannot use."

URGENT NEED

Coun. Gunning made her observations after returning from a housing conference sponsored by the University of B.C. The other Saanich representative was G. V. Laurenson of the municipality's planning department.

She said the most urgent need seems to be for reasonably-priced rental accommodation, including public housing for low-income groups.

Mrs. Gunning listed some suggested solutions for the housing problem:

- A full realization of the need in view of the burgeoning population; and a re-appraisal of attitudes toward housing, both in the means of providing it and its form.
- A change in the public's attitude toward acceptance of public housing.
- Formation of a so-called "third force" — a combination of private builders and municipal authorities working together on the land assembly-lease basis now in force in Ontario.

Oak Bay Slaves Successful

When emancipation time came Saturday night, 300 Oak Bay High School "slaves" had performed their tasks well and their centennial project was over the $1,000 target figure.

"I am really very pleased with the results," said school principal John G. Wallace. "It certainly showed wonderful spirit among the student body."

The students hired themselves out to residents for the day, performing a variety of chores.

The $1,000 figure was the amount the students had pledged themselves to earn for the B.C. high school project "schools-on-wheels."

Soviet Artists Win Applause

By BILL THOMAS

The Red Army Chorus and dancers literally pounded the stage apart Saturday in Memorial Arena. After two hours the artists were still going strong but the audience was weak from applauding each number for an encore.

For an opener the choir sang O Canada with such force and conviction that the words We Stand On Guard For Thee seemed a bit scary.

This is a troupe that has long since put aside the myth that these are bumble singing soldiers. These are trained graduates of the best conservatories in Russian. The soloists would be welcome on any opera stage in the world.

The choir's many fans got exactly what they came for: High tenor E. Belyaev sang Kalinka, Snowball Bush, bass L. Kharitonov sang the Volga Boatmen and the fabulous dancers whirled about the stage in a frenzy.

The dancers' routines were particularly impressive and transformed the program from a choral evening into a full scale entertainment.

SENSITIVE

The 100 member choir has been superbly trained by Boris Alexandrov who has managed to attain precision and control without any loss of sensitivity or feeling. The music is precise to the note but it has warmth and color.

Chief ballet master Alexander Radusid deserves a special compliment for his efforts.

Red Army singers couldn't understand a word photographer Jim Ryan was saying, but after some frustrating minutes and much sign language these four struck happy pose for him.

THE DAILY BRITISH COLONIST.

April 30, 1867

Just received at Victoria House by express, the prettiest bonnets and hats ever imported into the Colony and of the fashions now prevailing in Europe, the goods only having left England on the 17th of March; and also the latest styles of trimmings, lace shawls, silk mantles, jackets, brilliants and French prints and every description of spring goods.

Mr. Robert Byrne, while riding a spirited horse past the corner of Wharf and Fort Street yesterday afternoon, was thrown from the saddle of the shying animal and fell among a heap of broken bottles. He was severely cut on the hands and bruised about the body and was compelled to seek medical advice.

The post office, it is said, will shortly be removed to the Southgate Building on Bastion Street and the customhouse to the treasury building in James Bay.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

On Monday, the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. Pearkes will travel to Langley, where they will attend the ceremony for the inauguration of the Confederation Caravan, marking the first entry of the Caravan's tour in British Columbia. Following the ceremony, His Honor and Mrs. Pearkes will attend a reception and luncheon.

Polynesian Theme

A Hawaiian grass shack contained the miscellaneous gifts presented to bride-elect Miss Cathie Tranter-Bowes at a surprise shower held by Miss Terry Schettle and co-hostess Mrs. R. Little in the Penshurst Road home of Mrs. J. Schettle. The honor guest, her mother, Mrs. C. Tranter-Bowes, and grandmother, Mrs. C. Goodenough, received corsages of red and white carnations and daffodils. To follow up the Polynesian theme, a native boy and girl were part of the Hawaiian decorated refreshment table in complement to the bride, who will be honeymooning in the Islands. Guests were Mrs. H. Toews, Mrs. W. Sweeney, Mrs. P. Zanichelli, Mrs. D. Whitehead, Mrs. D. Webb, Mrs. D. Titterton and Mrs. J. Hull. Also invited were Mrs. Doris Foster, Mrs. W. Hamilton and Miss Wilma Farquahar.

Three Glamor Girls In Big Shell Race

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UPI) — Male drivers in this year's Shell 4000 centennial rally may have some trouble keeping their eyes on the road.

The men may find their eyes glued on three very attractive female rallyists who have no intention of leaving their femininity behind when they slide into the driver's seat. The glamorous gals plan to take their makeup kits with them on the long, cross-country drive to ensure they will always look their feminine best even under the strenuous rally conditions they will face.

Contrary to the popular belief that lady rally and race drivers are unfeminine and unattractive, this trio of lovely ladies would look more at home posing for photographers than sitting at the steering wheel. But the men will be mistaken if they sell the girls short, for the trio have an impressive driving record behind them.

Rosemay Smith of Dublin, Ireland, won the Coupe des Dames in the 1966 Shell 4000. She'll drive a Sunbeam Imp this year. Anita Taylor of England, rated Europe's most glamorous race driver, will pilot a Ford Cortina, the car that swept the overall and team titles in 1966. And Canada's top woman rallyist and racer Diana Carter-Polivka, three-time winner of the Coupe des Dames, will drive a Rambler American as part of the American Motors team.

Both Rosemary and Anita design their own clothes and Diana's driving wardrobe is professionally designed for her. All three girls believe that women drivers should never forget they are women first and drivers second, and the trio fill both categories very adequately.

This year's rally, from May 3-10, starts in New Westminster, British Columbia, and ends at Expo 67 in Montreal.

Mirror, mirror on the wall, who is the fairest of them all? It's hard to say with two girls as pretty as (left) Micheline Paquette, 22, and (right) Carolyn Speakman, 20. Both have been picked as hostesses for the Canadian Pavilion at Expo and leave the city today for the six-months duration of The Fair. Both are graduates of the University of Victoria. Miss Speakman is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Speakman of 3935 Tulsa Drive and Miss Paquette, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. Paquette of Coquitlam. Picture was taken at a wine and cheese party given for the girls at the Speakman home.—(Jim Ryan photo)

Conway-Smith

Ontario New Home

Following their wedding Saturday in the chapel of First United Church, newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wesley Conway Jr. left on a honeymoon trip travelling by train from Vancouver to Vermilion Bay, Ont., where they will be making their new home.

The bride, the former Helen Lesley Smith, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie John Smith, 2517 Wentwich Road, and the groom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wesley Conway Sr., 8579 Dencross Terrace, Sidney. Rev. Marvin G. Fowler conducted the service and Mrs. V. Bunt was organist.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of white peau de soie, fashioned on A-lines. The empire-line bodice featured a softly rounded neckline and sleeves gently tipping the elbows. Delicate lace outlined her full cathedral veil. She carried pale pink carnations and fern in her crescent bouquet.

Matching gowns of mint green peau d'elegance, also styled on A-lines, were worn by bridesmaid Miss Jacqueline Farden and junior bridesmaid Deborah Marchuk, Nanaimo. Veils edged their self-fabric bow headpieces and they carried simplicity bouquets of white marguerites, accented with mint green ribbon.

Best man was David Gallagher, Comox, and ushering the guests was the bride's brother David Smith.

Attractive arrangements of cherry blossoms decorated the Wentwich Road home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur J. Bewley for the reception which followed. The head table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, made by the bride's mother. Cpl. Alex Marchuk, RCMP, proposed the toast to the bride.

A blue and white seersucker suit, accented with a large white collar, was worn by the new Mrs. Conway for travelling. As an added accent she wore a corsage of pale pink orchids.

Old English butler's tray tables . . .

When you hear about the castles and palaces and stately homes of Britain . . . butlers always seem to figure prominently in the domestic arrangements . . . The skirts are pure wool and camel-hair in blond or camel shade . . . very slightly A-line, and made without a waistband . . . (a feature particularly appreciated by some of us who are a bit heavy around the waist) . . . To wear with these there are long sleeved pullovers with classic round neck, fake pockets pointed up with small brass buttons . . . blond or camel like the skirts, and a combination if camelhair, lambswool and cashmere . . . A nice selection of Jaeger botany wool sweaters too, which look particularly well with tweed skirts . . . One collared V-neck cardigan style comes in camel, beige, blue or white . . . A pullover with smooth-fitting turtle neck may be had in camel or black . . . and there's a classic botany pullover in white only . . . Choose a mate for one of these from Wilson's collection of handsome tweed skirts . . . We might mention that the Jaeger botany sweaters are priced as low as $14.50 at . . . W & J Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7171.

St. John's Boys' Choir Sings At Rockett-Kreller Wedding

Baskets of spring flowers decorated St. John's Anglican Church for the double-ring ceremony uniting in marriage Patricia Lynne Kreller and Mr. Frederick Ross Rockett.

Canon Grahame Baker officiated at the recent wedding for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Elmer Kreller, 1010 McClure Street, and the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Oliver Rockett, 605 Kelvin Road.

Junior Boys' Choir of St. John's sang during signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was lovely in an exquisite gown of white peau de soie featuring a floor-length, bell-shaped skirt, and fitted bodice with scooped neckline and three-quarter length sleeves. Guipure lace bordered the full train which swept to floor-length from a cummerbund of matching lace. A dainty pill box headpiece of white peau de soie and lace held her chapel veil of nylon tulle. For "something borrowed" the bride wore a sterling silver bracelet belonging to her maternal grandmother. Single strand of pearls and matching cultured pearl earrings complemented her wedding gown and she carried a bouquet of calla lilies.

Miss Dawn Michele Kreller as maid of honor for her sister, and the Misses Lesley Anne Kreller, another sister, Janet Laidler and Joan Hicks, bridesmaids, were in floor-length gowns of aqua blue peau de soie featuring belled skirts and detachable cummerbunds. They wore rose shaped headpieces in aqua blue and carried cascades of carnations tinted to match gowns. Their only jewelry were pearl necklaces, gifts of the bride.

Mr. Donald Craigdallie was best man and ushering were Mr. George Cherry, Mr. Russ Hall and Mr. Don Earnshaw.

At the reception which followed in the Ingraham Hotel the bride's table was centred with a three-tiered cake flanked by low floral arrangements of pink carnations and white chrysanthemums. Mr. Bill Heaton proposed the toast to the bride.

Miss Marlene Kreller looked after the guest book for her sister.

For a motor trip through the northern part of United States the new Mrs. Rockett chose a coral travelling ensemble. She had white accessories and a white rose corsage.

Out-of-town guests were Miss Dawn Kreller, Mr. Michael Magee and Mr. Gary Croft, Edmonton; Miss Janet Laidler, Lethbridge; Mr. and Mrs. Stan Kreller, New Westminster; Mrs. Ina Norris, Mr. and Mrs. R. Norris, Mrs. Sharon Radu, Mr. and Mrs. L. Houghton, Mr. and Mrs. N. Nummela, Mr. and Mrs. H. Carruthers, Mr. and Mrs. N. Gold and Karen, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Moore and Dianne and Linda, all of Nanaimo; Mrs. Margo Dams, Squamish; Mr. and Mrs. G. Mant, Mr. A. James, Mr. H. Mant, Mr. G. Kindade, and Mr. and Mrs. W. Switely, all of Qualicum Beach; Mrs. Dolly Short, Mr. George Norris, Mr. Glen Croft, Miss Terry Matte, Vancouver; Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Fairall, Courtenay.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is smart in business, makes a fine living and is active in civic affairs. But he has a habit that is driving me nuts. He talks to himself.

If someone pays him a compliment during the day, he will walk around with silly grin, repeating the compliment and enjoying it all over again. If he has had an argument at the office, he will rehash the conversation, repeat what he said, what the other fellow said, and then add what he should have said.

He makes no attempt to keep his voice down. It is almost as if he is performing for me and the children. Tonight he went into a monologue on what he plans to say to his supervisor tomorrow if he gets criticized for the way he handled a deal.

It is creepy to hear this man talking to himself in full voice. Please tell me if you think he is losing his buttons? — GREENSBORO

Dear Greensboro: In the past three weeks I have received over 2,000 letters from women whose husbands like to sleep in lace nightgowns and wear ladies' underwear. One loon asked his wife to make him some silk dresses to wear while watching TV. And you are complaining because your husband talks to himself! Comparatively speaking, he's in very good shape.

Dear Ann Landers: Our son, his wife and children live in a neighboring subdivision. I like to go there every night for a beer and a little conversation. My wife says seven nights a week is too often. I say so long as people enjoy each other it is not too often.

Our son says I can't come over without his mother. His mother refuses to go more than four nights a week. We are having some terrible arguments over this and I wish you would straighten her out. — NEW JERSEY.

Dear Jersey: You sure rattled the wrong cage, Bub. I am the founder of the Leave Your Married Kids Alone League. Four nights a week is too often to visit anybody.

Go to your children's home when they telephone and invite you.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Rig Ripples Job Picture

By GEORGE INGLIS

The near-completion of the giant $10,000,000 floating oil drilling rig in the Victoria Machinery Depot yards has caused a ripple in the employment picture, but not as large as the ripple that will be caused by the rig itself when it sets out to explore the mysteries of the Continental Shelf.

"I am proud of the job the boys here in Victoria did on her. They built her here and they have built her well," said VMD general manager Capt. J. V. Steele.

RIGHTLY PROUD

The captain is rightly proud, for the giant SEDCO-135F, built for the Southeastern Commonwealth Drilling Ltd. on behalf of Shell Oil of Canada is one of the largest semi-submersible drilling vessels ever assembled and it was taken right in stride by VMD, a Victoria company that has won international recognition for precision work.

The big vessel is of bottle-shaped design, with three caissons supporting the unit, drilling machinery, and living quarters for more than a dozen people.

Its completion will mean the layoff of a number of people in the ship-finishing trades, now working on the last phases of construction.

"NOT UNUSUAL"

"This is not unusual in the ups and downs of the business," Capt Steele said. "However, VMD has quite a lot of steel work in right now that should provide some work."

Speaking in general terms about VMD's prospects, Capt. Steele said two of the three ways are occupied now and the third one has possibilities.

"Of course we could use a ferry construction job or two, and a warship would come in very nicely." Capt. Steele said lightly.

Greetings And Statistics

Saanich offers greeting and statistics at its borders with new signs now going up. Foreman Allan Schofield stands ready with next sign as soon as Reeve Hugh Curtis finishes bolting one on. In background are municipal workers Jim Gasti and Arthur Mayo.—(Jim Ryan).

$30,000 Per Child

The illegitimate children born in Victoria last year will cost taxpayers about $9,000,000 before they reach the age of 18.

The estimate was made Saturday by Dr. C. H. Borsman, president of the Family and Children's Service, who will be chairman of a panel discussion on illegitimacy next week.

The panel coincides with the Family and Children's Service's annual meeting. It will start at 8 p.m. Tuesday in McPherson Theatre.

"It costs the taxpayers about $30,000 to raise each illegitimate child referred to a social service agency," said Dr. Borsman.

"However, that is only the financial aspect of a tremendous social problem that we will explore and try to reach some conclusions on next week."

The public has been invited to the forum, for which there is no admission charge. The theatre seats 800.

Back Pay Plea Faces Emperor

WINNIPEG (CP) — Haile Selassie's Winnipeg greeters Saturday included a Canadian politician who once was his educational adviser and a school teacher who claims Ethiopia owes him two months' salary.

The politician was Robert Thompson, former national Social Credit party leader.

The teacher was Cecil Pereira, who bore a petition spelling out his claim that the Ethiopian government owes him the equivalent of $500.

"I need the money," said the 31-year-old Mr. Pereira.

He added:

"It is my due. I worked for it and I know the emperor is a stickler for justice.

Factory Smugglers Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — A company, its president and an employee were fined Friday after pleading guilty to possessing a $12,000 boom chain factory which had been smuggled across the Canada-United States border.

Magistrate Gerald Levey fined Active Trading Ltd. $500, president William Moldowan $500 and employee Angelo Patelli $250.

Court was told the factory was bought in Bellingham, Wash., and consisted of furnaces, hammers and other equipment which was smuggled into Canada without duty being paid.

The machinery was brought into Canada under loads of scrap iron.

Canada Week in Manhattan

Fun in Central Park

NEW YORK (CP) — Canada Week got into full swing here today with performances by Canadian soldiers, lumberjacks and policemen in Central Park.

The period from April 28 to May 5 has been proclaimed Canada Week by Mayor John Lindsay.

While several hundred people looked on, the events, which will be repeated each day of Canada Week in Central Park, were opened by Canadian Consul-General R. G. C. Smith and New York's parks commissioner August Heckscher, to the music of the band of the Royal 22nd Regiment.

Events included a display by a motorcycle team of Ontario provincial police, tree-topping by Danny Sailor of Vancouver, log-rolling and log-chopping. Six oak trees were planted as a gift from the Canadian government.

There will be recitals by Canadian musicians and shows of Canadian art and books during the week.

Week on the Prairies

Didn't Know—But Cared

An elderly Alberta farmer has contributed $3,000 to a child he didn't know in hopes that a trip to New York will help cure her of cancer.

Norman Wolfman, 74, of Brooks, donated the money after reading an appeal in a Calgary newspaper.

Ken Stanway wants to take his daughter Chelley Lynn to a New York specialist. She is suffering from cancer of the bone marrow.

Said Mr. Wolfman: "I have a heart. You always like to help someone else."

Federal engineers say in Calgary recent heavy snow in Southern Alberta will boost already-high estimates of spring run-off from melting snow on the prairie side of the Rocky Mountains.

April storm falls of up to 40 inches in several southern Alberta areas will increase river flows which preliminary estimates indicate will be at least 10 to 30 per cent above average.

Officials of Alberta's eastern and western irrigation districts said flow will be backed by heavy ground moisture reserves and officials say: "There could be more than we need. It could be detrimental."

Robert Harold Kniess, 25, has been ordered to stand trial for the capital murder of a 12-year-old girl. The body of July Marlene Hudkins was found in a farmer's field near Red Deer on Feb. 12.

Police have identified a man killed in a two-car collision 20 miles east of Calgary as Terry Lester Boylan, 19, of Youbou, B.C. Four other persons were injured.

Dr. M. M. Cantor, Alberta chief coroner, says that about 60 high school students have been invited to an inquest May 19 into the death of a University of Alberta student known to have taken LSD.

Dr. Cantor said in Edmonton the students, expected to be chosen from school councils, will be able to hear from expert witnesses the effects and dangers of LSD.

The inquest was called after the 21-year-old student was suspected of committing suicide April 5 as a result of depression brought on by LSD. Traces of poisonous sodium cyanide were found in his stomach and a vial of it was found in his clothes.

The CBC is seeking approval from the Board of Broadcast Governors for a "frontier package" television station in northern Manitoba and new TV rebroadcasting stations in three other provinces.

The package transmitter was proposed for Lynn Lake, 500 miles northwest of Winnipeg. It would carry four hours of programs nightly, taped from a CBC network point and flown to the remote community.

Subscribers to Manitoba Medical Service will have their fees raised an average of 12½ per cent July 1 to cover additional payments to doctors.

Dr. Norman Corne, MMS board chairman, said in Winnipeg some services under the plan also will be expanded.

The Manitoba legislature in Winnipeg now has given approval in principle to a revision of the liquor laws which will permit Sunday drinking with meals. Also included in the revisions is permission to advertise beer on radio and television between 10 p.m. and 7 a.m.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

BRIDGE QUIZ:

Even world champions have been known to disagree whether a bid of four no trumps, in various sequences, is natural or Blackwood.

Three tips: 1. Four no trump is always natural if neither player has bid a suit genuinely. 2. If at some stage one player bids three no trump and partner bids four of a minor as a slam suggestion, a bid of four no trump by the three no trump bidder is a sign-off. 3. When a trump suit has not been agreed, either expressly or by implication, four no trump is again natural, but this is the situation that causes most difficulty.

What should South bid in the following situations?

North	South
2 N.T.	?

South holds:
♠K 10 7 4 3 2 ♡K J 8
♢Q 10 9 ♣3

North	South
1♣	1♢
3 N.T.	?

South holds:
♠8 7 4 ♡A 2
♢10 6 4 3 2 ♣A 8

c.

South	North
1♠	2♡
3 N.T.	4 N.T.

South holds:
♠K Q J 2 ♡8 6
♢A 7 5 3 ♣A K J

South	North
1♣	3 N.T.
4♣	4 N.T.

South holds:
♠A 9 4 ♡Q 7
♢Q 4 ♣A Q 10 8 6 4

ANSWERS TO BRIDGE QUIZ:

a. Three spades. South is willing to bid slam if North has three aces, but an immediate bid of four no trump would be a natural raise, which partner could pass. Therefore a bid of three spades is a necessary preliminary, after which four no trump will be Blackwood.

b. Four diamonds. Slam will depend on whether partner has a fit in diamonds, and the only way to find out is to rebid them. The safety factor is that if North's hand is unsuitable for slam, he can bid four no trump as a natural sign-off.

c. Pass. This is a situation which can frazzle experienced partnerships. We hold that because no suit has been agreed, North's bid is invitational, not Blackwood. If North wants to ask for aces, he has to "invent" a bid in a minor suit, after which four no trump would be Blackwood.

d. Pass. North has rejected the slam invitation; his bid of four no trump being a natural sign-off.

Check Costume—A Bias Beauty

Hunter Scott PRINTED PATTERN
A560 SIZES 10-18

The front pleat flashes summer's important message of motion. It adds new flare to a basically slim shape. The only question is whether to cinch the waist or not, and the answer is up to you. Printed Pattern A560—a Hunter Scott design—is great both ways. Easy to sew, too. Checks, small or the windowpane variety, are our favorite choice for they reveal the interesting bias cut of the yoke and jacket trim. If you plan to do lots of travelling this summer, sew this smart ensemble in a double-knit wool or Dacron. For city-suburban wear, choose linen or cotton.

Printed Pattern A560 is available in Misses' Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 14 dress requires 2⅝ yards 45-inch fabric; jacket requires 1¼ yards.

Send one dollar for Printed Pattern A560 to Pattern Department, Daily Colonist, 60 Front Street West, Toronto, Ont. Print plainly your name, address with style number and size.

How About A Swim?

Out among the fir trees of the Alberni Valley is the Twin Cities Centennial Project. A heated swimming pool and an activity centre with every facility is the main project for workmen. In case of wet weather, workmen plan to erect a roof over the laminated beams. —(Mary Taylor)

Morris Attacked, Local 8 Blasted

NANAIMO — This is not soft Sunday on the labor front.

The bombs are still falling on Vancouver Island, where the battle for the pulp mills is still a matter of debate, organization and enemy fire.

FOUR GROUPS

Four IWA locals, headed by Weldon Jubenville of Duncan, attacked former IWA spokesman and now CLC official Joe Morris.

They were displeased with his efforts in getting Pulp-Sulphite and the Port Alberni IWA local together for an application for joint certification at Gold River.

HERO FALLS

Far from being a hero to the union he represented for many years, Morris was described this way by the Duncan, Vancouver, Victoria and Lumber Inspectors locals of the IWA:

"IWA members have never shed any tears over the departure to greener pastures of this nickle-an-hour negotiator!"

HAYNES' MAIL

Meanwhile Pulp-Sulphite was keeping things moving on the Harmac front, with a letter to B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes.

The letter said Pulp and Paper workers of Canada, rival to Pulp-Sulphite, "is trying to undermine the union security provisions of our collective agreement."

RAID ATTEMPT

The two unions are fighting for certification at Harmac mill near Nanaimo.

S. V. Simpson, secretary-treasurer of the International union, said Local 8 of the Canadian union wanted Pulp-Sulphite to refrain from enforcing the union security provisions of the collective agreement.

PACT HOWLS

At Gold River, the pact between Port Alberni local of the IWA and Pulp-Sulphite to apply for joint certification brought more howls from dissenting IWA leaders.

The four locals which blasted Joe Morris said there will be a regional conference in Vancouver May 19.

GOLD RIVER

Weldon Jubenville said the purpose of the conference is to have a complete airing of the Gold River situation.

The locals will ask why the regional president did not carry out instructions laid down to him at a special regional board meeting March 19.

Mr Jubenville said "We resent the interference of former regional president, and now Canadian Labor Congress vice-president Morris, into the internal affairs of the B.C. Section of the IWA.

MARCHED ON

"From the day Joe Morris left the IWA the membership has never looked back and has made far greater progress than at any other time in history.

"This is the second known trip Joe Morris has made out to B.C. in the last month.

SKIDS GREASED

"It is obvious this congress official is further greasing the skids to hand over the Gold River pulp mill through IWA membership assistance, to the International Union of Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

"This sellout, after having been rejected unanimously by the regional executive board, is beginning to smell," said the local union president.

Expo Trip for Bill

Leading Vancouver Island St. John ambulance officer, Bill Moore of Nanaimo waves goodbye at the start of his bus and plane trip to Expo 67. Fourteen B.C. St. John's officers, including two nurses, will man Expo's First Aid booths for a two-week period. "We can handle everything from nosebleed to childbirth," said Mr. Moore, who will work in conjunction with full-time doctors.—(Agnes Flett)

Sideswipe Crash Lands in Court

DUNCAN — A Duncan man charged with impaired driving and hit and run was remanded without plea Saturday.

Edward Joseph Canute was arrested Friday night after a car sideswiped another car at the intersection of Trans Canada Highway and Trunk Road.

About 11:25 p.m. a car hit a vehicle driven by Dale Robertson, Churchill Road, continued through the intersection, and rammed into another vehicle travelling south.

The third car was driven by Alexander Crabbe, of 2993 River Road, Chemainus.

Duncan police are investigating a burglary at the Elks Hall, Station Street.

About $600 was stolen Friday night or Saturday morning.

A Victoria man was fined a total of $165 by Magistrate James Roberts in Shawnigan Lake Police Court.

Craig Matthews was also ordered off the roads for one year.

Matthews was apprehended on the Trans Canada Highway near Mill Bay April 22 for speeding. He was charged with driving without insurance and driving while disqualified.

Two Lake Cowichan boys were sentenced 90 days in the young offenders unit of Oakalla prison farm.

Gary Donald Long, 19, and Donald James Kammerle, 17, were charged with obstruction and assaulting a peace officer.

The offences occurred at Lake Cowichan's police office on Feb. 17.

Kuper Students Might Go Yet!

CHEMAINUS — That on-again off-again trip to Expo for Kuper Island students might just get rolling after all.

Chief Philip Paul of the Tsartlip band said Saturday he is taking up the cause of the 38 boys.

There are members of the marching pipe band from Kuper Island Residential School near Chemainus.

The school thought arrangements were made to pay for the trip, and the boys bought extra clothing.

Chief Paul said no money was available for the trip.

A member of the Vancouver Island Travelling Federation of the Federated Indians Organization, he said he thought the boys would need about $10,000 to make the trip.

"I hope to raise about $3,000 in Ottawa from the Centennial Committee, and from the cultural grants department of the Federal Indian Affairs department," he said.

Credit Union offices in Saanich, Duncan and Nanaimo have agreed to collect any donations, and to issue receipts.

Comox Boy Fatally Injured

A 14-year-old Comox boy died Saturday night in St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox, from injuries suffered when his bicycle was in collision with an automobile.

Cyclist David George Mulholland, 14, was in collision with the southbound car driven by Thomas Flynn of Cumberland, on Anderton Road, about two miles north of Comox, at about 6 p.m.

The youth, son of Harold Mulholland of Comox, died a short time later in hospital.

An inquest will be conducted Monday at 11:30 a.m. in Piercy's Funeral Home in Comox.

County Rule For B.C.?

Regional district boards may be the forerunner of a county system of government in B.C., according to Howard Elder, Sooke representative on the Capital Region Board.

The system would work, he said Friday, along the same lines as it does in the United States.

(In the U.S., county governments supersede urban governments in such fields as water supply, drainage, welfare, recreation and employment, while the urban governments work independently in other fields.)

There is now a possibility of Sooke opting into the parks function of the regional board in the wake of meetings held recently throughout the district.

Last year interest in the board was so slight that Mr. Elder was appointed to represent the district when no one was nominated for election.

In order to join in a new board function there would have to be a vote with a 60 per cent majority in favor.

ANY PARK INTEREST?

Such a vote could be held at the request of the board representative.

Mr. Elder said he asked during the meeting if there was any interest in joining the parks district.

"There appears to be a lot of interest, now that people understand the function of the board as a system of government," he said.

He expects to hold general meetings in both Sooke and the nearby community of Shirley in the near future.

Swim Lessons For Teachers

Preparing for forthcoming water safety courses, some 40 potential instructors and leaders are taking part in a Red Cross instructor school.

The course started Sunday, and goes twice a week until May 21. At the end, successful candidates will be able to assist with the various swimming instruction programs in the area during the summer.

Police Band Given City Colors

Campbell's Jargon 'Needs Interpreter'

A month ago the Regional District Board expressed concern that the Regional technical planning commission was loaded in favor of the provincial government.

But a letter from Municipal Affairs Minister Campbell indicated Friday that such is not the case.

"I would suggest that the composition of a technical planning committee should be the product, administratively, of the regional board concerned and the various government departments which the regional board considers would add intelligent weight to the technical planning committee in their own particular region," Mr. Campbell wrote.

"I wonder," said Reeve Allan Cox, "if we could have an interpreter go over that for us."

NEED AN INVITE

In a more serious vein Reeve Cox suggested that a letter be written to Mr. Campbell thanking him for his interest and noting that the board presumed that what he was saying was that government members will not sit on the board unless invited.

"I'm not sure that is what he means," he said. "But if we tell him that's how we understand his letter we should get some response one way or the other."

Victoria Junior Honored

By FAITH ANGUS

Walter Hundleby, president of the Victoria Junior Stamp Club, was awarded the gold medal and trophy (junior division under 21) for his exhibit of Russian stamps entered at the recent Inland Empire Exhibition at Spokane, Wash.

Last year he won the Benjamin Weeks trophy at VIPEX 66 for the best junior entry in the Northwest Federation Exhibition, held in the Empress Hotel; also the local trophy of the Junior Club and the 1966 Citizenship Cup for the most noteworthy member of the year.

According to Mr. Lester Small, president of the Greater Victoria Philatelic Society and counsellor of Victoria Junior Stamp Club, Walter has only missed three meetings since he joined eight years ago, a truly fine record.

U.S. 20th century stamps realized a total of $101,300 at Harmer, Rooke and Co.'s April auction. A part sheet of 81 of the bluish paper 15c went for $8,500, highest price in the sale. Another bluish paper item, the 1909 Lincoln 2c, superbly centred and mint, made $75 or nearly double the catalogue price of $40.

A mint 2c carmine stamp cataloguing 80c, — the 1911 imperf. with "enormous margins" sold for $14.

Some other lots that achieved full catalogue and more were the 1909 Pan-American 2c in plate-number block of 8, $52.50 (cat. $42); the 5c rose error No. 505, in block of 9, $155 (cat. $130); the 1926 regular 2c, type 11, perf. No. 634A, $80 (cat. $45).

In the air post section a very fine set of C1-C3 brought $37.50; the 6c in plate-number block of 6 with arrow, produced $190 (cat. $200) and a block of 4 of the 24c went to $75 (cat. $80). An almost superb copy of Q12, the parcel post $1, realized $55 (cat. $52.50).

Two stamps will be issued sometime in May to call attention to the establishment of the Voluntary Workers Brigade in Zanzibar (Tanzania). Denominations are 1-30sh and 2-25sh; photogravure printed by Delrieu; no watermark; sheets of 100 and both carrying the same design.

A 6 pesos stamp honoring Dr. Albert Schweitzer, not previously anounced, was issued by Uruguay on March 31.

Planning, Care Evidenced In Exhibition

BY INA D. D. UHTHOFF

The Ten Decades — Ten Artists exhibition organized by the director of the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria is the main project celebrating the Canadian centenary.

It was opened on Tuesday evening by His Worship Mayor Hugh Stephen, himself a keen supporter of all Art Gallery activities.

A grant from the National Centennial Commission made it possible for Colin Graham to devote his time to the planning of this ambitious undertaking of gathering paintings from all the way across Canada and from the early days of Krieghoff up to the present as represented by Harold Town of Toronto.

HARD WORK

With the competition of Expo to be considered when borrowing the paintings from the leading Canadian galleries, national and private, from celebrated collectors and from the artists themselves, it took plenty of hard work and careful planning to get that exhibition on the wall of our art gallery!

That this has been appreciated was evident on the opening night from the size of the attendance and the enthusiasm shown.

Starting with Krieghoff, the recorder of Canadian life in the early days, we move on to Morrice, who brought the influence of Paris into Canadian painting with the purer use of color than had been popular. The "treacle school," as it has since been derisively called, gave place to the glowing richness of French painting that has remained the basis of much Canadian art.

There are some lovely little paintings in this collection which show Morrice in some of his happiest moods.

Lawren Harris, J. E. H. MacDonald, Borduas, Riopelle, Varley, Milne, Jackson are all represented, some by large canvasses and some by small "on-the-spot" sketches, Milne in his inimitable handling of watercolor, Varley the figure painter, equally at home with pencil or brush, with line or wash, crayon or oil paint. Borduas with his succulent quality of paint and Riopelle laying it on with cement-like density. The Night Watch, one of his recent productions, scintillates.

VITALITY

Harold Town, undoubtedly Canada's leading draftsman, has fun with wooden buttons! A mixture of print and collage offers temporary entertainment.

In most painting, it is the rapid sketch to record a mood that has the greatest vitality.

No mention has been made of Tim Thomson, of beloved memory. He is not included in this collection, as a special exhibition of his sketches will go on view from May 5 to 28 at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

This is a preliminary viewing only, of an important exhibition featuring 10 artists belonging to 10 decades, and there is enough in it to hold one's attention for many visits.

One from eastern Canada has pledged $50,000 while an unidentified supporter here pledged $25,000.

Mr. Gray also said progress was satisfactory in the advance personal division of the campaign under co-chairmen W. G. Heaney and T. D'Arcy McGee.

Total pledges received for a three-year period amount to $13,225, with the average pledge being $661.

The post office has dried out and delivered a pile of letters recovered from a stolen mail bag which was found at the bottom of Seymour Creek in North Vancouver.

The bag, which was stolen while en route from Campbell River to Vancouver Feb. 13, was found March 31 by children fishing in the creek.

"It was a terrible, sopping mess of mail. But the ballpoint ink is strange — water has no effect," a postal spokesman said. "We were able to deliver all but a few letters."

About $300 in remittances from Vancouver Island post offices was missing but 17 registered letters had not been touched, he said.

John Riendel, 12, of 3922 Ansell was second and Gregory Cark, 12, of 1010 Moss was third.

David will have the opportunity, if he wins in Seattle, of moving up to the international contest, to be held in June in Portland, Ore.

Survey Backs One Fund

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has picked up some public support for its campaign aimed at reducing the number of separate appeals made by private welfare agencies.

A random telephone survey of 1,035 persons was reported to have produced strong backing for a single annual fund-raising drive for all health, welfare and youth organizations in the area.

In the survey, 618 persons, or 59.7 per cent of those called, said they favored a single appeal, compared with 209 who did not support the idea and 208 who expressed no opinion at all.

Earlier this year, the chamber board of directors passed a resolution calling on all organizations soliciting funds from volunteer contributors to join in one federation to conduct one United Fund drive each year.

Board of School Trustees of School District No. 61 (Greater Victoria).

LETTERS To Kitte

"Dear Kitte Turmell: I sat with a boy I'll call A, One night at the show. I can't remember his last name and he doesn't know mine. I like this boy very much and would love to see him again. But I don't know where to find him. What can I do?—Cindy"

Dear Cindy: Don't go to shows alone, or sit with strangers. If ever you meet again at the same theatre, when you are with a girl friend, invite him to walk home with you and your friend and introduce himself to your family.

"Dear Kitte: I've been going with this boy for about a month. We are both 13. I really like him and I think he likes me but all he does is talk about other girls. I guess he's just trying to make me jealous and I used to be able to take it but it's making me sick cause he just keeps on and on. Please help in a hurry, in print.—'Jealous'"

Dear "Jealous": Let him talk of other girls; be content to be his friend. You are both years too young to go beyond the bounds of a boy-girl friendship that does not involve jealousy.

"Dear Kitte: There is a boy who keeps calling me. What can I do to make him stop? I told him to stop but he won't.—'Tormented'"

Dear "Tormented": Tell him firmly you wish him to discontinue calls at once, permanently. If necessary ask a parent to tell him you do not welcome his calls. Be kind — but firm.

"Dear Kitte Turmell: You read a lot about glamor-grooming for girls but not much to help young men. What can you suggest about hair-styles? — Rod"

Dear Rod: Here are suggestions from Bud Westmore, director of make-up for Universal Studios. Despite the controversy about long-hair styles for young men, these are things to consider:

"Your own face is the first thing to be considered when choosing a hair style. Copying the style of a friend or famous personality, because it looks good on him, is not enough. After all...even the best picture is left lacking if the frame isn't suitable.

"A Hollywood make-up man would tell you that if your face is round (like Marlon Brando's) then long hair is out. Straight or curly, a lengthy coiffure would make you look as though you had the mumps. You'd look much better with a close-cut job, combed to the front or across the forehead to add length.

"On the other hand, if yours is the solid-jawed square type (like Paul Newman) a pompadour effect is ideal. Here the hair can be combed back and then pushed forward. The sides can be full, coming together at the back.

"If your hair is thick and coarse, ask your barber to thin it with saw-like shears. This cuts hair lying close to head, without disturbing strand on top, and is helpful for fellows whose hair grows exceptionally fast.

"Many young men have high foreheads and if you happen to be blond, it may appear as though you are balding, prematurely. This can be solved by parting the hair far to the left and combing it down and across the forehead, to lower the natural hair-line."

Slang Dictionary Compiled

No Book for Stunned Gimp

VANCOUVER (CP) — Only a stunned gimp would knock a slang dictionary.

To the cool ones at Delta high school in the Vancouver suburb of Delta the dictionary has become an important part of learning.

Teacher Tom Wilkinson says the dictionary his 16-and 17-year-old students are compiling is far more than just an amusing game to relieve school-time tedium.

LANGUAGE STUDY

It is his latest effort to teach them to understand the development of the English language.

"I'm learning too," says Mr. Wilkinson.

"Some of the words have changed their meaning recently."

Among the words the students have selected for their own slang dictionary are the following:

Stunned—slow to catch on.
Cool—in style, but different.
Out-of-sight—fantastic.
Crap—a conglomeration of objects.
Mark—gullible person.
Suck—teacher's friend.
Gimp—weird person.

NOT A BLAST

The students aren't supposed to be having a blast—a wild time—collecting words and writing definitions in their slang dictionary. Instead they're supposed to be learning how language evolves and how words once considered slang sometimes become part of the established and accepted language.

The dictionary is a project of an experimental Grade 11 class in social studies and English. Mr. Wilkinson says the project is a variation of a standard part of all B.C. secondary school English courses which involve a study of slang in that grade.

The class of 90 has been divided into three different groups—each compiling its own dictionary — with each student bringing five slang words to class with him as part of the project. Before the student can submit the words he must have a data sheet which gives information as to where he heard the word used in conversation and under what circumstances. The words must also be studied for any possible antecedents in normal speech.

The dictionaries, which vary in length because of some duplication between students, will not find their way into print.

"It's just an exercise to teach the students to think properly about words and language, it has no outside point beyond that," says Mr. Wilkinson. "It is a matter of problem solving."

Although the parent of one student working on the dictionary wrote a letter to a newspaper complaining about the project, Mr. Wilkinson says nobody has complained to him or the school.

'MORE USEFUL'

Delta School Board Superintendent Roy F. R. Thorstenson says he thinks the dictionary assignment was a good one.

"It teaches the students to work independently and to do their own research. It is more useful than simply teaching them facts to memorize."

He says his son is in the class working on the dictionary and "it doesn't bother me at all."

Injunction Continued

VANCOUVER (CP) — A B.C. Supreme Court injunction banning picketing by striking electrical workers at approaches to the Arrow Dam project near Castlegar was continued for another two weeks.

The injunction was granted to B.C. Hydro and Power Authority April 13 when International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers pickets brought work at the multi-million-dollar hydro project to a halt.

Beauty Hint

To give your complexion a delightful bloom use this simple beauty trick. Damp a cloth in lemon Jelvyn freshener and press over your face moulding it to your features. Lie back for a few minutes whilst the lemon tones and refines the skin. Now to vitalize and hold the bloom, smooth on your oil of Olay and keep it there always under your make-up to protect against wrinkle-dryness and to give the skin a day-long dewy look.

Teenager

Man Should Do Pursuing Don't Scare Him Away

By KITTE TURMELL

"How can I tell whether or not he likes me? How can I make him like me?"

"How can I deal with competition?"

"After a break-up, then what?"

These are basic questions in the minds of teen girls — and boys, too. For a new slant on the answers, I went to lunch with Roxanne Arlen, a popular, young motion picture and TV actress with glamor to share. The slim, violet-eyed blonde gave her answers to these typical problems from teen readers:

"He smiles, then turns away. He talks to me when we're alone, but ignores me in a crowd. How can I be sure if he really likes me?" asks Mary.

"I'd guess he likes her, but who can be sure?" mused Roxanne. "If she's too abrupt, she may scare him away. She should smile back, hold back and have patience, not play up to him and embarrass him. He needs time to make up his mind. Basically, man is an aggressive animal and wants to do the pursuing. No matter how shy he seems, he will find a way to show interest if he feels it.

"She may show she likes him, but must wait for him to take the initiative in progress toward friendship or romance. If he doesn't, she should go on to others. An independent girl who does not cater to one boy can find many."

Betty pines because, at parties, her boy friend pays more attention to other girls than he does to her.

"If you think he's your boy friend, you naturally feel possessive," remarked Roxanne. "But you must try to control jealous tendencies.

"The boy who upsets his girl friend by paying too much attention to other girls is not acting like a mature man, but why should a girl expect him to, in teens? This may be the only time in his life when he can afford to be immature and carefree.

If he is her "steady," and he commits an outright disloyal act like trying to date a girl's best friend, then she has cause to feel he lacks character and stability.

"If the jealousy-with-cause situation gets too acute, there's a marvelous little thing called indifference for you to try," smiled Roxanne. "If he does not respond to this cure, then let him go with wind. I doubt if he will. Indifference on the proper occasions never lost me any boy friends."

Roxanne was a much-sought-after girl in her home town, Detroit, Michigan, and at Wayne University. Now she is happily married to Julius Snyder, an industrial relations counsellor.

Over coffee, we came to Sally, who had just broken up with her steady and yearned to have him back. Roxanne's solution came fast.

"Forget him. First, of course, if she did something terrible — and this takes some soul-searching — she should try to make amends. If it's a 'split that can't be spliced,' she should recognize any mistake she made and try not to repeat it with her next boy friend.

"Nothing and nobody can make you feel good about losing an old love, until you find a new one who is really right for you," affirmed Roxanne.

Vietnam War Makes Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The buildup in Vietnam war spending in the last two years has produced 3,200,000 new civilian jobs in the U.S., Daniel B. Suits, a University of Michigan economist, estimated before a Congressional economic committee. He also estimated that, if expenditures were reduced on the same scale, the worst result on the U.S. economy would be "a relatively mild recession."

It's hard to start a business of your own these days. Takes a lot of capital . . . the right breaks. Still's it's a shame everyone can't have the experience because there's a lot to learn from it.

When a boy takes charge of a newspaper route he's going into business for himself. He learns to budget his time, to keep accurate records; he learns the self-reliance that comes through responsibility. And his profits give him a head start on saving a bit of capital.

If your son comes up to you someday and asks whether he can have a paper route, don't give him the brush-off. He's showing a little initiative. And after all, that's how private enterprise is built.

Tiny Group of Young Officers

Secret Society Staged Coup

By JOE ALEX MORRIS

ATHENS (LAT) — "Apply Prometheus." This was the signal which launched Greece's military coup nine day ago.

The whole story has yet to be told. But this much can be said:

An incredibly small number of middle-rank officers belonging to a secret society staged the coup. They were able to do so because:

● Virtually every high-ranking offficer in the Greek military was in Athens for a conference.

● King Constantine, his senior generals and leading right-wing politicians were so afraid of a leftist triumph — either in the streets or at the polls in the upcoming election — that they drew up a contingency plan for a military take-over.

This was Prometheus. Information is now available that the plan was drawn up in detail several months ago. Orders were sent out in sealed envelopes to every operational unit in the country, to be opened only when the words "Apply Prometheus" were flashed to them.

Artillery Col. Nicolas Bakarezos, one of the five or six officers who formed the nucleus of the military take-over, Saturday confirmed the existence of Prometheus. Contrary to established evidence, Bakarezos insisted that the then chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Grigorios Spantidakis, was in on the plot.

Spantidakis learned of the plot only minutes before it was put into operation.

The conspiracy was believed the work of a secret officers society known as EENA, which in Greek stands for Union of Young Greek Officers. The organization was

People Hail King

New Greek State Will Be Created

ATHENS (AP) — King Constantine went to midnight Mass with thousands of his subjects this Orthodox Easter Sunday and was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

It was his first public appearance since the Greek army seized power April 21.

The interior minister of the ruling army junta, Brigadier Stylianos Patacos, announced Saturday his regime plans to create "a new Greek state under a revised constitution." But he did not say how the constitution would be changed or whether it would restore freedoms lost in the April 21 coup.

HEARTY OVATION

Members of the armed forces and crowds lined the route from the royal palace to the Athens Cathedral as the 26-year-old king, wearing an air marshal's uniform, drove to Mass. The crowd applauded warmly as the king went by.

Alighting near the cathedral, he received an enthusiastic ovation from thousands in the square. He walked briskly to a wooden platform in front of the cathedral and nodded to Premier Constantine Kollias and other members of the army-installed government. When the clock struck midnight, bells pealed across the city and the service began.

SOON TO GO

In a statement to newsmen Saturday, Patacos had discussed aims of the military regime and promised that martial law restrictions now in force will "not last long."

Another minister promised the regime would not establish concentration camps for the 5,000 or more persons now in detention.

NO BLOOD

Paul Totomis, minister of public order, said "it is our wish that all Greek citizens should be released and returned to their families as soon as possible."

Patacos was one of the three officers who planned and led the swift and bloodless coup. The others are Col. Nicholas Makarezos, minister of economic co-ordination, and Col. George Papadopoulos, minister to the premier. They still are considered the power behind the government of Premier Constantine Kollias.

EASTER EVE

The Patacos' statement came as Greece's 8,500,000 people celebrated the Orthodox Easter Eve holiday. Crowds filled the streets of Athens and other cities buying Easter eggs and lamb, traditional Easter fare. Thousands of others took holiday boat trips to Greece's many islands.

There was virtually no visible evidence of the army takeover that took place only eight days ago.

In his statement Patacos said

Hanoi Base Hit

SAIGON (AP) — U.S. Air Force F105 Thunderchiefs from Thailand bases attacked a Communist MiG fighter base west of Hanoi on Saturday, the U.S. Command announced today.

The Air Force jets hit the Hoa Lac airfield, a major base for the North Vietnamese MiGs about 20 miles west of Hanoi.

U.S. Air Force and Navy jets made the first raids of the war on MiG bases in North Vietnam on Monday with attacks on Hoa Lac and the Kep airbase, 37 miles northeast of Hanoi.

DOGFIGHTS

In another raid Saturday, other F105 Thunderchiefs fought off 10 MiG17s in several engagements during an attack on the Hanoi railroad highway bridge four miles northeast of the North Vietnamese capital.

In the attack on Hoa Lac airfield, pilots reported their bombs were on target, but there was no immediate damage assessment.

BRIDGE HIT

The railroad highway bridge, which serves as the only railway line extending north from Hanoi into China, was hit for the first time Wednesday.

The U.S. Command said that in Saturday's attack, the five-span steel and concrete structure was damaged by 3,000-and 750-pound bombs.

AIR WAR HOT

Both the U.S. Command and the North Vietnamese have intensified the air war over the North in the past two weeks.

The initial decision to attack the MiG bases April 24 was made in Washington.

Secretary of Defence Robert S. McNamara said stepped - up air action by the MiGs led to the decision.

He noted that MiGs have been much more active in the last three weeks.

SUNDAY RAID

Over the South, B52 bombers made a morning raid Sunday on a suspected Communist support and storage area 25 miles southwest of coastal Tam Ky, about 250 miles northeast of Saigon.

Radio Hanoi said that U.S. fighter - bombers returned Saturday to the area of North Vietnam's capital. The station reported, without confirmation in Saigon, that three American planes were shot down.

Ground action was reported light.

Six Americans were killed and 20 wounded in six scattered ground actions over South Vietnam.

Five Vessels Safe in Port Russians Lost

HALIFAX (CP) — A spokesman for the Air-Sea Rescue Centre here said Saturday that five vessels reported in trouble along the Atlantic coast were out of danger and safe in port.

The vessels radioed for assistance after a storm churned up high seas off Nova Scotia's rocky coast.

Five people who were missing in the storm were found Saturday and reported in good condition.

TAKEN ASHORE

The 35-foot fishing vessel Lena G., missing in the Bay of Fundy with four persons aboard, was taken ashore safely at Victoria Beach.

Albert Hook, 26, was found on a tiny island in nearby St. Margaret's Bay. He had been missing since he left Macdonald's Point Friday in a small canoe for a nearby post office, but was discovered by RCMP searching the bay.

A spokesman for Foundation Maritime said the company was unable to resume operations to save the 4,100-ton freighter Costa Rican Trader because of heavy seas.

High winds and heavy seas drove the freighter aground stern-first on rocks near the approaches to Halifax harbor Friday.

The freighter's 26-man crew walked to safety along a gangplank several hours after she went aground.

Fighting Racks China

LONDON (AP)—Fierce fighting for control of China is raging through the nation, according to a report Saturday night from Moscow radio.

In a dispatch from Peking, monitored in London, the radio said the Chinese capital was in chaos with more and more Red Guards flooding into the city.

Supporters of party Chairman Mao Tse-tung are in control in four provinces — Shantung, Shansi, Kweichow and Heilungking — and two cities — Peking and Shanghai, the report said.

ARMY RULES

Army units ruled in most other regions, but were meeting resistance, said Moscow radio.

Radio Moscow added, "the Red Guard press reports an acute deterioration in the situation in Shantung Province, in the cities of Chungking and Chegtu and in Chengchow, and in Inner Mongolia where troops are suppressing the Red Guards and rebels.

Late Blizzard Paralyzes South Alberta

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — One person has died, traffic was paralyzed and livestock was in difficulty today as a result of a snowstorm that dumped more than three feet of snow in southern Alberta during the past two days.

All air traffic was cancelled and many people were stranded on the highways. Railway lines managed to continue operation with only minor delays.

The 18th Field Regiment of the Canadian Artillery Militia has been ordered to help the snowbound city of Lethbridge dig out from under the more than 36 inches of snow.

A helicopter has been sent from the Number One Helicopter Platoon at Namao, near Edmonton, to Claresholm, Alta., to fly grain and feed to cattle stranded by the blizzard across southern Alberta.

Sixty-five-year-old John Obbagy of Lethbridge was found dead Saturday in a snowbank in front of his home. He was believed to have suffered a heart attack while shovelling snow.

MANY STRANDED

About 30 persons were stranded at the Pincher Creek Airport Friday night and another 45 men, working at a new plant near Pincher Creek, were also snowbound. They were staying at motels in the area. A number of persons had been stranded in cars but were rescued by RCMP who used a commandeered CPR railway snowplow.

About 25 persons were stranded in cars about 18 miles south of Lethbridge Friday night but were rescued by highways department crews and the RCMP.

LINES BROKEN

One report said 90 per cent of farms and ranches from Lethbridge to Fort MacLeod were isolated.

Some farm officials said it would be two weeks before farmers would be able to get heavy equipment back onto their saturated fields.

Heavy ice on powerlines broke some main lines between Brooks and Suffield in southern Alberta. Similar conditions resulted in temporary power outages in Medicine Hat.

Comox Boy Fatally Injured

A 14-year-old Comox boy died Saturday night in St. Joseph's Hospital in Comox, from injuries suffered when his bicycle was in collision with an automobile.

Cyclist David George Mulholland, 14, was in collision with the southbound car driven by Thomas Flynn of Cumberland, on Anderton Road, about two miles north of Comox, at about 6 p.m.

The youth, son of Harold Mulholland of Comox, died a short time later in hospital.

An inquest will be conducted Monday at 11:30 a.m. in Piercy's Funeral Home in Comox.

Rare Malope Seed Offer

A lovely and easy-to-grow flower seldom seen in Victoria gardens—and listed by only one North American seed catalogue—is the third free seed offer this year from Colonist garden columnist M. V. Chesnut.

It's called the malope and known in Europe as the Mallow Marvel. It's dark red, like a hibiscus—and the details are on Page 19.

Zambia Hints At Plot

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — President Kenneth Kaunda hinted Saturday that a major plot had been mounted against Zambia — black Africa's buffer state with white-ruled southern Africa.

Addressing a meeting of his ruling party's National Council, he said he would reveal details today when he addresses a mass rally.

'DESTROY ZAMBIA'

Referring to the detention without trial of five white men two weeks ago, Kaunda declared: "It is a bigger thing than I originally thought. There are people who are trying to destroy Zambia."

The five, including three Britons, have since been accused by the Zambian government of activities amounting to spying for a foreign power — believed to be neighboring Rhodesia.

The detention orders, issued by Kaunda under his emergency powers, are scheduled to be reviewed by a tribunal within the next two weeks, thought its recommendations can be ignored.

Fantastic Success — Million-Mark Today

Expo Hordes to Slash Deficit?

By BRUCE LOWTHER
Colonist Staff Writer

MONTREAL — If there's anything of the City of Victoria in the City of Expo, a thorough front-to-back expedition Saturday failed to turn it up.

The girls in the conical, shingled Western Canada Pavilion on the busy, landward side of Canada's brilliantly futuristic complex assured me their staff not only numbers no Victorians but also has no Vancouver Islanders. The only Victorian I found employed elsewhere is a well-known former resident and now a Western Pavilion official, Ron Gadsby.

In fact, there's nothing in the Western Canada centre that would make anyone want to come for anything but the establishment of industry. The emphasis is strictly on resources and each part of the follow-the-arrows path stresses the west rather than an individual province.

B.C. was the only province without a cabinet minister at the Thursday opening, Recreation Minister Kiernan arriving Friday night for a few days.

But, while Western Canada is a disappointment, the national pavilion and its several surrounding buildings are awesome. Canada is enjoyable, but it's not outright fun — for that, the British have won the prize hands down, with La Ronde (the gayway section) a close second.

Canada shows everything — the arts, business, all people — not so much as they were or are but as they will be. It's all topped by an atimavic stop the main exhibit building, atimavic being Eskimo for meeting place and also being shaped like a square bowl with a rim which provides one of the most spectacular views of this spectacular show.

Britain purely and simply laughs at itself. In a setting surrounded by the best of Expo's islands of modern sculpture, Britain pokes fun at Carnaby Street, Harold Wilson, its literature, Lord Nelson, soccer, British industry, Edward Heath and much more — never offensively, always hilariously:

● A sign as you enter asks: "Are they dignified, stuffed shirts, chivalrous or just shy?"

● A cluster of traffic signs almost obscures a whizzing Grand Prix film.

● A smartly-designed British housing subdivision is labelled, without further comment: "Boxes in boxes in boxes."

● In a film superimposed over an abstract, Prime Minister Wilson is called a chiffchaff bird and Opposition Leader Edward Heath a whistling warbler.

● And Carnaby is labelled "Brave New World (where) there are more boys than girls and they look more alike every day."

But the Canadian viewers just weren't laughing and, when I asked the mini-skirted English guide what now, she smiled sort of sadly and said, "Well, we can't put a sign outside saying laugh."

Expo itself as such a fantastic success there's already talk that the estimated final deficit of $130,000,000 may be sliced by a happily large amount. First-day attendance, first estimated at 125,000, now is officially reckoned at more than 300,000 due primarily

By ALAN McELWAIN
London Sunday Times

VATICAN CITY—Under a "no discrimination on any account whatever" order by Pope Paul, prominent theatrical personalities on whose private lives the Roman Catholic Church has often publicly frowned have been invited to an unprecedented audience with him next Saturday.

Those invited include actress Sophia Loren and her husband, producer Carlo Ponti, whose 1957 Mexican proxy marriage — declared invalid only this week—has kept a bigamy charge hanging over their heads for 10 years in divorceless Italy. Also invited is film star Claudia Cardinale, an unmarried mother who, outside Italy, recently married a man not the father of her child and still married to his previous wife according to Italian law.

Miss Cardinale said Saturday "I am both excited and proud to have been invited and will certainly be there," adding that she was going to wear a short black dress and black veil.

Science, Medicine Face Fearful Problems

By HARRY NELSON

Who should receive soon-to-be developed "get smart" drugs that could make the stupid more intelligent — and powerful — than those persons now in control?

And when is therapeutic abortion or use of experimental drugs on humans justified?

These and other questions were discussed recently by a panel of scientists and a philosopher, arranged by the American College of Physicians.

They point up the ethical and moral problems facing science and medicine which are—or soon will be — the outgrowth of recent technical developments. The panel failed to find mutually agreeable answers but did succeed in outlining the complexity of these problems.

"We have come up against the same problems that baffled the Egyptian, Hindu, Greek, Roman and all other civilizations that in the past made material progress," said Dr. Irving S. Wright, president of the American College of Physicians.

"Time and again this has proven to be the turning point in the history of a civilization, and many are the material advances that have been lost through the centuries.

"Broadly, these failures seem to be related to the inability of man to live according to philosophical, moral and ethical codes that stand the tests of time."

One imminent problem was posed by a University of California at Berkeley, psychologist Dr. David Krech, who told how recent experiments with animals indicate that drugs will be available within five to 10 years which will significantly increase man's intelligence.

One interesting aspect, he said, is that the studies show certain kinds of chemicals work for certain individual animals but not for others. For example, Dr. James McGaugh of University of California at Irvine has shown that some "get smart" drugs work only on the most stupid animals. They do not make already - smart animals smarter.

Admitting that the transition from rats to man is a fantastic one, Dr. Krech nevertheless offered the following speculations:

Suppose a drug would make it possible to raise the IQ of any person 20 points. The changes which would suddenly be needed in education and politics would be tremendous. In addition, he predicted there would also be religious and moral value changes.

Suppose a drug were developed that raised the IQ only in persons of below-average intelligence. It is conceivable that it could reverse the status quo with respect to servant and master, developed and underdeveloped country.

At least two of the participants, both Nobel prize winning scientists, expressed skepticism that moral values are absolute.

PAGE 5

Sir Peter Medawar, director of the National Institute of Medical Research, London, cited one example of the way new scientific knowledge is influencing changes in moral behavior.

Who would decide whether the drug should be used? Who would decide who would receive it? What would be the criteria?

"You will inevitably become involved," he told the physicians. "But doctors have neither the wisdom nor the knowledge to handle this — they can't be allowed to write social policy on a prescription pad. They will be forced to yield gracefully, without kicking and screaming, to social control."

One hundred years ago, he said, people believed that the child born of particular parents was inevitably the child that would arise from their mating.

Today, however, modern genetics makes it clear that any particular child is only one out of one million possible combinations of genes—and hence individuals—which could arise from the parents.

"It's at matter of luck which child is born. Sometimes the child has a serious defect. Why should we regard ourselves as bound by laws of chance if there is a humane and sensible way to prevent it from occurring?" Sir Peter asked.

The other Nobelist, Dr. Joshua Lederberg, professor of genetics at Stanford University, said the Earth is being subjected to "crisis and misery" because of over-population and "it is even possible the Earth will not survive as a habitat of humans" because scientists who knew better failed to speak out for population control 30 years ago.

On therapeutic abortion, Dr. Lederberg said there is "no shred of evidence that there is any moment in gestation at which life begins. All that we have learned opposes this motion with respect to human personality."

"There can be no answer to the question of when individual life begins," he said. "Life is a continuum which began 3,000,000,000 years ago, and since the first construction of DNA there has been a continuous transmission with gradual changes."

DNA is the genetic material which is passed on to offspring by parents who received it from their parents who —far back into the reaches of time—acquired it from earlier forms of life during the process of evolution.

"Even today if one attempts to define what is human in man's DNA, no more than 2 per cent of it differentiates the human from the monkey or the ape. There has been no sudden emergence of human personality," the geneticist said.

"The fetus is by no reasonable criterion a human being. Not even the newborn is a human being."

The newborn, he said, would be considered "human" at about the first year of life when his brain has developed to the point where he is capable of language and other human attributes.

"But I don't advocate infanticide," he hastened to add.

He said more studies should be undertaken to improve the detection of abnormal babies.

Dr. Lederberg was asked whether he thought it justifiable to practice infanticide on newborns with severe mental or physical handicaps. He replied that such infants may "be so interesting that they may be studied and observed to teach us more about human behavior.

"Wouldn't it be more humane than locking them up in warehouses or inflicting them on families who don't know how to care for them?" Dr. Lederberg asked.

On the subject of using humans to test new drugs or medical procedures, Prof. Samuel Stumpf, professor of philosophy at Vanderbilt University, said there is ample evidence of a basic disagreement among leading scientists over the proper ethics.

Some leading researchers apparently believe it is ethical to use people who would not be the beneficiaries of the treatment but who would be merely serving as experimental subjects, he said.

"We are in danger of arguing that the common good is more important than the individual good," the philosopher said.

Even the informed consent of the subject is not an adequate safeguard that ethics are being violated. The reason, Prof. Stumpf explained, is that "consent can't transform something intrinsically wrong into something right."

In other circumstances, informed consent involves duress—for example the use of prison inmates who give their consent perhaps because of the subtle inference that doing so will lighten their sentence.

"We must forego knowledge if the human cost is too high," he declared, but added that it is "unthinkable" to say that humans should not be used in adequately safeguarded experiments.

Before the Lawn Turns Green You Need a Mechanical Contractor

It's lawn planting time.

And that means careful preparation of the soil, careful selection of the seed—a good share of backache.

Then there's the other vital ingredient without which, however carefully the lawn is prepared, the grass just will not come up green.

That ingredient is water.

If you are right up to date you will have an underground sprinkling system installed before you plant the grass seed.

If you can't afford that, and it isn't as expensive as you might think, you will have hoses and sprinklers hooked up to outside faucets.

Which ever system you use the water will be delivered from the mains to the sprinkler by courtesy of the skills of the journeymen mechanics of the mechanical contractors' trade.

Without those skills we should still be back in the watering can days and, rustic and quiet though those days may have been, few of us would want them back.

One Was Bewildering, the Other Balanced

Bennett, Budget Made Lively Week

There has been enough said in this paper and elsewhere to take care of Premier Bennett's recent outburst against the municipalities, but there is one question which puzzles a lot of people:

Why does he strike back so savagely every time he encounters what he considers opposition to his municipal policies?

Why does he lash out blindly every time he meets opposition? Has it come to the point that no one dare raise a voice in protest against this great man and his government?

His recent denunciation of the municipalities for daring to ask for a re-examination of provincial-municipal relations made him look pretty silly.

The hectoring, jeering tone he adopted in answer to a reasoned request indicates perhaps what a lot of people have always contended — that he and his government have nothing but contempt for administrations at the local level.

When these presume, even by implication, to ask for anything beyond which the province is willing to give, they must, it seems, be slapped — slapped down in such a way that they are stung and insulted.

I suppose the provincial government works on the premise that it is safe to insult municipal leaders — that the voters they represent will not take offence. If the government is right in this cynical assumption it is a bad day indeed.

Meanwhile the annual battle of the budget has been fought at City Hall — fought and won, aldermen will tell you if you are silly enough to ask them. The fact that they were able to hold the general rate at last year's level, 39.3 mills, will be a great selling-point when a number of them come up for re-election in December.

They will be able to say, and with justification: "Yes, your tax rate increased but, you will notice, the boost was entirely due to increased school costs. The school rate went up 4.8 mills — a rate over which we have no control — while the general rate remained the same."

That they were able, in the face of rising costs, to keep the general rate level, without impairment to civic services, was due, more than anything else, to a whacking big surplus carried over from 1966. But this surplus, due to a massive increase in assessment values in 1966, will not occur again for a while.

It was due also to the fact that Victoria still has land to sell and a taxsale land fund which can be used for many things.

To save a mill ($120,000) this year it was decided to pay for one or two major projects out of the tax sale land fund rather than from general revenue.

These two fortuitous factors also enabled the administration to set up a reserve fund of about $100,000 against possible large mill rate increases in 1968.

Then, when the city's surplus will have returned to its normal level (about $75,000) the reserve fund can act as a much-needed buffer. Its establishment was an indication of sound thinking on the part of the city manager and city treasurer.

Citizen's Guide to Official Legal Mumbo-Jumbo

What's It All Mean?

"... Pursuant to the provisions of section 199 (1) (a) of the Motor Vehicle Act, B.C. Reg. 28-58, made by authority of Order in Council No. 1004, approved April 18, 1958, as amended, be further amended as follows: ..."

Now what on earth does all that mean?

Finding his way through the tangled thicket of provincial acts, amendments, orders in council, proclamations and regulations is a practically hopeless task for the ordinary citizen. Yet an understanding of the system is essential to anyone doing business with the government, which includes almost everyone these days.

Here, then, is a capsule summary of how the laws that govern us are passed down from the seats of the mighty, and a guide to finding them for yourself.

Proposed legislation comes before the government in the form of bills each winter. These bills are numbered consecutively in the order in which they come before the House. The bill number becomes meaningless after the bill is passed and becomes an act.

The acts, after the session ends, are published in a volume which lists them alphabetically by title. Each act becomes a chapter of the year's statutes.

That's easy. Then come the

By BILL STAVDAL

amendments. It isn't enough to look up an act passed in, say, 1962. It's got to be followed up for possible changes.

This labor is reduced every 12 years by publication of the revised statutes which consolidate all previous acts and their amendments in a series of volumes.

Since the revised statutes of 1960 there have been six volumes of legislation, plus a seventh soon coming out of the recent session. The Girl Fridays in law offices annotate the revised statutes of 160 for their bosses to save them hunting. For the general public looking up law in the public library, a thorough check is the only way.

If you're interested in a specific piece of legislation, get a copy of the pink price list of statutes for sale by the Queen's Printer. These publications contain the original act and subsequent amendments, and the average price is 15 or 20 cents.

To go back a bit. Acts come into force in two ways: either by royal assent when the House prorogues, or by proclamation at a later date.

Some acts are proclaimed bit by bit as it suits the cabinet, and occasionally some never come into force.

Many acts make provision for the cabinet (or "Lieutenant-Governor in Council") to pass orders in council under the terms of the act.

These orders in council are the day-to-day method of doing government business. They aren't important enough for the attention of the Legislature, yet they are sanctioned by a law passed by the House.

The orders in council, after routine approval by the Lieutenant-Governor, have the force of law. They are numbered consecutively and filed in the provincial secretary's vault.

They are also catalogued and cross-referenced by subject in the provincial secretary's office. Copies can be had on request.

From the orders in council come regulations which elaborate on specific acts. All regulations are published once in Part 2 of the B.C. Gazette, printed every two weeks.

A subscription can be had from the Queen's Printer for $5 per year.

Part 1 of the Gazette includes cabinet proclamations, compulsory advertisements announcing lease and sale of crown lands, registration of companies and societies, changes of name, expropriation notices and so forth.

Both Part 1 and Part 2 of the Gazette are available in most public libraries.

The quotation which begins this article is numbered B.C. Reg 82-67, which means 82nd regulation passed by the B.C. cabinet in 1967.

As the year wears on the regulations pile up, and sifting through 11 months' accumulation just before their annual consolidation becomes a deadly chore.

Government offices will generally explain the current laws, orders in council and regulations on certain subjects. But then, everyone has his pet story of frustration in dealing with the civil service.

It becomes clearer why we have lawyers.

Supervisor Reports On New Concepts

Form Must Fit Function

Strange Gym Shape Changed Game Rules

COURTENAY — John Walsh took a trip.

He kept his eyes open.

He remembered what he saw.

And because of that jaunt, the form and perhaps even the content of education in Courtenay School District will be altered.

Mr. Walsh is the supervisor of instruction for this school district.

The trip he took was to California, where he visited a large university.

He studied new concepts in school design, especially "the open plan" and visited several schools designed on this plan, to see how they operated.

Courtenay trustees accepted the idea, and an addition to Puntledge park will be on the open plan, which means room size can be altered from one huge room to several small classrooms.

Mr. Walsh's comprehensive report includes definition of school design:

"The most fundamental idea in school design is the Aristotelian maxim, form follows function.

"The school is designed to facilitate whatever kind of education it is planned to carry on in the school.

"Schools have traditionally been designed to facilitate the one-teacher-one-room class system.

"When it appeared worthwhile to deviate from the traditional system and experiment with newer approaches to teaching, it was found that the natural reluctance of any institutionalized system to change was reinforced by the buildings in existence.

"In other words not only does form follow function, but there is a strong tendency for function to follow form.

"If the school consists of single rooms carefully separated from each other, the teachers will tend to continue an equally compartmentalized teaching endeavour."

Mr. Walsh said first "open" schools were built to break tradition.

Trustees were told educators reasoned that if the rigid privacy and segregation of classrooms could be smashed, new approaches might succeed.

Mr. Walsh reported to the board that the new approaches were mainly attempts at elementary levels, to bring about a non-graded system.

"The first step is a very important one because all other changes have stemmed naturally from this one.

"Assume someone decided to leave out the wall at the back of a classroom. The rooms, however, still would encourage the traditional type of teaching in rows, and would discourage teaching in small groups.

"It appeared reasonable to go one step further and alter the shape of the rooms to encourage small group teaching.

"Once the space appeared, it became obvious that it could be used for large group presentation.

"In other cases this open space in the middle seemed a natural place to send individuals or groups to carry out study alone (you could still keep your eye on them).

"Soon special reference material was located in this central area and all the audio-visual aids used in that part of the school.

"The central area, that is, became a resource centre."

Here are some features in the open school:

- A carpeted floor cuts out most of the noise of the floor and the ceiling, only one should be treated accoustically.
- A hard ceiling reflects sounds to where they are wanted.
- Any noise which stays in the background bothers no one.
- By using common sense, teachers in one teaching area avoid interfering with teachers in the next space.

"It would appear that when architects plan one part of a building to house hexagon-shaped teaching spaces, they inevitably design the rest of the school in the same way.

"In any case schools wind up with the most remarkably shaped activity rooms in which formal team games can only be played by bending the rules to match the room.

"Obviously there are certain activities which simply cannot be carried on in an open-area school, and there are some children who may need a closer security than that given in a wide open area.

"Space, therefore, has been classified.

"First there is academic teaching space. Then there are open areas of common space such as the resource areas. Finally there are special activity spaces such as an enclosed space for music.

"One particular feature to note is that these schools could not easily be converted to traditional schools."

Mr. Walsh pointed out the shape of the buildings altered the shape of education developed within them.

Taking almost a Marshall McLuhan approach, that the form indicates the function and the medium is the message, Mr. Walsh said there were big changes.

Schools moved to a non-graded form of organization. Sometimes this was only in one or two subjects, as it is in our district, but sometimes it was in all subjects.

"This type of school was used exclusively for elementary schools.

"There was a marked increase in teacher interaction.

"The group of teachers in any open space inevitably began to work and plan together, to arrange groups for what they hoped was maximum efficiency in teaching.

"The result was some form of co-operative teaching. The open area encouraged a spirit of innovation and experiments.

"There was a questioning attitude towards present practices."

Mr. Walsh said there was little specialization of teachers or of teaching spaces.

He was surprised by this.

Trustees were told principals explained they could not get teachers who were sufficiently trained.

"Children appeared relaxed and free. This may be due to less academic pressure and a more permissive attitude than is common in B.C.

"There is a wider and freer use of audio-visual equipment.

"Carpets, besides lessening noise, brought about a more responsible type of behavior. Elementary school children generally have to behave in a place where there is carpet."

Morris Attacked, Local 8 Blasted

NANAIMO — This is not soft Sunday on the labor front.

The bombs are still falling on Vancouver Island, where the battle for the pulp mills is still a matter of debate, organization and enemy fire.

FOUR GROUPS

Four IWA locals, headed by Weldon Jubenville of Duncan, attacked former IWA spokesman and now CLC official Joe Morris.

They were displeased with his efforts in getting Pulp-Sulphite and the Port Alberni IWA local together for an application for joint certification at Gold River.

HERO FALLS

Far from being a hero to the union he represented for many years, Morris was described this way by the Duncan, Vancouver, Victoria and Lumber Inspectors locals of the IWA:

"IWA members have never shed any tears over the departure to greener pastures of this nickle-an-hour negotiator!"

HAYNES' MAIL

Meanwhile Pulp-Sulphite was keeping things moving on the Harmac front, with a letter to B.C. Federation of Labor secretary Ray Haynes.

The letter said Pulp and Paper workers of Canada, rival to Pulp-Sulphite, "is trying to undermine the union security provisions of our collective agreement."

RAID ATTEMPT

The two unions are fighting for certification at Harmac mill near Nanaimo.

S. V. Simpson, secretary-treasurer of the International union, said Local 8 of the Canadian union wanted Pulp-Sulphite to refrain from enforcing the union security provisions of the collective agreement.

PACT HOWLS

At Gold River, the pact between Port Alberni local of the IWA and Pulp-Sulphite to apply for joint certification brought more howls from dissenting IWA leaders.

The four locals which blasted Joe Morris said there will be a regional conference in Vancouver May 19.

GOLD RIVER

Weldon Jubenville said the purpose of the conference is to have a complete airing of the Gold River situation.

The locals will ask why the regional president did not carry out instructions laid down to him at a special regional board meeting March 19.

Mr Jubenville said "We resent the interference of former regional president, and now Canadian Labor Congress vice-president Morris, into the internal affairs of the B.C. Section of the IWA.

MARCHED ON

"From the day Joe Morris left the IWA the membership has never looked back and has made far greater progress than at any other time in history.

"This is the second known trip Joe Morris has made out to B.C. in the last month.

SKIDS GREASED

"It is obvious this congress official is further greasing the skids to hand over the Gold River pulp mill through IWA membership assistance, to the International Union of Pulp Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers.

"This sellout, after having been rejected unanimously by the regional executive board, is beginning to smell," said the local union president.

Expo Trip for Bill

Leading Vancouver Island St. John ambulance officer, Bill Moore of Nanaimo waves goodbye at the start of his bus and plane trip to Expo 67. Fourteen B.C. St. John's officers, including two nurses, will man Expo's First Aid booths for a two-week period. "We can handle everything from nosebleed to childbirth," said Mr. Moore, who will work in conjunction with full-time doctors.—(Agnes Flett)

It Looks Easy!

Under-the-leg fiddling is just fine when you've won a contest. Leonard Earl of Port Alberni came first in the Vancouver Island fiddling contest at Departure Bay Fire Hall. Here he shows one of his novelty acts. He has won many Prairie picnic fiddling contests.—(Agnes Flett)

Kuper Students Might Go Yet!

CHEMAINUS — That on-again off-again trip to Expo for Kuper Island students might just get rolling after all.

Chief Philip Paul of the Tsartlip band said Saturday he is taking up the cause of the 36 boys.

There are members of the marching pipe band from Kuper Island Residential School near Chemainus.

The school thought arrangements were made to pay for the trip, and the boys bought extra clothing.

Chief Paul said no money was available for the trip.

A member of the Vanncouver Island Travelling Federation of the Federated Indians Organization, he said he thought the boys would need about $10,000 to make the trip.

"I hope to raise about $3,000 in Ottawa from the Centennial Committee, and from the cultural grants department of the Federal Indian Affairs department," he said.

Credit Union offices in Saanich, Duncan and Nanaimo have agreed to collect any donations, and to issue receipts.

Farmers At Work

DUNCAN—More than 25 delegates from Port Alberni, Nanaimo and Duncan attended a 4-H Junior Council workshop Saturday.

The workshop was the first of its type to be held in Duncan.

The day-long conference started at 10 a.m. and members ranging in age from 10 to 21 participated.

Cowichan-Cobble Hill 4-H group sponsored the workshop.

Agricultural problems and latest farming methods were discussed in detail by the delegates, who heard district agriculturalist Ken Jameson speak.

President of the Cowichan-Cobble Hill 4-H council, Maureen Kinney introduced Mr. Jameson and also Wayne Wickens, 4-H supervisor for B.C.

There are seven clubs in the Cowichan-Cobble Hill area, with total membership of 375.

There are 16 clubs in Nanaimo and Port Alberni districts with 200 members.

Policeman, Spare That Home

NANAIMO — Heated opposition to the Canadian Association of Police Chiefs' brief seeking wider powers was voiced at Friday's meeting of the Nanaimo, Duncan and district labor council.

"If some policeman came to my house and wanted to get in (for no good reason and without a search warrant) he'd be in trouble," said one of the council members.

Council resolved to send a protest wire to the Canadian justice minister and a letter of protest to the Canadian Labor Congress.

FATAL ACCIDENT

Second topic discussed was an intersection in Duncan which members feel may soon be the scene of a fatal accident.

"It's a death trap (Government Street and Craig Street entrance to Eaton's parking lot) and I'm suprised nobody's been killed," said George Popplestone.

DISPUTES BAD

He claimed disputes between the City of Duncan and the highways department here resulted in nothing being done.

He proposed council contact the highways department asking that a no-left-turn sign be posted.

Council chairman Fernie Viala reiterated his stand that although IWA is his union, he disagreed with the present Gold River dispute, maintaining that free choice must prevail.

BIG SNIP

Automation was another point he felt should be the concern of both unionists and government.

"The hugh snipper-type falling device can slice through a 30-inch tree, thereby putting fallers out of work," he said.

The only saving grace, as far as fallers are concerned, is that the device could not operate in rough territory.

Challenge Of Crime

CAMPBELL RIVER — The Challenge of Crime in a Free Society will be the address given by Dr. Malcolm Matheson, assistant director of Corrections for B.C., on May 6.

Dr. Matheson will be dinner speaker at the annual John Howard Society of Vancouver Island meeting in Discovery Inn here.

Dr. Matheson joined the Goal Service of B.C. in 1955 and has served in Oakalla Prison Farm and Haney Correctional Institution.

The speaker, who has carried out research in the U.S., will invite questions on the topic.

● An earlier speaker will be Attorney-General Bonner, who will address the luncheon meeting of the society.

Mr. Bonner was appointed Attorney-General in 1952.

Following defeat in Vancouver's Point Grey electoral district in September last year, he was re-elected in Cariboo two months later to continue as Attorney-General and Commercial Transport Minister.

Canoe War Ahead

NANAIMO—The matelots and Indians will battle it out for supremacy in war canoe racing May 13 in Nanaimo harbor as part of the Navy League celebrations, which last from May 12 to 14.

A 10-man crew from the Esquimalt-based destroyer escort HMCS Saskatchewan, which has been practising in its own 52-foot war canoe, will undertake to beat the Indians at their own game.

WHALER RACE

The one-mile race will be held in the harbor in the afternoon. There will also be a whaler race between the Navy and the Indians.

Should there be a tie, the deciding event between the Indians and sailors will be a bath tub race over the one-mile course.

TROPHY

The winners will receive a trophy from Lieutenant-Governor George Pearkes.

The Saskatchewan will be in Nanaimo for the three days, May 12, 13 and 14.

Sideswipe Crash Lands in Court

DUNCAN — A Duncan man charged with impaired driving and hit and run was remanded without plea Saturday.

Edward Joseph Casute was arrested Friday night after a car sideswiped another car at the intersection of Trans Canada Highway and Trunk Road.

About 11:25 p.m. a car hit a vehicle driven by Dale Robertson, Churchill Road, continued through the intersection, and rammed into another vehicle travelling south.

The third car was driven by Alexander Crabbe, of 2993 River Road, Chemainus.

Duncan police are investigating a burglary at the Elks Hall, Station Street.

About $600 was stolen Friday night or Saturday morning.

A Victoria man was fined a total of $105 by Magistrate James Roberts in Shawnigan Lake Police Court.

Craig Matthews was also ordered off the roads for one year.

Matthews was apprehended on the Trans Canada Highway near Mill Bay April 22 for speeding. He was charged with driving without insurance and driving while disqualified.

Two Lake Cowichan boys were sentenced 90 days in the young offenders unit of Oakalla prison farm.

Gary Donald Long, 19, and Donald James Kammerle, 17, were charged with obstruction and assaulting a peace officer.

The offences occurred at Lake Cowichan's police office on Feb. 17.

Long was also fined $25 for wilful damage.

Sticks Are Flying During Lunchtime

Lunchtime at Mountain View School, Nanaimo, and a new game—stick-hockey. Played with a quoit instead of a puck, and an ordinary old stick instead of a hockey-stick, the game is unlikely to evolve into a Stanley Cup final. There is a mixture of lacrosse thrown in too. A non-conforming type game—probably why the children seem to enjoy it so much.—(Agnes Flett)

Jubilee Closing 60-Bed Section

By JOHN MATTERS

Victoria's hospital bed crisis will worsen this summer, when Royal Jubilee Hospital shuts down a 60-bed wing for renovations.

Dr. J. L. Murray Anderson, the hospital's medical administrator, said Friday that doctors have been told Jubilee will lose 60 of its 528 adult beds July 1, when major reconstruction will start on the hospital's south wing.

"It will mean there will be more difficulty getting patients admitted," said Dr. Anderson. "We have told St. Joseph's Hospital and all the doctors, and I'm sure everyone will try to help solve the problems."

SURGERY BOOKED

Elective surgery now is being booked for October and November at the two acute-care hospitals. Some people needing urgent surgery are having to wait two weeks for a bed.

The 60-bed wing of Royal Jubilee will be out of service four to six months, said Dr. Anderson.

The section of the hospital will be closed while new plumbing and electrical systems are installed for a laboratory that will be added to the top floor.

SOME BACKLOG

To help relieve some of the backlog before July 1, Jubilee on Monday opens a 16-bed ward that has been out of service for almost a year.

* * *

It will be used by convalescent patients who are now in other areas of the hospital. Those beds then will available for other medical and surgical cases.

"The doctors are anxious we use every corner we can," said Dr. Anderson.

CLOSED IN JULY

He said the wing which will be closed in July was built in the 1920s and is badly in need of renovations. The magnitude of the work is such that one floor cannot be closed at a time.

"It has to be done as a single project," said Dr. Anderson.

It was the second ominous note in two days on the hospital bed and financing problems here.

On Thursday, Dr. E. G. Q. Van Tilburg, medical director of St. Joseph's Hospital, warned that a heavy financial deficit might force that hospital to cut staff and reduce the number of beds in use.

A reduction in staff, with a coincident reduction in the number of beds, was the only way to save money and maintain a good standard of patient care, he said.

The cutbacks, however, depend on whether B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and Health Minister Black approve adjustments to provincial grants, including an increase in the per diem rate St. Joseph's receives from BCHIS.

Cost of Drinking May Go Higher

Is the price of liquor going up?

Premier Bennett more or less said 'no' this week, but Col. Donald McGugan, chairman of the B.C. Liquor Control Board, left the question open on Friday.

The rumor is that the price of hard liquor will incerase by 8 per cent May 1.

"I have no knowledge, direct or indirect," said Mr. Bennett before a press conference. "We have no policy of increasing profits on liquor."

The premier added that any move to increase prices would have to come from the distillers.

Col. McGugan, when asked about the rumor on Friday, said:

"That will be by order-in-council, if and when anything happens."

Does he expect an announcement?

"I never expect anything," said Col. McGugan.

Sailors Sail

Esquimalt squadron of the Royal Canadian Naval Sailing Association will open its 1967 season with a flag-raising at 1 p.m. Sunday and a sail-past at 2.

Lions Roar

Victoria Chinatown Lions Club will hold its 11th charter night at the Red Lion Motor Inn today. Festivities will begin at 6 p.m. and will include a smorgasbord dinner at 7 p.m. and dancing until 1 a.m.

Ends in '68

Wooded Wonder Axed

The wooded Wonderland at Beaver Lake will be given two years' notice to vacate the new regional park area.

Reeve Allan Cox, chairman of the Regional District parks committee, said Friday that commercial operations have no place in regional parks.

"The lease for Wooded Wonderland (originally signed with the city) runs out at the end of 1968," he said. "It is the recommendation of my committee that it not be renewed after that time."

ARBITRARY RULING

Reeve Cox said the board will have to be arbitrary in its ruling against commercial operations in the parks.

"If we let one commercial operation in, it will make it very difficult to refuse others," he said. "Although this particular attraction is a good one, we must realize that we have a very prize place at Elk-Beaver. We shall always have some sort of concessions in there but we must draw the line at strictly commercial operations."

The regional board also agreed to give the municipality of Saanich the authority to decide what events should take place in the Elk Lake area.

Now let's see where we were when we went meandering off the beaten path again. Oh yes! We had just come out of the New Grand Theatre and we should have nipped into the Bismark for one for the road before going home. In the meantime you have had the opportunity of visiting quite a number of the bistros of the day so let's get back on the track.

Young Liberal John Hart Presided At Window Table

MAIN STREET VICTORIA 1908

By AINSLIE J. HELMCKEN

The son of the pioneer Helmcken family continues his stroll around Victoria in the year 1908

On the corner of Yates and Government was the Imperial Bank of Canada with Mr. J. Sidney Gibb as resident manager. This bank, now amalgamated with Commerce still occupies this corner but in a new building. Having had all my wealth deposited in the Post Office Savings Bank with my dear mother as the keeper of the book I had no reason to know anyone in this bank.

Across the road then we go to the southeast corner where we see the B.C. Market Co. Ltd. with E. F. Welch as manager. This was a very large retailing organization with another branch, called the Oak Bay Branch, on the upper part of Fort Street, probably at the Oak Bay Junction. They also had markets in Vancouver.

This firm boasted cold storage facilities as well and impressed the public with the desirability of buying meat which was protected from the dust of the street and the flies of the air. Nevertheless I can remember the great carcasses of beef and veal hanging on the hooks outside the Government Street entrance. We dealt at Goodacre's so I really don't remember many, if any, of the employees.

Next door there was a nice little fruit store operated by Mrs. Vasilatos, one of the Greek Colony. She and her family were patients of Dad's and so her business must be patronized from time to time. But I think we dealt there chiefly because she knew how to keep fruit. It was always clean and fresh.

Then next door was one of my favorite stores in Victoria. This was Barber Brothers, a variety store with lots of iktas such as china and especially toys. A young gentleman by the name of Gordon Holdcroft was just starting on his commercial career at this time and he eventually managed, and I think was at least part owner, of the business after it moved from this location to the present one on Douglas near the Hudson's Bay Store. It is now Miller and Coe. Gordon Holdcroft and I think there was a Miss Clark, clerked in this fascinating store. Of course ten cents went a long way then and what fun it was to prowl around all the little gadgets and spend all that money.

The next stop and please remember we are travelling south on Government, was the store where Dad purchased our first gramophone, Fletcher Bros., Music Store. There were three brothers, James Henry, George A. and Thomas C.

James Henry, known to most of Victoria as Jim Fletcher was the one I knew best and also for many a year. The brother George A. operated their store in Nanaimo. The firms are still to be found in Victoria and Nanaimo with next generation sons in charge. In Victoria we have Walter, son of Jim, dealing exclusively in pianos and organs whereas they used to stock a fine selection of musical instruments of all kinds, as well as records of the finest artists. There was a lady store assistant by the name of Agnes Davies.

As I know the Victoria business best I will stick to the local firm. This business of Fletcher Bros. was an eminently successful business and Jim, sometime later, purchased property on Douglas Street, for $75,000 I think. On this property they erected the finest music store Victoria ever had. The opportunity to sell the property came to Walter and his sister Margaret, the very well-known nurse, so the building is now occupied by a well-known ladies' ready-to-wear and silk store.

Before Jim Fletcher purchased the site it had been occupied by the Royal Dairy, the home of, then, Victoria's finest ice cream cones. Maybe they did have some other products but I certainly remember the cones.

One of the strange things about Victoria in the days of which we speak was the fact that so many saloons had a shoe merchant next door. Well, here we are at Tom Garvin's Senate Saloon, just sniff the aroma of his marvelous clam chowder, but next to him was H. E. Munday, the shoeman. I'm quite sure that Mr. Munday never patronized the saloon as he was a deeply religious man, a fine merchandiser and a shrewd investor in real estate.

There isn't much I can tell you about Tom Garvin's that you don't already know. It was a popular bar and I can remember it was very well patronized on one special occasion. This was when we were allowed to follow the torchlight parades which were always held following an election. The thirst generated by the heat of the flaming brooms carried aloft in all probability caused several stops for refreshment. If a young sprout was handy he could hold one of the brooms while the regular shift tried to put out the internal fires.

Now to Munday's Store. Surely this must be about the oldest shoe firm in continuous operation and under the control of the same family. The old Government Street store was a family-type shoe store. They didn't go in for the fashionable footwear that is now sold in their very smart Victoria stores. In the first store Mr. Munday was assisted by a Kenneth Bushell, in fact the only one I can remember. Later of course he was joined by his two sons, Edmund and Hubert, the latter now being the surviving brother and who, with his own son now operates the Munday Stores.

Now we should pause for some good food. The Maryland Restaurant had a large following. Here many of the political problems of the young Liberal Party were thrashed out at a window table usually presided over by an up-and-coming politician named John Hart, later to become finance minister and still later premier of the province.

The proprietors, Pete Metro and Dennie Haricop, were also members of the Greek colony. They specialized in just good food. Even then all one had to do was phone, if you had one, and soon a whole meal would be delivered to your home.

Most of the restaurants were specialists in oyster dishes. At that time the little Olympia oysters were available and they were widely used for oyster cocktails, oyster stews, and a pan-fry, all of which were delicious.

I can recall the name of only one waiter here and he was John Henderson.

There are members of the Metro family still residing in Victoria.

What, another saloon? Here is the Horse Shoe Bar, proprietor, Charles H. Setterfield whom I neither knew or remembered. I do remember though Diego Zarelli who operated the shoeshine stand at the entrance to the saloon. He was a respected member of a very respected Italian family who followed this as one phase of their living for many a year, later being in Trounce Alley until comparatively recent times.

Many of you know the old firm of W. and J. Wilson, still doing business at the old stand. As a child and a young man it was Wilson's where we were taken to get our outfits. Here we met such fine gentlemen as Mr. Joe Wilson, the proprietor then, with his assistants Mr. McIntosh, John Cathcart, and Charlie Geiger, all of them very capable and efficient. So much has been written about the Wilson family that any addition I could make would seem surplus. Suffice to say this was a store where it was a pleasure to deal, that is if any young child liked to be fitted with clothes.

Still associated with the business is J. Harold Wilson, son of Joe Wilson.

Next door was the CPR Telegraph office and then we do a hop skip and jump across Trounce Alley to a cigar store operated by David Lewis and Jesse Evans. I don't remember anything that distinguished this store from the others. Certainly I never patronized them.

Here now is a very old name in Victoria, J. Wenger, jeweller. He conducted his business for quite some years on Government Street, later moving to Yates. His son John, well known as a hunter and trap shot, was with his father for many of the later years of the firm. John lives in retirement, with his mother, on Rockland Avenue.

Heisterman and Co. are next on our route. This is already considered to be one of the older real estate and insurance firms in Victoria. At the time we are speaking the firm consisted of Bernard Heisterman, son of the founder, H. F. Heisterman, and James Foreman, J. P. Mrs. Laura Heisterman, widow of the founder was also a member of the firm.

When H. F. Heisterman arrived in Victoria he dabbled in several things besides land and insurance. One of the most interesting projects he founded was to fill a crying need in the colony for news and reading material, so he opened a reading room and library, bringing from San Francisco and other points all the literature he could obtain that was newsworthy and educational. It wasn't too long though before the demands of his calling as a land agent took up too much time and the reading room changed hands.

Here we are however in 1908 with second generation Heisterman running the business. The other active partner, James Foreman, was also a very respected businessman, as you could see from his initials after the name, a justice of the peace and he used to sit in the police court from time to time when the magistrate was absent.

The firm name is still established in Victoria.

Then the next business was the Great Northern Railroad with Mr. Stephen as the local agent. He was a nice man who used to give me some railroad folders now and again, things very dear to a small boy's heart.

Now here is a firm, or rather an artist of the day whose name would

Last November, when the Lord Mayor of London visited this city, a highlight of the occasion was the concert at the Memorial Arena presented by a massed choir of 700 voices. The director of the choir was Frank Tupman, of 3912 Winton Street, and for him too, he said, it was one of the highlights of his entire life. Understandably so. Seven hundred trained singers constitute a mighty instrument.

A LIFETIME OF MUSIC

FRANK TUPMAN
. . . director of choirs

By VIVIENNE CHADWICK

Music has been Frank Tupman's deep delight all his days. A tall, slender, grey-haired man with a quietly courteous manner and a ready, friendly smile, he is still, after 50 years, a director of choirs. This year sees, in addition, his and Ida, his wife's 50th wedding anniversary.

He is a native of Devon, one of three children. Their father owned a grocery store in Exmouth, and their mother was the source of much of his musical talent. They were church people, and the young Frank was a choirboy from his earliest years.

Father Tupman had a friend in the real estate business in Saskatoon, Saskatchewan. "And I wish," remarked Frank a trifle grimly, "that he had been in business in Victoria instead!" Because the day came when, presumably at the suggestion of the afore-mentioned friend, the Tupman family moved out to the Canadian prairies.

For a while matters went well enough. The older Tupman went into business, and Frank found a job with the CPR. They joined the local church, and the boy was promptly promoted to tenor solos in the choir. He must have been outstanding, because in due course he was asked to take over the leadership of the group, which he did. He was studying with the Toronto Conservatory of Music, which had a branch in Saskatoon, and he presently graduated with first-class honors.

In 1917 his fiancee, Ida, whom he had first met at a choir practice in Derby, came to Saskatoon, and the young couple was married.

A couple of years went by, and the family began to talk of homesteading. They found a half-section some 18 miles from Prince Albert, a ranch with a large and ancient house, barns, and the usual animals, and this they all took over as a going concern. There were six of them by this time, the older Tupmans, Frank and Ida, their newly-born son, and Frank's brother-in-law. His own brother and sister were married and on their own.

But now began a very difficult era indeed. "We were completely green at this type of life, all of us." Mr. Tupman said, "and had to learn everything from the beginning."

They learned a lot — and some of it was pretty painful. They were new to horseback riding, for one thing, and this meant, as many another saddle-sore rookie has found out, that for some time after one's initiation, meals will be eaten in a standing position.

The handling of teams, however, came more easily, and both Frank and Ida became proficient with the reins. But money was scarce. To help out Frank went to work as a hand on a neighboring ranch, and he found it hard going. One of his jobs, he remembers, was the carting of water in barrels, by wagon, from a source a mile away, when his employer's wells went dry.

Through it all the singers kept up their choral work. Once more they joined a local church, and once more Frank found himself directing the choir.

One day disaster struck. A bush fire flashed across their land and destroyed everything but the house. The year's crops were wiped out. Tupman, Senior, disgusted, decided to move back to town.

Ida's family were living in Victoria. From here they had, from time to time, in the wickedly smug way in which we annually forward daffodils to eastern cities paralyzed by winter snows, sent their prairie relatives gifts of early fruit. It seems to have dawned upon the younger Tupmans that perhaps this was where they should be. They came to the coast in 1920.

They hadn't been in the Island city very long before Frank saw an ad in the paper for a choir leader for the First Baptist Church. He obtained the position . . . and from that time on his work in the choral field has brought him friends, reputation, and recognition in ever-increasing value.

His first actual job in Victoria was with the Heintzman Piano Company, but then he became interested in promoting the teaching of music in the elementary schools in Saanich. He talked to music teachers, to Harry Bigsby, who had a choral group and a school band in Esquimalt, and to John Gough, school inspector. Their combined efforts were successful, and Tupman was asked to become a member of the school board. In time he opened his own music shop which today has been well-known for some 30 years.

He had almost at once joined the Arion Club, Canada's oldest continuing choral group, and is its present director. Over the years he has directed the Victoria Male Choir, the David Spencer Choir, the Victoria High School Choir, and the Metropolitan Church Choir, which last also continues under his leadership. For some time he had, as well, the Ariel Singers, a group of young women between the ages of 18 and 25, but this, he recalls with a smile, folded because it was during the Second World War — and 18 to 25 is an extremely marriageable age bracket!

He is past president of the Sons of England, a Dominion-wide benefit society about which one doesn't hear a great deal, but which presented him with a handsome medal which he keeps tucked away out of sight, but which he cherishes.

He also has a number of cups won at soccer, and these too are stored away, I was told, in the basement. All except one, which sits on the piano, and is there because it was given for sportsmanship, and because, I think, he considers it a gentlemanly size! Quite small.

Since coming to Victoria, Frank and Ida Tupman added to their family three more children, two girls and another boy. (In fact I remember working with daughter Pat in one of two of the late Madame Fahey's operettas.) All four are married. The older boy, says his father, not without pride, is outstanding at electronics and is a supervisor in this field at the Dockyard. The younger boy takes after his mother and father in his musical ability, and is now at Kitimat, musical supervisor for the elementary schools.

Kitimat, it seems, has a cosmopolitan population which is intensely interested in music. The young Tupman is director of their United Church choir, which is a large one, and also has a High School band whose high quality has resulted in an invitation to play at Expo 67.

It was this particular highlight in his son's career that recalled to Frank Tupman his own gratifying moment last November, when the Lord Mayor from England — which country's choirs are famous around the world — complimented the Victoria director on his superb singers.

"You must have rehearsed them most extensively," commented the distinguished visitor.

To which Director Tupman, not having been able to get the entire 700 voices together at one time until that day, replied fervently: "Sir, you'd be surprised!"

be seen in most of the homes. It is Skene Lowe, photographer de luxe for that day.

Just the thought of this firm takes me back to a most horrible experience when brother John and self had our pictures taken with Dad. That's not exactly what I meant, for the horrible experience came later really. This was in the days when we wore lace collars over the collars of our coats and I was one of the victims. John had grown up to the point of having a real boy's suit.

Perched on the top of a high stool, maybe it was a table with very long legs, there I had to sit, rigid as a ramrod while he fiddled around with a time exposure. And, darn it, it turned out to be a good picture which haunted me in a few years because they had had it enlarged, I had grown up, and what a horrible combination that was.

But Skene Lowe was a good photographer for that day, with a tremendous business and I suppose he photographed most of the important people of the day.

We'll conclude this section at the store of the Fit-Reform Wardrobe, Alfred Edward Allen, manager. Their advertisement: "Sole controllers Fit-Reform Wardrobe, clothes for gentlemen." Now this was a nice store, very nicely arranged displays, but they didn't handle boys' clothing, so all I knew about it was what I learned from peeking in the door.

Though the uniforms have changed, you still mingle with law enforcement when you enter the Vancouver Courthouse from the Hornby Street side. For here the RCMP maintain a court detail, and back of the office through a glass and wire laminated door, you enter the cell block: an austere and gloomy passage between two rows of cells, with a lavatory at the far end. Open a forbidding-looking door on the left hand side and it discloses a steel stairway. Walk up this and you'll suddenly find yourself in the prisoner's box in the courtroom upstairs.

Hot Lead Flew

. . . IN VANCOUVER'S EAST END

ANOTHER
B.C. POLICE STORY
By CECIL CLARK

For more than 60 years prisoners have clattered up this Via Dolorosa, the first 44 under the guidance of provincial policemen. On court days you'll see life as Charles Dickens saw it. I know, for I worked out of this office when I was a very junior provincial policeman. Once, at a May Assize 50 years ago, when I rode herd on the witnesses for the benefit of the court registrar's paysheet, I saw Frankie Russell being escorted upstairs.

BOB TATE . . . overdose of drugs made him mad killer.

She was 21, and if it hadn't been for the hard set of her mouth, she might have been termed good looking. I remember she had bobbed hair (just new then) with a broad red ribbon round it, terminating in a bow on top. Over a blouse she wore a heavy knitted grey roll collar sweater, in the front pockets of which she jammed her hands.

I was paying particular attention to her for just two months before, she and her Negro paramour (and fellow drug addict) Bob Tate had created somewhat of a scene in Vancouver's east end.

It started one afternoon when Frank King and his rent collecting agent Hector McKinnon called at Frankie's second storey, three-roomed flat, in the 500 block Georgia East. She owed three months rent ($30) and they had had enough of her excuses. Now they were going to collect. Frankie greeted them at the upstairs door with a heavy lidded sneer and a rather harsh:

"Whadda you want?"

"We've come for the rent," said McKinnon.

"Well, you won't get it — and get the hell out!" was Frankie's crisp injunction. No sooner had she finished speaking than Bob Tate's giant bulk pushed past her, a Winchester rifle in his hands.

"Get out before I blow you out!" was the way he ended the conversation.

King and McKinnon promptly left and out on the sidewalk told their story to P.C. 133, Duncan Johnstone. Johnstone went back up with them, found the door open, but the inner bedroom door locked. From behind the panels, they heard Tate, in an ugly mood, uttering wild threats.

Johnstone, figuring he needed assistance, went across the street to a small grocery and phoned Cordova Street headquarters. A few minutes later a touring car slid up to the sidewalk and out jumped Detectives Ernie Russell and John Cameron. Russell knew Tate as a drug addict and occasional police informer, and figured he could talk him into a reasonable frame of mind. The quintet made their way upstairs to the flat and in answer to Russell's knock on the frosted glass of the bedroom door came Tate's morose:

"Who's there?"

"It's me," said Russell.

"Who's me?" counteded Tate.

"Ernie Russell. Come on, Bob, let me in; I want to talk to you."

"You're not going to take me, Russell," came Tate's sullen answer. "I'll go down first and take you with me."

From these remarks, Russell said later, he got the notion that Tate was "20 feet off the ground." However, before he had time for any other conclusions, the glass panel of the door was shattered by a shotgun blast which not only blew Russell's hat off and peppered his face with shot, but also caused Cameron and McKinnon to clap their hands to their eyes and stagger back.

Despite his injuries, Russell with the aid of King and Const. Johnstone, helped Cameron and McKinnon downstairs. When they gained the sidewalk, Russell ran across the road to phone Inspector John Jackson at headquarters. As he came out of the store, mopping the blood from his face, he happened to glance up at the second storey across the way. There stood Tate on the wooden balcony, rifle in hand. In a split second he fired, the bullet striking the pavement inches away from Russell. It was just at that moment a little eight-year-old neighborhood kid called Georgie Robb, decided he'd better get home. As he scampered across the road, he was about in front of Russell when the rifle cracked again and Georgie fell over.

Disregarding the rifleman across the way, Russell scooped up the injured boy in his arms and dashed around the corner out of range. While this happened, Const. Johnstone, gun in hand, was guarding the stairway and of course a crowd was starting to collect. In a minute or two an ambulance appeared, and Cameron, King and the unconscious boy were whisked off to hospital. Cameron lost the sight of one eye, so did King, but little Georgie wasn't so fortunate. He lived only 30 minutes after being admitted to the hospital. He knew his name, but not his address and asked for his mother before he died. She was a widow; he was her only child.

By now the afternoon was waning into twilight, as additional police sped to the scene along Main Street. Soon clustered on the sidewalk was Chief Const. Malcolm B. McLennan, a 44-year-old Prince Edward Islander, along with his deputy, Bill

POLICE CHIEF MALCOLM B. McLENNAN . . . caught bullet in forehead.

McRae, and Inspectors John Jackson and Jim Craig. Stepping from another car came Detectives F. E. Dening, George McLaughlin and the star of the drug squad, Joe Ricci.

It was now dark on the upstairs landing, but courageously Chief McLennan took the lead, forswearing a gun in favor of a fire axe. The squad found the door open, and with drawn guns entered the living room. They were in doubt which room held the gunman. In fact the Chief and John Jackson actually passed the bedroom door concealing Tate. It was in an adjoining room that Jackson's hat brushed against a light globe. He reached up, switched it on and found they were in the kitchen. It was now by this light that he noticed the shattered glass door of the bedroom, so stepped across and tried the handle. He was about to break it down, when from the darkened interior came shot after shot.

The officers leaped sideways to the shelter of the kitchen. Still they were in a tough spot, for from his vantage point in the bedroom Tate could fire through both the bedroom door and the hall door effectually pinning any one down on the landing. Shifting his aim to the left he could hit anyone in the west half of the living room and shifting still further could nail those in half the kitchen space.

Jackson in the excitement of ducking into the kitchen hadn't noticed which way the chief jumped, but from somewhere back of him he heard a groan and the crash of a falling body. Busy returning Tate's fire, he could only notice that Inspr. Jim Anderson seemed to be beside him.

Soon the police ran out of ammunition, and seizing the opportunity ducked out into the hall to reload. It was there, when the deputy chief counted noses, he found the Chief was missing.

Although several men volunteered to go in and see how badly hurt the Chief was, it was George McLaughlin, under Ricci's protective fire, who wormed his way across the floor and was shocked to find the chief dead. One of Tate's bullets had caught him right in the forehead.

The tragic report was soon phoned to headquarters, coupled with a request for some rifles and ammunition, and a searchlight. Of course if tear gas had been available it might have saved a lot of trouble; unfortunately it was unknown to police departments in those days.

Div. Inspector Dave Scott and Const. John Berry were posted with rifles on the second storey of a rooming house across the street, and told to keep up a fast raking fire on Tate's corner bedroom. Asst. Fire Chief Charlie Thomas came screaming across the Georgia viaduct in a hose wagon that mounted a powerful searchlight. It was used to floodlight the rear of the building.

It was noticed that occasionally from the besieged bedroom came light and heavy reports. Tate couldn't be using pistol and rifle at the same time, so Frankie Russell must be doing some of the shooting.

McRae, saddened of course by the death of the chief, now wondered if the body could be moved. Again there were volunteers like John Berry, Rod McLeod, Roy Berry and George McLaughlin. First, however, with a long hooked pole from the hose wagon they tried to reach the body. It was no use. Finally Berry whispered "cover me, and I'll make it."

The light Jackson had switched on in the kitchen was now both a help and a drawback. For if Tate came close to the broken glass he could see anyone crawling across the floor. However as the police squad kept up their fire, Berry wormed his way to the rear of the kitchen. It was just as he was lifting the dead man, there came the heavy report of a shotgun from the bedroom. Which was about the time that Inspr. Dave Scott, over from his post across the street, was crouching in the hallway. He too thought the report somewhat ominous.

"Hold your fire!" he yelled to those around him; and after a few seconds of uncanny silence he yelled again:

"Come on out Tate; we're going to blow up the building with dynamite!"

From behind the shattered bedroom door came Frankie Russell's nervous wail; "Don't shoot any more. He's dead. He's lying across me and I can't move!"

"Come on out or I'll shoot through the door!" yelled Scott. The note of urgency in his voice brought response, though this time, half hysterical. "I'm coming!" shrieked Frankie. A second later she appeared in the doorway.

"Put up your hands," snapped Scott, suspecting Tate was behind her, using her as a shield. Frankie's hands rose in the air, as she quavered: "He's dead I tell you: he killed himself."

It was true. When the police, with drawn guns, swarmed into the bedroom and snapped on the light they found Tate lying in a bullet riddled shambles of blood stained bedding, empty cartridges, guns and shattered furniture. He was a far from pleasant sight for he had blown the top of his head off.

Curious to relate, no police bullet had hit him and none had hurt Frankie Russell, though her dress was slashed here and there by stray slugs and one had even gone through her hair. So close had it clipped her scalp it cut her hair ribbon!

As she was being escorted down the stairs, suddenly she turned and yelled: "Get his watch. It's in his vest pocket. I want it."

Lying around Tate's body was a .44 Winchester, a .30 calibre rifle, a 12 gauge shotgun, and a couple of revolvers, a .32 and a .38, along with 300 rounds of ammunition.

In one of his jacket pockets were 15 rifle shells; in the other a hypodermic needle and some morphine.

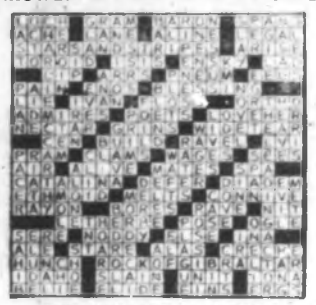
It was a couple of months later that Frankie Russell faced a judge and jury in the Vancouver court house, and in low clipped phrases told of the events that led up to the afternoon's bloodshed. How Tate, frenzied with an overdose of drugs, cut loose with shotgun and rifle through the bedroom door. How he laughed in exaltation as he yelled at her: "I got the Chief! Boy, I'm some sharpshooter!"

There was pin drop silence in the courtroom as she described the macabre scene as darkness enveloped the east end. How the drug-maddened Tate ceaselessly loaded and fired, as police bullets criss-crossed the room. Frankie said she had lain huddled in a corner all the time. Once, when Tate suspected she was going to rush out, he slapped her down. "You'll go when I go!" he roared.

Came the grim moment when Tate put the shotgun to his forehead, and spouting blood fell dead on top of her. When she struggled out from under his bulk, it was to face the ominous muzzles of police guns. She swore she never fired a shot or loaded a gun, though police noticed that of three cartridge belts picked up in the room, one was so small it could only have fitted a woman. She denied, however, that she ever wore it.

So the case ended in a note of doubt, and Frankie got the benefit of it. When she was finally free of the law, she slipped back across Main Street, to the only life she knew.

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE



SUE FOULKES, 2318 Edgelow, with her mount, Molly, head for the wide, open spaces. There's so much activity this year in horse circles that even the wide, open spaces may become a bit crowded.

WARM-UP TIME for HORSE CLUBS

By BERT BINNY

At the time of writing my horse, Duke, is having his annual attack of spring fever. He suddenly recollects the gentle art of bucking and, for two or three weeks, enjoys fun and games of a type which never occurs to him during the rest of the year. With him around I need no further reminders of the advent of spring.

I saw 10 very dignified swans sitting close together at the side of Brookleigh Road, right at the southern foot of Bear Hill. They seemed to be in conference, perhaps debating the household and family problems that this season inevitably brings in its colorful train.

The first trail ride of the season occurred on April 2, a purely social affair sponsored by the Western Horsemen's Association. It started from Ed Copeland's place on Hartland Avenue, which is a gateway to the highlands and the thoroughfare to the magnificent garbage dump as well as to Killarney, Jewel, Durrance, Pease and the many other lakes which nestle in the hollows in the highlands.

These are all signs—along with a multitude of others—of the event never better described than by the preacher in the Book of Ecclesiastes: "For, lo! the winter is past, the rain is over and gone; the flowers appear on the earth; the time of the singing of birds is come, and the voice of the turtle is heard in our land."

It's spring.

But spring is essentially a time for awakening, for preparation, for picking up where one left off last fall and for starting out afresh; refurbishing the old and breaking out the new.

There's a tremendous amount of that sort of thing going on right here in Victoria. Last year it was pointed out that, in the matter of entertainment, a conservative estimate of the number of items in July and August was 300.

Indications are that even this substantial figure will rise again in 1967.

However, the summer is assuredly the especial season tailored to the requirements of outdoor interests. Among such are the various pursuits associated with horses. There are hundreds of horses on the lower part of the Island and a preliminary survey indicated beyond all doubt that they, too, can look forward to a summer of huge activity.

These activities take a variety of forms such as shows, fairs, parades, play days and trail rides of a competitive or purely social nature.

As regards these last there is to be a grand centennial trail ride from Aug. 10 to 24 and from Squamish clear to Williams Lake. Sponsoring this venture—which is especially notable—is the Garden City Horsemen's Club of Victoria.

Existing publicity offers "200 miles of forest, mountain, alpine, foothill and rangeland trails" at a cost of $130, covering "food for horse and rider." This works out at 50c a mile or just under $10 a day, which seems entirely reasonable in view of the enjoyment and experience to be gained.

However, there are other reckonings such as transit of horse and rider, firstly, to Squamish, and, secondly, home again from Williams Lake.

Applications must be in by July 15, accompanied by that $130. Participants under 15 must be accompanied by a parent; those 15 to 18 must have written, parental consent. These little wrinkles, incidentally, apply to just about all trail rides of any great length.

The route to be followed is, in brief, from Paradise Valley Resort to Rainbow Lodge, Pemberton, Indian Meadows, Cassiar Copper Mine, McGillivray Pass, Gold Bridge, Relay Creek, Sky Ranch, Big Creek, Farewell Canyon, Riske Creek and Williams Lake. Who could ask for a more romantic roster of names? The longest day's journey (into night?) is 27 miles and the shortest is 12 miles.

The trail ride secretary, who has all the details and particulars at her fingertips, is Mrs. Stan Walt at 658-5591.

But the Garden City organization also has its annual 100-mile trail ride scheduled, the sixth in a row.

This takes place May 26 to 29 in the Gaddstream-Jordan River area. It would make a nice warm-up for the grand safari of August. The same general age regulations apply; the cost is $20; entries close on May 14 and the secretary is Linda-Mae Fitzpatrick of 2319 Cook Street.

The Western Horsemen's Club started the seasonal ball rolling with a trail ride through the highlands to the MacKenzie Bay area on April 2. But it is actively considering other such outings on the last Sunday of each month.

Western secretary is Miss Frances Rorvik of 6372 West Saanich Road (652-2394) and the president is Bill Grimshaw, who lives down the road apiece at No. 5933 (652-1042).

In June the Western Horsemen stage their highly successful and much appreciated show at the Solarium, an event now in its fourth year and now presented at the very special request of the Solarium authorities. Young Solarium patients are goggle-eyed at the sight of such phenomena as a working quarter horse, an Arabian (in full dress), a thoroughbred, an Appaloosa (in full Indian style), a clown with a burro (or Rocky Mountain canary), and a miniscule Shetland colt. There are buggy rides, too, and, if ever there was an occasion where a good time was had by all, this is it.

The U-Tree Highlanders, whose base of operations is at the U-Tree Farm, 2378 Millstream Road, has two council shows and one open show in view, the first being held about the second week in July. But it also envisages summer trail rides.

The Colwood Trail Riders likewise have a full program which started with a competitive Trail Ride on April 16. They have other rides, both competitive and just for fun, in the future along with a number of shows including one of their very own.

The president of the Colwood Trail Riders is Brian Weldon of 1136 Nield Road in Happy Valley (478-4393).

The Sunset Riding Club which centres in the north end of the Saanich Peninsula, has about as varied and ambitious a calendar of events as anyone.

Its secretary is Mrs. V. W. Grant, 924 Birch Road (656-3475). Activities chairman is Alf Pink, 488 Goward Road (479-1906). When activities

THE PUDDYS

of the Phoenix Copper Camp

Phoenix, for 20 years one of the richest and most exciting cities in Canada, became a ghost town. Now, like the phoenix bird of ancient mythology, the old Phoenix mines are awakening again.

By ERIC SISMEY

Where did you get the name Juan? I asked Juan Leslie Puddy when I visited him a few days ago. That is a Spanish name!

Well, he replied, my father owned a barber shop in Everett, Washington, and when I was born in 1907 he borrowed the name from the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

I was only a few days old when we left Everett and after looking around Yakima, Wenatchee and other central Washington towns we reached Spokane where my father heard of booming Phoenix. A few days later we stepped off the Great Northern train at Phoenix, which, as one writer described: "A brassy place full of locomotives, blasting, four churches, a champion hockey team, 28 saloons, five dance halls, gambling casinos, the biggest plate-glass window in the west, and a boarding house where 400 miners once had a fight over a girl."

PHOENIX, UPPER TOWN . . . Still in the era of wooden sidewalks along the main street.

The first claims in the Greenwood Camp were staked in 1891. Among the early locators was Robert Denzler; it is reported that while he was on a prospecting trip porcupines ate his boots which forced him to walk 30 miles with strips of blanket wrapped around his feet.

In 1895, after the extent of the huge mineralized area was realized the boom began and the former Greenwood Camp developed into Phoenix, which, perched at 4,630 feet, was the highest city in Canada.

And to these copper claims, scattered across Mount Attwood: Old Ironsides, Knob Hill, Gold Drop, Snowshoe, Curlew, Idaho, Stemwinder, Athelstan and a dozen others the Granby Copper Company, B.C. Copper Company and the Dominion Copper Company came to begin extensive development.

Power was brought from Boundary Falls in 1898 and from the West Kootenay Power Company in 1899. About 1,900 smelters were completed at Boundary Falls, Greenwood and Grand Forks. Two railroads, Canadian Pacific and Great Northen quarrelled even though there was business for both.

As the mines developed, extended and grew the log cabins and shacks of the old camp gave way to frame buildings and wooden sidewalks along the streets. These in turn were soon replaced by substantial brick buildings, business blocks, elaborate homes and the Brooklyn, a hostel unmatched in British Columbia, and a Main street, bordered with concrete sidewalks, which would have done credit to either Spokane or Vancouver. And from a rough and ready copper camp Phoenix had become a city of Victorian elegance.

Such was the town the Puddys found when they stepped from the train at the great Northern Phoenix Station in 1909. And it was not outside a shop on Main Street.

When the Puddys agreed to disagree in 1912, Ellen Puddy took over the barber shop and the Mint Hotel which she operated until the camp closed in 1919. In an article published in the Free Press weekly section of the Western Farmer Mrs. Puddy was sketched shearing the shaggy locks of a booted miner. Actually it was not that way at all. Ellen Puddy's tonsorial parlors, as barber shops often were named, catered to the elite of the city, among them the mayor, aldermen and others of the city's upper crust.

The Mint was not a hotel in the usual sense. It had neither dining room nor bar. It did not cater to transient trade, rather it was a bachelor establishment where occupants kept their quarters from one year's end to another.

There were no restaurants in Phoenix, Juan explained, single men were served by boarding-houses and even in the rougher part of town, at the Imperial where a ticket for 21 meals cost $7, patrons sat at cloth covered tables. There were no stool and counter meals anywhere in Phoenix.

Juan went to school when he was five, that would be 1912. At that time there were about 150 pupils. Teachers did not stay long; they came to teach, but in a city where women were scarce it was not long before they were led to the altar.

Phoenix was a wonderful place to grow. There was so much to see, so much to do within the limits of the town. At all hours puffing locomotives of two railroads shunted ore cars around. Canadian Pacific ore trains ran down to Eholt where they were switched to Greenwood or Boundary Falls. The Great Northern Railway operated two ore trains a day, one at 10 in the morning, the other at 10 at night with as many as 30 loaded gondolas. There was also a daily mixed train from Grand Forks with one or more passenger coaches; this train arrived at Phoenix at six in the evening.

At that time Spokane was the centre of trade and business for the Boundary and the Kootenays and a daily train which included a chair car ran between Princeton, B.C., and Spokane. Yes! Princeton, B.C. by way of Oroville, Wn., Bridesville, B.C., Myncaster, B.C., Ferry, Curlew, and Danville in Washington to Grand Forks and Spokane. Connection was made at Grand Forks for the mixed train to Phoenix.

Show me any boy, Juan remarked, who does not enjoy watching the trains.

"Up the hill at the Glory Hole, steam shovels loaded ore in cars as fast as it was blasted down and ore car trains pulled by electric dollies scurried from tunnel portals in almost an endless stream. There were the air compressor stations too," he said. "I never tired of watching the big fly-wheels go round and round and the piston rods of Ingersoll-Rand compressors slide backwards and forward. Sometimes an engineer invited me inside to take a closer look, and even allowed me to carry his oil can as he went about his rounds.

"Through the long winter young and old alike enjoyed skating and tobogganning; skiing, introduced by Scandanavians, was spreading not only to Canadians but to Welsh and Cornish miners. Hockey matches played against teams as far away as Fernie were almost a weekly event. In summer picnics were well attended, it seemed as though half the town boarded special trains for Greenwood or Grand Forks.

JUAN LESLIE PUDDY
. . . has vivid memories

"There were one or two rather questionable exploits of my boyhood gang, which included the mayor's son. The pond of the Phoenix brewery lay not far from and below the Great Northern trestle. It occurred to someone that the pond would be a good place to swim.

"Somewhere, somehow we heard that bathing trunks were usually required but never having seen one we devised our own. The smaller boys fitted themselves with empty, white cotton Bull Durham sacks, while older boys made use of the larger yellow and red Old Chum tobacco sacks," he recalled.

"One Sunday afternoon while we were

All the world loves the orange . . . colorful as its own lovely orange skin is the history of this lovely fruit. They were grown in Burma 4,000 years ago . . . 2,000 years before Christ was born. Thousands of years later its admirers, marauding Arabs, Genoese sailors, Roman soldiers and Crusaders, carried it throughout the Mediterranean world. By the 14th century the orange was brought to England by the Portuguese . . . the fruit was thought to be regal enough to be served at the coronation banquet of Henry IV, in 1399.

Later, comely young women became a familiar and picturesque sight about the cobbled alleyways and streets of London with their hand barrows laden with the colorful fruit. Fact and fiction are mixed as to how oranges arrived in the New World. The names of both Juan Ponce de Leon and Christopher Columbus enter into the speculation . . . from conjecture we assume that oranges went first from Spain to Puerto Rico, to Florida, (during the 1500s) to Mexico and thence to California, (probably in the early 1700s). The first Californian orange grove was planted in 1841 in what is now downtown Los Angeles. In Canada we get oranges from both Florida and California.

Compactness may be the smartest thing in cars . . . but Mother Nature has been practising this principle for years with the valencia orange (just now coming into their season.) Compact in size, almost seedless, more sweet juice to the pound, and flavor that is hard to beat. It is an all-purpose orange ideally suited for slicing and sectioning in the preparation of appetizers, salads and desserts. To show the wonderful versatility of this delightful citrus fruit I will give you three recipes . . . an entree, a salad and a dessert.

First, halibut steaks simmer in a tart-sweet broth of freshly squeezed orange juice, pickling spices and salt for a delicate fish dish. A wilted salad combines fresh spinach, orange slices, scallions and radishes with a warm dressing of orange juice, oil, vinegar and seasonings. Rhubarb and orange sections are delicately coupled in a dessert cobbler. The tartness of rhubarb is a perfect flavor foil for the sweetness of valencias. Even people who aren't overly fond of rhubarb will enjoy this dessert.

MURIEL WILSON'S THOUGHT FOR FOOD

ORANGES for Appetizers

HALIBUT VALENCIA . . . 2 cups orange juice, 2 Tbsp. pickling spices, ½ tsp. salt, 4 halibut steaks and 1 tbsp. cornstarch (optional). In a large skillet, combine orange juice, spices and salt. Add halibut and simmer about 10 minutes or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Remove from heat, keep warm. If desired stir the cornstarch into a little cold water then combine with the orange juice in skillet. Heat, stirring constantly until thickened. Strain out spices and pour over fish. Garnish with parsley and orange cartwheels. Colorful and delicious.

WILTED CITRUS SALAD . . . 10 oz. raw spinach (small tender leaves washed and patted dry,) 3 oranges peeled and sliced, 1 bunch scallions, chives or green onions chopped, 1 bunch radishes sliced, DRESSING . . . ¼-cup salad oil, 2 Tbsp. vinegar, 2 Tbsp. orange juice, ¼ tsp. Tabasco, ¼ tsp. salt and ¼ tsp. dry mustard. Coarsely tear spinach into a large salad bowl. Add sliced oranges, scallions and radishes. Heat salad oil, vinegar, orange juice, Tabasco, salt and mustard. Pour warm dressing over salad and toss lightly. Serve immediately. 6 to 8 servings.

SPRING COBBLER . . . Orange and rhubarb. 2 cups chopped rhubarb, 4 oranges sectioned, 2 Tbsp. flour, ⅛ tsp. salt, ⅔ cup honey, 1 cup packaged biscuit mix, 2 Tbsp. sugar, ⅓ cup milk and 1 Tbsp. sugar. In a 1½-quart casserole toss rhubarb and orange sections. Sprinkle with the 2 Tbsp. flour and the salt. Pour honey over all. Stir to blend. In a small bowl combine biscuit mix, sugar and milk. Pour over fruit mixture. Sprinkle with the 1 Tbsp. sugar. Place in a preheated 425 degree F. oven, uncover for about 40 minutes or until golden and bubbly. About 8 servings.

There are so many lovely recipes using oranges that it is difficult to choose which one to give you. With a family in mind here is a large Orange Loaf that would be fine for after-school snacks or for lunch boxes.

LARGE ORANGE LOAF . . . ⅔ cup finely slivered orange rind (about 4 oranges), 1⅓ cups sugar, 1-3 cup water, 1-3 cup shortening, 1 1-3 cups orange juice, 3 eggs, well beaten, 4 cups sifted all purpose flour, 4 tsp. baking powder, ½ tsp. baking soda and 2 tsp. salt. Wash and dry oranges. Remove very thin peel with a sharp knife, cutting around the orange. Cut peel into very thin slivers with scissors or knife. Combine sugar and water in saucepan, add peel and stir constantly over heat until sugar is dissolved. Cook slowly for 5 minutes. Cooked peel and syrup should measure 1 and 1-3 cups. Add shortening and stir until melted. Add orange juice and beaten eggs. Sift dry ingredients. Add orange mixture to dry ingredients and mix just to moisten. Batter should be lumpy. Bake in a well greased and floured loaf pan 9x5x3 inches for 1 hour and fifteen minutes. Oven temperature 325 degrees F. Cool on wire rack. Slices best the next day.

Here is a lovely dessert. In Greek mythology, ambrosia was a balsamic juice which served as food of the gods and preserved their immortality. Bride's Corner

To section an orange . . . cut slice from top, then cut peel in strips from top to bottom or cut off in a spiral fashion. Cut deep enough to remove all of the white membrane. Now with a sharp knife remove section by section of the fruit, cutting close to the dividing membrane.

Many foods are enhanced by the flavor of orange . . .

For baked squash . . . cut portion-sized pieces of unpeeled squash. Mix equal parts of melter butter and orange juice, then brush this mixture over all the cut surfaces. Sprinkle with salt, then with brown sugar and bake. Sweet potatoes can be peeled and done in the same way.

After frying link sausages, drain fat from skillet and add ¼ cup honey or maple syrup. Peel 2 or 3 oranges, section and add fruit to the skillet. With a wooden spoon baste and toss sausages and orange in honey to glaze.

Don't discount the value of orange peel . . . it is an excellent flavor agent and incidently it contains a carbohydrate concentrate (fine for energy). Grated orange peel freezes well. Wash oranges, dry and grate peel. Do up in small foil packages for freezing. (Oranges can always be juiced after the peel has been grated off.) With a few of these little packages in the freezer you always have instant orange flavoring on hand.

Grated orange peel added to mashed potatoes is delectable. It also gives a certain zest to other vegetables such as beets, peas and carrots and brussel sprouts. And why not try it with scrambled eggs?

DEAR HELOISE:

I've found that a muffin tin makes a wonderful tray in the refrigerator for baby bottles and opened jars of baby food.

The bottles don't tip and spill, and by using a large tin, the day's supply of milk and the small jars of baby food are always within easy reach. The "tray" can be slid in and out as needed, and the small jars are not always hidden behind larger containers.

KEEP OFF THE SINK!

DEAR HELOISE:

To keep our children from pulling out kitchen drawers (which they have done), and climbing up on the drainboard to get to the crackers and snacks I keep up there . . . I put anything I allow them to eat between meals in one of the bottom drawers in my kitchen. This is their drawer.

I have taught them that they cannot climb on top of the cabinet to get anything I have placed out of their reach, but oh, how they love their special drawer! I even keep a few apples and bananas in there from time to time. After all, fruit is always good.

WAX YOUR IRON

DEAR HELOISE:

When I iron starched clothes and the iron starts to stick to the clothes, I tear off a piece of waxed paper, crumple it up and put it on the end of my ironing board.

Yes, and did you know that you could take a piece of white candle, wrap three or four thicknesses of an old T-shirt or bath towel around it, and put this on the end of your ironing board?

This can be used for months and months. The candle eventually melts into all the little fibers in that piece of terry cloth or old T-shirt.

I find this the best yet to wipe my iron on to keep it from sticking.

IT'S SEW MAGNETIC

DEAR HELOISE:

I went to my dime store and bought two of the darlingest little red magnets. I put them on my sewing machine to use as a guide line when stitching seams.

One thing I like about it is if I am sewing a five-eighths-inch seam, the magnets can be adjusted. If I am hemming, the magnets can be moved inwards.

This is not only good for beginners, but also for old timers like me.

DEAR FRIENDS:

When you clear the table at night and want to save some vegetables that are left over, do not transfer them to a smaller bowl. Put them in a small pan (the proper size) and set it in your refrigerator.

The reason for this is you will heat the food the next day or so anyway. Then just remove the pan from the refrigerator and heat it in the same pan. This saves washing that extra bowl.

I also learned that if the leftovers are in a pan you are more apt to heat and re-serve them.

FOR POWDERED MILK

DEAR HELOISE:

Since we started using a special powdered milk for drinking, we found that it was sometimes difficult to dissolve and mix all the powder in the water. To make this task easier, do this:

Put the powdered milk into a jar, add one-half the required amount of water and finish filling the jar with ice cubes until the liquid comes to the desired amount. Shake vigorously.

The ice cubes mix and cool the milk at the same time.

DEAR HELOISE:

My little sister had tonsillitis and had to take medicine every four hours.

MOUNTAIN ABOVE HORNE LAKE OFFERS STRIKING VIEW.

HORNE LAKE CAVE HUNT

Sights that await discovery underground are staggering say Victoria speleologers who discovered new caves at Horne Lake Easter weekend.

By T. W. PATERSON

Take an otherwise normal man, or woman, willing to rise with the sun, drive over a hundred miles, scour a rugged mountainside to the point of exhaustion, then risk a dunking and bruising in a frigid streambed, and you'll probably have a cave hunter. To be exact, a member of the newly-registered B.C. Speleological Society.

This latest breed of adventurer to appear on the local scene is normally an average fellow. Five days of the week he is the service manager of an equipment rental agency, an art student, heavy equipment operator, industrial steam cleaner . . . even a chest surgeon. The female membership includes a secretary, a telephone operator and a housewife. But come the weekend, they're off to the hills to chase down the rumored location of a cave which may turn out to be no more than a pothole.

Origin of the society, formerly B.C. Cave Hunters, was given in the article, B.C.'s Park Under a Mountain, The Islander, Sept. 25, 1966.

Every expedition is given the meticulous care of a military operation. Once a scheme has been agreed upon, there follows weeks of planning under the guidance of a co-ordinator. Usually it is his own project, and he is in charge of members while in the field, determining the search pattern and detailing work parties.

The recent expedition which we accompanied was to Horne Lake, whose famous caves have intrigued visitors for many years. Our purpose was to trace other caverns which had been reported in this popular area. Thus it was we set out at 5 a.m. Good Friday.

Thursday night, three members had towed a rented house trailer to the camping spot at the lake. Arriving early Friday, we enjoyed a hot breakfast in the trailer, then got down to work. Loading into club founder Clarence Hronek's customized camper, a painstakingly converted Hudson's Bay Company delivery van, we set out. First on co-ordinator Ken Sinkiewicz's schedule was the report of a cave on the lake shore. Gauging its rough location by the truck's mileage indicator, we parked, then trooped down to the lake, which is paralleled by the road. Horne Lake's most striking feature is its gravelled bench-like shore; a dam drops its level by 30 feet or more, at times.

Our guidepost was a small waterfall. We found two, but no cave. By fanning out, each man equipped with a walkie-talkie, the club is able to cover vast areas quickly and thoroughly. In this case, an hour's work was to no avail. However, judging by the tremendous boulders tumbled about the shore, any cave here would undoubtedly be a rockfall type, or talus cave, which is of lesser interest to the society.

Regrouping, we began phase two of the expedition, an assault on formidable Mark Mountain. This awesome hill is mostly limestone, the rock in which most water-worn caves are to be found. Choosing a gaping crevice as the most likely site, we started up. On a large scale hunt such as this, one man is left with the truck as "base." He operates the main radio transmitter, guiding the others should they become separated and out of reach of the walkie-talkies. This happens frequently as the little radios, particularly in a region criss-crossed with high voltage power lines and rugged terrain, cannot be expected to accomplish the incredible. However, at the cost of many batteries—not to mention considerable cursing—they do the job.

The better part of an hour was spent in reaching our goal, the 2,000-foot level. Despite aching legs and heaving lungs, whether we found a cave or not, it was well worth the effort. For Horne Lake offered a view that must be known to few.

From this height, it was the brightest emerald green we've been privileged to see on nature's palette. Thick snow clouds shrouded the silver mountains . . . As the sun momentarily burst through, Horne Lake seemed to leap into life, a vibrant, throbbing sea of green. It is a sight we will long treasure; in our memories, sadly, as we were armed only with black and white film . . .

We proceeded upward. Following the sounds of falling water, we struggled through choked undergrowth—treacherously wet—to an awesome cleft fully 100 feet high and 200 feet wide. Here the cliff afforded a natural roof from the scattered snowfalls. It also provided us with our first cave. A small creek, swelled by the melting snows of a million winters, had carved its way through the mountainside. Centuries ago, it had changed course, pouring out farther down the cliff. Its former mouth, a perfect circle in the limestone, was our goal. Here the rock was chalky with dissolved minerals. Even in the shadows, calcite crystals winked merrily.

After a quick lunch, one of the more enthusiastic members, Paul Statham, elbowed his way into the narrow cave. Minutes later, he emerged with a whoop from a hole above the entrance. Unfortunately, this particular cavern would have to wait until summer when the creek dried enough to allow a thorough examination.

The afternoon passed in exploring the mountainside, with the result we chalked up a second cave. It, too, would have to await inspection. Hiking back to the truck, we discussed the day's work, and planned Saturday's project. There was no dissenting voice to the comment it had been a day well spent.

Back at the trailer, we enjoyed a hot supper. Despite the day's labor, three members went off to explore Horne Lake Cave that night; in the perpetual darkness underground, it little matters the hour of your visit.

Late Saturday morning, accompanied by society president Dennis Richards, wife Sue, and terrier Tina—the club's best caver— who had driven up Friday night, we began tracing other caves of the Horne Lake system which had been reported over the years. Within an hour, Mr. Statham had stumbled upon the prize. To the new members, this cave was breathtaking.

The river had altered course, leaving a vast subterranean network virtually "high and dry" and begging for exploration. Restraining the more eager members from rushing in, co-ordinator Sinkiewicz took charge. It is at times, like this that the club's cardinal rule—safety first—must be observed.

Considerable thought—and hard experience—has gone into deciding the equipment and procedure underground. Each person must have three sources of light (usually two flashlights and a candle), a length of nylon rope (it is light and flexible), water-proofed matches, knife, whistle and compass. A hard hat, such as construction workers wear, is a must. Also rubber-soled boots. Old coveralls are preferred as they are not prone to catching on obstructions or in tight corners as do jackets. Also, it is best not to wear heavy clothing; you are bound to get wet and the lighter your dress, the sooner you will dry out.

Walkie-talkies are important here, too. Again, one man remains topside as base. To avoid confusion and the chance of becoming separated, underground parties are kept small. On this day, Mr. Sinkiewicz led three new members on the initial survey, the rest of us anxiously awaiting our turn at the entrance. It was eerie, listening to them probe deeper and deeper into the bowels of a mountain. At some points, their voices faded out completely, leaving a spooky silence.

Finally, it was our turn. And it was well worth waiting for.

For the sights awaiting you underground are staggering. Pictures and film cannot create the sense of isolation and personal discovery that comes only from actual experience. Glistening white waves of calcite — "flows" — that resemble the icing of a giant cake, four-foot stalactites that dance in the flickering glow of your flashlight, the singing of the creek, voices echoing from nowhere ... Water drops that glisten on the ceiling like precious gems.

Overpowering is the feeling that no human being has been here before you, a pride only slightly dampened by the discovery of old flash bulbs. Someone whistles overhead; you turn your light upward, gaze in awe at the cathedral-like gallery from which the helmeted creature is grinning . . . A giant cave cricket freezes in the torch's beam, enormous daddy longlegs cover a wall.

Several hundred feet in, the cave roof and stream meet, pinching off further exploration at this time of year, but promising many future hours of enjoyment. Not until every nook and cranny has been searched and charted will the society place this cave in the "finished business" file.

Unlike the Horne Lake caves known to the public, this cavern is in its natural state. No vandals have done their worst here, fortunately.

When it came time to head back to the truck — dripping wet and nursing a tender knee after an unscheduled dip in the shallow creek — it was with a feeling of regret. Probably no other cave will make as vivid an impression as this, our first. Halfway to the road, we found three more! Only one was worthy of investigation. It can be entered only by the use of ropes, as it drops about 50 feet straight down.

Most of us returned home that night, pleased with ourselves and the Easter weekend, tired but ready to go again. Whatever one's interest — photography, writing, geology, or just a love of this forest fairyland nature has given us — he is sure to satisfy them all by caving. There is a lot to learn, but more to see.

And every scratch, bruise and tired muscle is worth it.

Colonist Advocated British Columbia Join Canada

By JAMES K. NESBITT

"Resolved—that the people of the United States cannot regard the proposed confederation of the provinces on their northern frontier without extreme solicitude.

"A confederation of states, extending from ocean to ocean, without consulting the people of these provinces, founded on monarchial principles, cannot be considered otherwise than as a contravention of the traditions and the constantly declared principles of this government, that will endanger most important interests and tend to increase and perpetuate embarrassment, which the governments (of the U.S. and the U.K.) were already discussing."

This resolution was passed by the U.S. Senate's foreign affairs committee 100 years ago this month — and the repercussions were violent indeed.

There they were, those Americans, poking their noses into the affairs of Canada, opposing the confederation of Quebec, New Brunswick and Nova Scotia. If there was anything needed to make iron of the determination of the Fathers of Confederation it was that resolution. They would indeed march together to form the Kingdom of Canada, which came about July 1, 1867, only by that time the word Kingdom was replaced by Dominion, so as to placate the Americans, who did not like the idea of a European monarchy on this continent.

SOMEWHERE ALONG THIS ROW OF SHACKS by the Yates-Government corner, in 1866 Colonist editor D. W. Higgins wrote his flowing editorials, castigating Mother England for ignoring British Columbia and not buying Alaska, to save us from being hemmed in by Uncle Samuel.

Reaction to the U.S. resolution reached these then far-distant shores in two weeks or so, and sent The Colonist into a great state.

Its editorial, a masterly piece of writing, and in part: "We ask — what right the people of the United States have to assume that their 'traditions' and 'declared principles' should influence in any degree the parties interested in this grand scheme, the confederation of British North America.

"No nation is capable of either living alone, nor indeed has any the courage to do it. However, as it is impossible for the whole human race of mankind to be united into one great society, they must necessarily divide into many, and form separate states, commonwealths and nations, entirely independent of each other, and yet liable to mutual intercourse.

"What distinctive rights of the United States would be infringed upon, if the confederation scheme became an accomplished fact?

"Is the policy of the government of the United States such a masterpiece of human wisdom, or has the experience of her statesmen improved its policy to such perfection that its foundation cannot be shaken, that it may assume to occupy the highest place in the civilized world? Manifest Destiny! Has not history taught us the fate of mighty nations?

"The Monroe Doctrine, as it is termed, is not a principle founded either upon nature, or in reason.

"What sympathy can there be between loyal Canadians, and a neighboring nation which harbors swindling ruffians (the Fenians) under the hopeless pretext of hunting down the British Lion and rescuing the Emerald Isle from his claws?"

Well, if The Colonist was displeased with the United States, it was even more displeased with the United Kingdom, surprising as that may be, looking back all these years later, when we had been led to believe that anything England did or did not do was calmly accepted in this very British place.

There was some nervousness because the United States had pulled a fast one — the purchase of Alaska from Russia. There were many people here who felt Great Britain had fallen down when it did not buy Alaska and put up the Union Jack there. British Columbians felt abandoned, caught in the vice-like grasp of the United States — Americans to the south of them, Americans to the north of them.

But who, as Premier Bennett often asks today, would British Columbians rather have than Americans as their closest neighbors? The question answers itself.

The Colonist led in the criticism of England: "On all sides it is agreed that Great Britain has treated her Pacific colony with shameful, inexcusable neglect — a neglect that early blighted every effort of the people to keep pace with the progress of their American neighbors, and has resulted finally in the utter prostration and almost irretrievable ruin of every interest within its borders.

"Instead of the young and feeble community being tenderly nurtured and encouraged by a helping hand from the Mother Country it has been treated with a chilling indifference that has steeled the hearts of the colonists against England and her institutions.

"Our citizens have seen their representative institution — the birthright of every Briton — snatched from their hands: they have submitted uncomplainingly to have the heavy load of debt they never incurred, strapped to their backs — they are compelled to pay heavier taxes than any other colony has even been called upon to bear."

Then came the astonishing punch-line, which must have sent the most British in Victoria completely reeling over their early morning tea: "Many of you people now sigh for another form of government, so impressed are they with the belief of the failure of the attempt to establish British institutions on the Pacific Coast; and since no change could be for the worse, they would welcome annexation to the United States, in preference to continuing in a state of poverty and wretchedness."

This potent editorial is now so much a part of our history that many people will appreciate reading it today, just as our forebears did that morning a century ago:

"In writing thus, we know we speak the mind of nine out of every 10 men in the colony —men, who, after struggling for years to awaken the Home Government to a sense of the wrongs under the weight of which we are staggering, have at last sat down in despair at the gloomy prospects before them.

"The same line of policy that drew together the Boston Tea Party, and cost England her 13 colonies, is now being pursued towards us. The same policy that estranged Canadians from the Mother Country and brought on the rebellion of '37 is being continued here in British Columbia.

"The people, disgusted, disheartened, and all but ruined — are loud in their preference for the Stars and Stripes.

"This sentiment is heard at every street corner — at social gatherings — in business circles — at the theatre — in the saloons: the loyalty, even of men who have fought to preserve the loyalty of old England, is seriously shaken; the young men are growing up impressed with the idea that England would be only too glad to get rid of us, and that to become part of the 'Universal Yankee Nation' is our inevitable destiny—our irresistable fate.

"This state of feeling is but the natural result of the manner in which we have been treated by the Mother Country. Our prayers are undeeded, our remonstrances trampled under foot — our commerce ruined.

"If the Home Governent desires to retain our affections it has got to manifest an interest in our welfare. It must not teach us to forget our duty as British subjects by first forgetting its duty towards us.

"It must foster, encourage, and assist us in maintaining a connection that will do as much to the glory and strength of the Mother Country as it will result in our own prosperity.

"But, if, on the other hand, Great Britain wishes to cast us off, she has only to continue her present policy for a few months longer, and her Pacific colonies may be found some fine morning in the present year of 1867 knocking at the door of the White House for admission."

. . . and said Great Britain should have bought Alaska

Gradually, The Colonist, no doubt representing public opinion, led up to open advocacy of British Columbia joining Canada, then about to be born. People threatened to join the United States, but they could not bear the idea of hauling down the Union Jack, and putting up the Stars and Stripes if there was any alternative at all. Canada was that alternative, even though it was a more-or-less foreign country, 3,000 miles away.

The Colonist said: "Is annexation (to the United States) the only panacea for our ills? Is it only by allying ourselves to a foreign nation that we can enjoy the blessings of life?

"We should be sorry to think so. We believe that confederation with the eastern provinces is the only course that will preserve the loyalty of this people, or save the country from falling into a condition of hopelessness from which it may emerge during the time of men now living."

This was in answer to some criticism that The Colonist was being traitorous, would give Mother England the slip and join the United States, for the sake of filthy lucre, so to speak.

Not at all, The Colonist said: "We have not in any way attempted to delude the public by telling them that if they were to crawl blubbering to the foot of the Throne, and express a weakness in favor of the 'fleshpots' of Uncle Samuel, that they would be allowed to sever the tie that binds them to the British crown.

"We have never indulged in any such silly language, nor do we intend to."

The Colonist certainly changed its mind, for only a few weeks before, remember, it had said: "The people, disgusted, disheartened, and all but ruined — are loud in their preference for the Stars and Stripes."

The Colonist, again, I am sure, expressing the public opinion of the day, lashed out at Great Britain because it did not purchase Alaska: "Had ordinary precaution been taken, or sufficient interest manifested in the welfare of this colony, by our Home Government, the whole of this magnificent territory to the north of us would today be under the British flag; but the imbecility, ignorance and neglect of British statesmen have allowed a glorious opportunity to pass unimproved, and the colony of British Columbia, closely hemmed in by her colossal neighbor, has scarcely room left in which to draw a long breath.

"The prestige of British institutions on this side of the continent has received a severe blow, from the effects of which it may not recover for many years, if ever."

Some Americans, apparently, would just have seen Great Britain had bought Alaska, they looked upon the purchase as a silly extravagance. They thought the $7,000,000 could have been better spent at home, instead of roaming halfway around the world to buy a piece of ice and snow, rocks and Christmas trees. "Seward's Folly," it was called, after U.S. Secretary of State William Henry Seward, who negotiated the purchase, and who came to Victoria in 1869, Alaska-bound, and was tendered a banquet by local citizens, at which he invited them to partake of the good life, and join the United States.

The Colonist, with due comment, told of some U.S. reaction to the purchase of Alaska:

"The New York Herald boldly states that 'barring the fish oil and furs' the new U.S. possession is utterly worthless from a material point of view, but that 'politically considered' the country is worth all that was paid for it, as involving a 'hint from the Czar to France and England that they have no business on this North American continent.

"The same New York paper adds that 'Seward has always had a weakness for annexation of Canada.'

The Victoria morning paper went on: "Those of our readers who perused the brilliant speeches by that eminent statesman (Seward) in 1860 when he was 'stumping' the north in favor of Mr. Lincoln, who was then a candidate for the presidency, will call to mind the emphasis with which he declared that the inevitable fate of the whole North American continent was to be absorbed by the United States.

"This is the Monroe Doctrine, of which we hear so much during every presidential canvas, and in which Mr. Seward is a firm believer.

"The New York Times seizes upon the occasion of the purchase to indite a panegyric of Mr. Seward's consummate statecraft, and predicts that many now living will see the day when the Pacific Coast will be as thickly studded with ports and cities as the Atlantic is now; and concludes that the purchase is a 'means to the end' of settling the Pacific Coast, and hastening the absorption of Vancouver Island and British Columbia by the Great Republic.

"The New York Tribune alone treats the purchase with disfavor and denounces the scheme as a tremendous folly."

The Colonist, while believing Alaska should have been bought by Britain and made part of British Columbia, had great praise for Seward, calling his purchase his 'masterstroke,' adding: "By it the United States virtually secures control of this whole coast, wresting from our grasp the Sitka trade, opening a new field for American enterprise and capital, and compels 300 miles of British territory lying behind the 30-mile strip (today called the Alaska panhandle) to pay tribute to a foreign power before the inhabitants can enjoy communication with the coast, and places the whole of Her Majesty's possession in the Pacific in the position of a piece of meat between two slices of bread, where they can be devoured at a single bite."

Stirring days, weren't they? Today we hear a great deal of talk about this changing world, but is it changing any more than it did 100 years ago?

The Puddys of the Phoenix Copper Camp

enjoying our swimming, my secret we thought, my mother wondered what the people on the trestle were looking at so she went to take a look and to her horror saw her sons, along with the other boys, splashing in the water of the brewery pond dressed in their make-shift trunks. With a yell that echoed around the hills mother summoned her boys and to this day," Juan chuckles, "I can still feel the bite of that willow switch."

"At a place just out of town there was a tumbledown barn and a corral where mushrooms grew. We used to gather them by the tubfull to peddle around town, mostly at the Brooklyn Hotel, at 25 cents a tub. One day one of the gang suggested that we try to sell some in that part of town mentioned only in whispers by polite society. And I was the chosen goat. My progress down to that forbidden area was watched with excitement by the rest of the gang. I knocked on the door of the House of the Blue Lights nervously. It was soon opened by the madam.

"Would you like to buy some mushrooms?" I asked timidly, while I showed her my brim-full pail.

"Come in, little man," she replied, as she ushered me into the empty parlor. It was mid-afternoon. I remember the red plush covered chairs and the piano at the end of the room.

"Presently, the madam returned to give me back my pail, 25 cents and an orange as well as an invitation to bring more mushrooms."

From that day more mushrooms were sold at the houses of "Colored Lights" than were peddled around the town.

Another source of income had the thrill of hidden treasure. Juan would crawl under the wooden sidewalks outside some of the saloons where it was not uncommon to find money which had been dropped to roll through the cracks between the planks. One day he found a half dollar.

Juan Puddy remembers the beginning of the first war in August, 1914. Phoenix recruits being escorted to the Canadian Pacific train led by the city band. He remembers, too, the hush which fell over the town when the first Phoenix casualties were posted. But disaster was no stranger to the camp, the mines were dangerous and safety rules now strictly observed were only beginning to be introduced.

"Armistice Day, Nov. 11, 1918, marked a double celebration for me," Juan said. "Not only did it signal the end of the war but the engine of the Great Northern train, festooned with decorations, brought home my mother, who was returning from Colville where she had become Mrs. Trounson."

While the armistice marked the end of the war little did the residents of Phoenix realize that it was the beginning of the end of their city. With depressed conditions all over the world the need for copper declined; the price dropped to 12, then 10 and finally to 7 cents a pound and when a strike in the Crow's Nest mines shut off the supply of coke the mines closed to signal the end of copper mining at Phoenix and Deadwood and of the smelters which treated the ores.

An earlier trouble at the mines had passed with little notice. As richer ores became scarce many high grade pillars in the underground workings were taken down. This resulted in extensive settlement in several parts of town. In one place the back end of the Granby Hotel, about 100 yards of CPR track and several loaded gondolas fell into a yawning pit.

When the mines closed in 1919, after more than a hundred million in copper, gold and silver had been recovered, there was nothing left, and exodus from Phoenix began. Mrs. Trounson sold her Mint Hotel for what it would bring, closed her barber shop and moved with her two Puddy boys to Eholt, then to Coltern. Other families moved to find work elsewhere, some to Butte, Montana, others to Anyox on the northern coast or to Copper Mountain, near Princeton, B.C.

Houses were left to tumble, others to bring anything wreckers offered. The more substantial buildings were salvaged, almost brick by brick, to be erected elsewhere. And Phoenix, for 20 years one of the richest and most exciting cities in Canada, became a ghost town.

But, not quite!

Phoenix, the bird in ancient mythology rose from its own ashes after destroying itself. And the Phoenix mines have done that too.

Several years ago, in the face of rising copper prices, new mining methods, new equipment and the successful concentration of lower grade ores by flotation, the Granby Company is working there again.

There is no town there now, work buildings are spread over the old townsite and the hundred men who mine and concentrate 2,000 tons of ore a day commute to Greenwood or Grand Forks. The concentrates are trucked to Vancouver for shipment to Japan.

"I shall always look back with the greatest pleasure to my boyhood days at Phoenix and to school days at Phoenix, Eholt, Coltern and Greenwood," said Juan.

"Perhaps Christmas seasons were the most exciting, crowded streets, decorated stores, Christmas entertainment at the school and Santa Claus who seemed so real. And those mysterious persons the men talked about but whom I never saw. One was Mr. Tom, the other Mr. Jerry. Always there was so much to do, so much to see that was good, interesting and healthy for growing boys and girls. Except for the occasional silent movie there were no entertainments in the modern sense; no radio, no TV, which I think was a good thing. Our amusements, for both young and old, were homemade, we knew our neighbors better and family life was more closely knit. We had little money, we needed little and 25 cents was quite a princely sum. What money we had was never by handout but was earned by something useful done. There was snow to shovel and wood to split and pile. This work was cheerfully done not with the expectation of reward but because it needed to be done."

Juan Puddy and his mother occasionally visit the site of their old home. It is difficult, he tells me, to pinpoint much of the old camp. The only really conspicuous land mark is the Glory Hole where the side of the mountain is still being sliced away. Near the boundary of the old city the cenotaph carries the names of Phoenix boys who fell in the First World War. It stands solitary now, at the edge of a growing forest, far from human company.

"One both sides of the road leading down to Greenwood we pause by the tumbled heaps of houses where friends once lived. Here and there the trace of old streets may be recognized, a rusting fire hydrant leaning in uselessness, and solitary headstone surrounded by wild flowers.

"We stop, sometimes, to walk slowly through the unkempt cemetery just outside the limits of the old town, to read the names of those we remember on headstones or headboards, some fallen others still erect," said Juan.

The cemetery is returning to the forest it once was where growing trees pay no respect to graves. And it will not be many more years before the trace of the burial ground will vanish and mother earth will have taken back her own.

Fascinating Description of Orwell

Reviewed by E. D. WARD-HARRIS

Of all current literary cults, the Orwellian is the healthiest, most rewarding, and is likely to be the most enduring.

To Orwellian cultists, old and new, The Crystal Spirit, George Woodcock's brilliant and satisfying new study, is the most exciting event since Orwell's disturbing voice was stilled by his tragically early death.

THE CRYSTAL SPIRIT, by George Woodcock; Clarke Irwin; 287 pages; $10.

Orwell stipulated in his will that no biography of him should be written, but with the several studies already published, together with many of his letters, we already have a sort of phantom biography.

Undoubtedly, when all those who knew him are dead, a definitive life of Orwell will be written by, as Woodcock bitterly remarks, "probably the wrong person."

Woodcock, a Canadian, was an intimate of Orwell — as intimate as it was possible to be with that fanatically reserved man. Woodcock has a mind of his own and he deals with Orwell subjectively, with never a trace of sycophancy.

The first portion of The Crystal Spirit is a fascinating description of Orwell the man as Woodcock knew him. He explains, as no one else has yet succeeded in doing, the compelling motivations that drove Orwell.

In the complex English class structure, Orwell was on the borderline between the upper middle class and the lower upper class. This made him a relatively poor and very unhappy boy at Eton, but exactly right as an officer in the British colonial service in Burma, from which he resigned at 24 to write.

As Orwell's sympathies lay with the underdog, whether Burmese natives or English workingmen, his own background filled him with guilt, and the class structure, and his efforts to cross the barrier downwards, became his lifelong preoccupation and conditioned everything he wrote.

Orwell (only his family, old friends and his bank manager knew that his real name was Eric Blair) envied the working classes and made repeated efforts to identify with them.

He lived with coal miners, drank his tea from a saucer and shared their atrociously prepared food. He became a vagrant and slept in doss houses in London slums. He worked as a scullion in the kitchen of an hotel in Paris.

But he was never wholly accepted. The barrier of accent alone effectively precluded it.

His experiences, however, provided material for four of his earlier books: Down and Out in Paris and London; A Clergyman's Daughter; Keep the Aspidistra Flying; and The Road to Wigan Pier. Also the working classes as he knew them became the "proles" in Nineteen Eighty-Four.

His later experiences when fighting with the Communists in Spain gave birth to his magnificent Homage to Catalonia and subsequently (with the addition of extensive study of the Russian experiment) to Animal Farm.

As Woodcock is at pains to point out, Orwell was not an imaginative writer; his work was based essentially on his own experiences. Animal Farm and Nineteen Eighty-Four, particularly the latter, was merely the logical and ghastly finale of western civilization unless the warnings were heeded.

Incidentally, Woodcock reminds us, Orwell was inspired to write Nineteen Eighty-Four after reading Evgeny Zamyatin's We, the same work which had inspired Aldous Huxley to write Brave New World. Both authors borrowed freely from Zamyatin.

The bulk of The Crystal Spirit consists of profound analyses of Orwell's books and essays conjoined with Woodcock's knowledge of Orwell's life and thoughts at the time.

Because there is so much of Orwell in his books, this identification of man and work is fascinating.

Woodcock, always penetrating and mostly objective, writes with controlled anger, anger directed towards those who have written about Orwell (Christopher Hollis in particular) without understanding this close connection.

This peevishness can be forgiven because Woodcock, who doesn't hesitate to criticize his hero when he considers this is warranted, is as honest in his writing as Orwell was, which is more than can be said for some others. I would forgive him anyway for having produced a masterly study of an incredibly difficult subject.

If you have not already done so, I beg of you to read Orwell's works (they're in Penguin pocket books) before tackling The Crystal Spirit. The reason is that George Woodcock's analyses are so complete and so brilliant that there is a danger in believing that one is familiar with the material discussed.

By not reading the books first, you'll only be cheating yourself.

How Gullible Can You Get?

Can we communicate with loved ones who have departed this life? Various salutary experiences have taught me never to scoff at anything without first listening intelligently to the arguments. It was in this serious spirit that I started to read The Search for the Truth.

After reading 30 pages I wondered if the author wasn't putting me on; after 40 pages I was convinced she was. But after 50 pages I realized she was being serious. I read no more, for how gullible can you get?

A SEARCH FOR THE TRUTH, by Ruth Montgomery; George J. McLeod; 224 pages; $4.95.

This is the ouija board, table-tapping, automatic writing routine, with mediums purporting to talk through outlandish "guides."

At one seance the voice of Big Chief White Mountain comes through loud and clear: "Me B-I-g Chief, me heap Big Chief, Ruth. Me go wherever you go. Me protect you all time." I kid you not. That appears on Page 31. And the whole book is more or less the same.

While all this malarkey is taking place the loved ones are lining up on the other side to speak. And what do they talk about? Their daughters' boy friends, uncompleted business deals, sport and stuff like that. All say they are happy and working hard!

After reading some of this poppycock it becomes clear why every year some otherwise reasonably sane people buy the Brooklyn bridge. — E.D.W-H.

James Jones' Novel First in Five Years

This is James Jones' first novel in five years and his first non-military story since And Some Came Running almost a decade ago. Clearly it is intended as an important addition to the Jones canon, not merely by reason of its size and the effort lavished on it, but also because it is the first novel by a major writer to deal with skin-diving. Jones is himself a skilled skin-diver and his book takes the reader deep into the marine cathedrals of the Caribbean.

GO TO THE WIDOW-MAKER, by James Jones; Delacorte Press; 418 pages; $7.50.

Unfortunately the skin-diving episodes, novel and pleasing though they are, cannot carry a story which concentrates for most of its length on the erotic relationships and emotional misunderstandings of a small group of self-centered characters. Jones today has a maturer, more sophisticated approach than in his two first novels, but his preoccupation with sexuality and manliness remains. Moreover his hero, though a successful Broadway playwright, displays a surliness and resentment reminiscent of the hero in And Some Came Running.

Jone's most successful novel remains his stunning first, From Here To Eternity, where a similar resentment was directed by his hero against the military establishment. This not only made sense but set the sex in that book into proper perspective. In the new novel, Ron Grant, the playwright, comes down to the island of Jamaica with his mistress, a woman old enough to be his mother, and her husband, whom he has cuckolded for years.

Right here we have an improbably situation, and to compound it further Ron also brings down Lucky Videndi, a beautiful blonde with whom he has fallen in love. He married Lucky, but her discovery of his earlier liaison threatens their marriage—and this despite the fact that the nubile Lucky boasts of having had 400 men in her time.

Jones plays musical chairs with his men, sending them in and out of bed with their women when they are not below the waves spear-fishing. The underwater scenes are the best things in the book, though you wonder whether the author is drawing the long bow when he lets his man bag a 45-lb. red snapper. Since most of us are unlikely to go snorkeling into the deeps, this book is an agreeable substitute.

The characters — Grant himself, his Italian descended wife, and certain other figures in the cast — may or may not be identifiable with living models. Readers may amuse themselves trying to pin labels if they wish. But there remains the problem of James Jones's talent and what he is doing with it. Clearly the time has come for him to stand away from his own experience and cease mirroring in his fiction the same old passions, prejudices and preoccupations. Otherwise his novels may all become variations on the same base theme, as this one is. — JOHN BARKHAM.

Changing Face of Canada Described in Canada 100

In commemoration of the first 100 years of Confederation in Canada, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics announces publication of a new 512-page book, Canada One Hundred 1867-1967.

Planned and edited by Dr. C. C. Lingard, director of the Canada Year Book, Handbook and Library Division of the bureau, this special Centennial volume presents in words, maps, charts and pictures the changing face of Canada during its first century as a federal state.

It describes the motivating forces of Confederation, life in the provinces in the 1880s, Canada's system of government, our attainment of national sovereignty, the multiethnic origin of the people, and — in chapters — the growth of the economy from pioneer colonial times to its present modern industrial state. Canada's social and cultural life is also portrayed in text and illustrations and a section is devoted to recounting the nation's role in international affairs. The volume concludes with a brief outline of the Centennial celebrations being held during 1967 in Ottawa and across Canada, and provides, for reference, a select list of additional Books about Canada.

A chapter entitled The Fine and Lively Arts explores the 100 year history of the arts in Canada, tracing its development through the cultural explosion of the 1950s to the present. Each major art form — music, literature, the visual arts, theatre, architecture and ballet — is examined and illustrated, including the names and works of many of the country's leading artists and authors. The section concludes with an account of Canada's Cultural Festival of 1967.

"One will find in this volume, in very concise chapter form, the highlights of our cultural, social, economic and political growth," Dr. Lingard stated. "As well, Canada's emergence as a power on the international stage can also be traced."

Work on the book actually began in 1959 with the drafting of the table of contents, and its publication in Canada's Centennial year is in lieu of the standard Canada 1967 issue of the Bureau's official Handbook series. With an initial press run of 500,000 copies Canada One Hundred 1867-1967 has become the largest publishing project ever undertaken by the Canadian Government, and, according to publishing authorities, probably of any book publisher in Canada.

The volume is priced at $2, with a reduction of 25 per cent for purchases in lots of 100 or more. Copies are available in both English and French editions from the Queen's Printer bookshops, local book stores, or by mail from the Queen's Printer, Ottawa.

The Crisis of Color

Reviewed by JOHN BARKHAM

That a deplorable imbalance between the "have" and "have not" nations exists is self-evident. So it was through a century or so of colonialism, and so it remains today in the newly independent nations of Asia and Africa. The causes lie deep in the past — ignorance, illiteracy, superstition, lack of education, capital, resources. It will take at least a generation, more probably two, of stable development and aid from the "haves" to redress the imbalance.

THE RACE WAR, by Ronald Segal; Viking Press; 416 pages; $6.50.

Ronald Segal is an angry young leftist, resident in Britain, who flays the "haves" because they have not yet performed this miracle. Arguing with Marxist fervor (Chinese brand), he lays the blame for the gulf between the rich and poor nations on (1) the white race, (2) capitalism, and (3) the United States, in that order. There is a race war in the making between the white and non-white races, he asserts, and his book is an attempt to document his viewing-with-alarm.

The Race War is a deceptive work, couched in a moderate manner but highly immoderate in its matter. This writer takes a hard-line Marxist view of the world and beats the drum for it throughout the book. (The Soviet Union is treated as a white nation now busy mending fences with the West.) It is true that the "have" nations are for the most part of the white race, since it was the white race which evolved Western civilization, explored the earth, and made its culture dominant in the world today. The newly emergent non-white nations, China included, are struggling to Westernize and industrialize themselves. The white nations could and should do more for them, but the sum of what they have so far done is brushed off contemptuously by the author.

The one real hope he sees for newly independent Africa and Asia is China. Segal speaks of these new nations as though they still bear colonial fetters. "To suppose that the white races will surrender their dominance without compulsion is denied alike by history and common sense," he declares, overlooking the fact that a non-white nation, Japan, raised itself by its own bootstraps into one of the great "have" powers of the world. Because the example of Japan weakens the validity of Segal's argument, he is compelled to fall back on calling Japan an American "satrap." What Japan was able to do, other non-white nations can do, given the energy, determination, and boundless skills.

In contrast stands China, preaching revolution to the under-developed world. After denouncing the white record in Africa (with reason), and blaming the United States for Latin America's endemic poverty (without reason), Segal paints a horrendous picture of the coming Armageddon between whites and Negroes in the United States. Against this blanket indictment of the whites he sets the shining example of Red China, champion of the "have-nots," savior of the poor around the globe. Regrettably for the book, China's internal upheavals, which occurred after it was written, negate much of the author's special pleading.

That relations between the white and non-white races may deteriorate before they improve is more than probably, because time is needed to eliminate poverty and ignorance. But Segals' interpretation of the problem is too one-sided to be of much help in alleviating it.

move indoors or become largely social. Mrs. Pink and Dawn Helps, 520 Downey (656-1969) step into the limelight as co-chairmen of social events.

The Sunset Riders have an overnight trail ride on May 12, the route being through the Highlands-Durrance Lake area. Early in June it has a play day but this is strictly for members only. Members can always bring guests on club trail rides and the fee here is $1.

Plans are well ahead for a Sidney Day Parade item and it is also reported that the 1967-68 Miss Sidney is to appear with the riders on one or two occasions.

This club offers riding instruction for all and it is co-operating with Trails Unlimited of Vancouver, a subsidiary of the B.C. Horsemen's Association, in the matter of opening up trails here and there. The focal point of interest at the present seems to be the West Coast Trail from Jordan River to Bamfield.

While it is always a good idea to co-operate, there are still a couple of points worth mulling over in connection with this Vancouver affiliation.

The Sunset Riders is also working with the adult education department of the Victoria school board in the institution of a course to be entitled: "Know Your Horse." Conducted by Dr. D. W. Gaunt and Roy Jewell, the course will run from October to December with a repeat performance from January to May. The fee will be $15.

A reverse curriculum for the horses: "Know Your Rider," is quite unnecessary. Far from requiring three months' tuition in the art, any horse can size up a rider in no time flat.

And, of course, the usual spate of Fall Fairs, such as those at Luxton and Saanichton, will undoubtedly crop up. These always include horse shows which, in turn, comprehend a remarkable phenomenon where men compete with the girls in glamor classes.

We may have a long, hot summer ahead: we almost certainly have a busy one.

The signs are abroad already!

PACHENA BEACH

WEST COAST HIKERS SEEK TRAIL OF THE SHIPWRECKS

By R. BRUCE SCOTT

Now that the lighthouses at Cape Beale, Pachena Point and Carmanah Point have recently been equipped with radio telephone for communication with the Bamfield lifeboat and the outside world, the historic lifesaving trail along the southwest coast of Vancouver Island has been abandoned south of Pachena Point; and it is doubtful if the trail from Pachena to Bamfield will continue to be maintained by the marine service of the department of transport, which has its headquarters in distant Ottawa, far from the scene of historic interest.

It has been suggested to the provincial parks branch that a green belt along the coastline from Port Renfrew to the park area in Bamfield should be reserved and included in the park area for the benefit of hikers and others who wish to keep fit by traversing this challenging, but rewarding, route of the shipwrecks.

Plaques could be erected near the site of each shipwreck (and there were over 40 of them) giving details of historic interest regarding the wrecks and, instead of cabins for shipwrecked mariners there could be shelters for hikers at intervals along the trail.

The trail covers an infinite variety of interesting features unequalled elsewhere in western Canada, some of which are: The marine "gardens" at Botanical Beach near Port Renfrew, once the site of the University of Minnesotas' Botanical Seaside Station, which attracted scientists and biologists from all parts of the continent when it was in operation in the early 1900's, numerous creeks, lakes and waterways; Tsusiat Falls, which cascade over an 80-foot cliff to the rocks below; the Hole-In-The-Wall, a great cavern in a promontory of sandstone; blow-holes that hiss and roar like geysers; innumerable caverns and wave-worn rock galleries; sea lions; Pachena lighthouse; Carmanah lighthouse; ancient petroglyphs in a water-level cave near Pachena lighthouse, to say nothing of the awe-inspiring sight of the mighty Pacific Ocean breakers pounding the rocky shoreline with relentless force.

The trail is badly overgrown in places south of Panchena Point and a bosuns' chair across the Klanawa River is now out of commission, the only alternative is to swim across the river, if conditions permit, or to ford it when the river is low and the tide is out.

Some of the ladders built by former linemen to enable them to climb up and down the gorges are rotten and dangerous, and mountaineering equipment may be required to negotiate the gorges.

From Pachena Point to Bamfield, a distance of 10 miles, the trail is kept in fairly good condition. The suspension foot-bridge across Pachena River, three miles out of Bamfield, is a nostalgic reminder of the good old days when hiking was the only means of transportation between points on the west coast.

After crossing the river on the old suspension bridge, which is right alongside the new logging type automobile bridge, one may walk up hill and down dale over the old trail through the forest into Bamfield.

Tall trees, mostly cedar, hemlock and spruce, form the primeval forest on either side of the trail and their leaves filter and scatter the sunlight along the trail. Moss grows on the tree trunks, particularly on the northern side, and the Spanish variety referred to as "old man's beard" trails from branches like draperies, lending an appearance of hoary old age. The branches also harbor clumps of sword ferns growing high up in the trees, for this is a rain forest where moisture is seldom lacking, being provided even in summer by dripping molecules of moisture-laden fog.

The sides of the trail are lined with a variety of plants, mosses and lichens, some of which are bunchberry, or Cornus Canadensis, which is just like a dogwood tree in miniature, and after the white flowers have bloomed in the spring they are followed by a cluster of brilliant red berries which are just as decorative as the flowers; twin-flower, another miniature flower whose stem bears a pair of pink twin flowers like tiny bells, whose flagrance is quite distinctive; kinnikinnick, a trailing shrub with small pink, bell-shaped flowers followed by bright red berries; and many other wild flowers.

Also there are antler moss and various lichens, some of which look like wax matches, and, in the fall, innumerable species of mushrooms and fungi; to say nothing of salal which comprises most of the undergrowth on the west coast of the Island. Its most favored habitat is close to the ocean where it is thicker and higher, growing to a height of 10 or 12 feet. Further inland it tapers off until it becomes low-lying like Oregon grape. Its pinkish bell-shaped flowers give way to black berries which formed an important part of the diet of the Indians.

The southwest coast of Vancouver Island still is much the same as it was when discovered by Spanish and British explorers 200 hundred years ago, and it is a thrill to think that one may tread in places where none has trod before. However, being fairly close to the main centre of population and commercial interests, it is gradually being encroached upon without regard to its historical associations.

Only an enlightened public interest and concerted action can preserve this historic strip of coastline, known as the Graveyard of the Pacific, as a green belt for public enjoyment and as a memorial to those who did not survive the tragic shipwrecks on the coast.
